Senator Borah of Idaho accused the Administration of "stupendous extravagance" in war expenditures. He urged Congress not to vote appropriations without fully acquainting itself with the necessities, and that mere suggestion by the President was not enough to go upon.

"Let me tell the Republican Party in this Senate," said the Idaho Senator, "that the voters who put the party in power again last November will regret that they did it if the party here surrenders to the same power that once dictated the course of the party."

Mr. Borah referred to the "capitalistic element," represented by a group of five packers, as having arranged with Food Administrator Hoover to work off their surplus stocks through the projected $100,000,000 appropriation.

"Mr. Hoover, as evidence before a Senate committee shows, made this agreement before he went to Europe and before he knew that any of the nations there needed food relief," said Mr. Borah.

The Idaho Senator spoke of the war profits of the five great packing firms as "unconscionable." In 1912 their profits, he said, were $18,715,000; in 1913, $20,217,000, and in 1918 they jumped to $95,639,000.

"How did they get it?" asked Borah. "They got it under the administration of Mr. Hoover, and he is still helping them. And he has transferred the same representatives of the packers to Europe that he had with him in his Food Administration. They are in Europe now, dickering to unload the packers' surplus on Europe.

Senator Knox of Pennsylvania remarked that he would vote for an appropriation of $100,000,000 to feed starving Europe if convinced that it was actually for that purpose, but not to help stabilize the American market for the Chicago packers.

Lenroot Criticises "Pomp."

Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin criticised the President's course in traveling in Europe, but said he would vote for the bill.

"If I may be permitted to say it," he said, "the pomp and ceremony that is daily attending the Peace Conference in Paris, in my judgment, is doing almost as much to speed Bolshevism as food can do to prevent it.

"The occurrences at Buckingham Palace, a short time ago, where dinner plate costing $15,000,000 was used, the ostentatious display and bowing and scraping, the emphasizing of class distinctions over there, I say were most unfortunate at this particular stage of the history of the world. I am sorry that President Wilson when he went to Paris did not stay there and attend to the stupendous work in hand."

Senator McLean of Connecticut urged the passage of the bill approving its humanitarian purpose, and also pronouncing it a good investment to bring peace in Europe. Declaring that some Republican opponents had brought in subjects having no bearing on the issue, Senator McLean said that incompetency by the Administration was no reason for refusing to meet the obligations of America abroad.

Townsend Deplores Peace Delay.

Senator Townsend of Michigan criticised President Wilson, declaring that he was virtually the only American Peace Commissioner, and that he was not informing the country regarding his plans. He said that the President's absence was causing neglect of interests at home and delaying emergency legislation. Deprecating delay at the Peace Conference, he said:

"Nothing has been done except private and secret conferences by separate little groups in Europe. I believe the President ought to finish his business of settling the war with Germany and leave all these other questions to be settled later."

The proposed appropriation, the Senator said, "was a bribe to buy the good behavior of Bolshevism," designed to influence the peoples of small nations represented at the Peace Conference.

Senator Myers of Montana said that Germany eventually would be able to obtain peace terms which she did not deserve, and that "then we will be called upon to vote $100,000,000 or more to feed the starving people of Germany."

"The United States is about to assume the role of a great rich uncle to all the world," he continued. "I am opposed to encouraging revolutionists who think they can destroy government and then appeal to Uncle Sam to feed them."

ASSURES FOOD FOR SWISS.

War Trade Board Completes Agreement for Exports.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Arrangements for provisioning the people of the Swiss Confederation, who are said to be on exceedingly short rations, were completed today in an agreement signed by representatives of the War Trade Board, the Swiss Confederation, the Government of France, and the Government of Great Britain.

The board stated that in connection with existing arrangements it is expected that the Swiss will be enabled to obtain a total supply of approximately 800,000 tons of foodstuffs and essential commodities during the ensuing year.

Purchase of the supplies will be under the direction of the Supreme Council of Supply and Relief, the Allied Relief Organization, of which Herbert Hoover is President, although the agreement is declared not to be an integral part of the Supreme Council's relief program.

Specifically the agreement provides that the board will grant licenses for export from the United States to the Swiss of the following commodities up to the amounts indicated:

1. Breadstuff cereals, amounting to 300,000 metric tons, in the following proportions: Wheat, 220,853 tons Rye, 34,333; barley, 44,814.

Other food and feeding stuffs: Oats, 112,000 tons; corn, 137,000; sugar, 96,000; edible fats, 8,000.

This allotment is for the year ending Sept. 30, 1919. Protection against reexportation to the Central Powers is vested in the control of the Société Suisse de Surveillance économique.

DIED IN FAREWELL FLIGHT.

"Hobey" Baker Was on the Eve of Leaving for America.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan 22.—Captain "Hobey" Baker, noted athlete, had been relieved from active service and was about to start on his journey to the United States when he met death in an airplane accident on Dec. 21, according to Lieutenant Edward C. Olds, another Princetonian, who, under date of Dec. 22, wrote friends here from the headquarters of the Second Army as follows:

"I have just returned from Hobey Baker's funeral. It has cast a cloud over the Second Army air service, where he was very well known and liked by officers and men. Knowing how much he has meant in recent years to all Princetonians, I hasten to give you the facts about his death.

"He was to have left last night, Dec. 21, on the 8 o'clock train for Paris on his way home. Forty-five minutes later he was dead. In that time he had motored back to the Toul airdrome, about two miles, and decided to take a final trip in his old speed. However, as luck or fate would have it, there was a ship in the hangar belonging to one of the officers, the engine of which had gone bad a few days ago. It had been repaired, and Captain Baker decided to make his last trip to test out the repaired machine, instead of using his own. He was up only 150 meters when the engine failed."

The writer added that the aviator dropped rapidly, but might have saved his life if he had not tried to go back into the field. There he was crushed to death.

DR. BUTLER LOOKING TO 1920

Most Serious Time in History of the Republic, He Says.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University spoke last night at the regular Wednesday meeting of the Manhattan Republican Club, 474 West 141st Street. His topic was to be "The Next Duty of the Republican Party," but owing to the death of Moses M. McKee, leader of the Twenty-first Assembly District and former President of the Club, on Tuesday night, the meeting became a memorial service, and Dr. Butler, with several other members of the club, spoke of Mr. McKee's service to the party and country.

In speaking of the healthy influence of the local politician upon the affairs of the country, Dr. Butler said that all those who banded themselves together to make plans for carrying on the Government were politicians, and he was proud to be called one in that sense. "We are coming to a time," he continued, "that is more serious than any time in the history of the Republic. In the Presidential election of 1920 we shall be called upon to decide the most momentous issue that has come before us since 1860.

"At that time our fathers had to determine whether the Union should remain intact or should dissolve. In 1896 we faced an issue of the greatest importance. It was a matter of sound currency or unsound currency. But a government can get along for a while at least with unsound currency. However, in 1920 we shall have to make a decision as to whether we are to maintain our American form of government, whether we are to develop and progress along the lines laid down by our fathers, or whether we shall overturn the present form of government and try a new and experimental type of State socialism. We know that the Republicans will be on the side of Americanism, and will be the voice of the forward-looking, forward-stepping democracy, for it stands for advance by evolution and not by revolution."

MEXICO WANTS MONEY.

Secretary of Finance Nieto Coming Here to Obtain Loan.

Rafael Nieto, Under Secretary of Finance of the Mexican Government, it was learned yesterday, is on his way to this country for the purpose of negotiating a loan here. There have been reports for some time that Mexican finances were in an unsatisfactory condition and that some new means of financing would doubtless have to be undertaken. It is known that bankers here have been rather unfavorably inclined toward making any advances to Mexico because of the unsettled conditions in that country.

How large a loan the Carranza Government will endeavor to get in this country can only be approximately estimated. The figures talked of in banking circles yesterday were $400,000,000.

FEDERAL WELCOME FOR TROOPS URGED

WANT UNITY OF ACTION

An appropriation of $250,000 by the city to aid the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to the Homecoming Troops in carrying out its plans will not cause suspension of the work of the Independent Citizens' Committee, organized as a protest against the membership of William Randolph Hearst on the official Committee, and it was announced yesterday that the independent committee would soon make known its plans for greeting the returning troops as they land here.

Through its Chairman, Charles Stewart Davison, the independent committee yesterday suggested to the Secretary of War that a national committee be formed so that the Mayor's committee here would be superseded. A similar request for the formation of a State committee, made two weeks ago, was ignored. The letter to the Secretary of War was in part as follows:

"I am instructed by the Independent Citizens' Committee of Welcome of the City of New York, which is composed of over 100 patriotic and civic organizations and of 2,000 individual citizens of New York, to respectfully call to your attention the general subject of the appropriate welcoming of the troops—soldiers, sailors, and marines—returning from foreign service. It has seemed to the committee that the subject was a broader one than would appear to have been recognized, though I doubt not but that you as the head of the War Department have had it in mind, and it may be that the suggestions of this letter have already been under consideration.

"The troops and wounded naturally arrive in a number of ports and in varying numbers and not in the same groups in which they sailed. The leaving of the general subject to local committees, either official or otherwise, does not produce a consistent result—necessarily cannot do so. Without undertaking to delay you with a recital of details, it appears that the subject would be better handled officially by the Federal Government under the auspices of the War Department than in any other manner.

"The suggestion therefore which it is desired to make is that appropriate steps be taken by Congress under your suggestion, through the adoption of a joint resolution, for the appointment of a Federal committee to have charge of and superintend the matter at large with subordinate Federal committees at appropriate localities so that there may be uniformity of action, and that the numberless petty questions which arise and militate against the subject being dealt with with dignity and propriety may be avoided.

"We feel sure that in the future you will look back with the greater satisfaction to the arduous duties of your important office if you can feel that the nation as a whole welcomed its returning troops—as a preliminary step toward providing for their future welfare—which latter matter is now justly regarded as of great importance, and is occupying the attention of many able minds. The troops themselves will be the better satisfied that their future needs are to be carefully, thoroughly, and intelligently cared for and protected if the matter of their welcoming be under the general national auspices and be but the first step in their reincorporation under proper auspices into the general body of citizens."

Announcement of plans of the independent committee for welcoming the 27th Division and other New York troops, as well as the troops of other States, probably will be made later this week after a meeting of the Executive Committee. Minor committees are being formed now to carry out the details of a program of welcome.

Chicago Welcoming Committee Resents Appointment by Mayor.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Because of Mayor Thompson's appointment of his brother-in-law, William Nelson Pelouze, as head of the committee to entertain returning soldiers a committee appointed by the Association of Commerce for a similar purpose has retired in high dudgeon, leaving the Mayor and his brother-in-law a free field. Tag day funds for the entertainment of homecoming soldiers, $120,000, has been turned in to the City Treasurer, a Democrat, for disbursement.

Mr. Pelouze informed members of his Executive Committee today that he thought the entertainment of soldiers last week by the old committee had been too expensive.

Nests of Infection

The drain pipes of toilet, bath-tub and wash-bowl are nesting places and breeding places for germs. They are also depositories for the germs of any malady their users may have.

Regular disinfection of the bath-room is necessary to prevent disease. You cannot rely upon soap and water cleanliness.

Lysol Disinfectant

CONFEREES RESTORE THEATRE TAX OF 10%

Reject Doubling of Rate Lest It Reduce Attendance and Resultant Yield.

15% IMPOSED ON CLUB DUES

Cabarets and Roof Gardens Also to Pay That Levy—Excess Profit Problem Being Solved.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—As a result of thousands of protests, the conferees on the War Revenue bill voted today to restore the 10 per cent. rate of taxation on admission to theatres, moving picture houses, and similar places of amusement. The action was taken in face of opposition by Representative Kitchin of North Carolina and Representative Fordney of Michigan, who wished to retain the 20 per cent. tax which had been tentatively agreed upon.

While the theatre managers thus won a victory, cabarets, roof gardens, and clubs will have to be content with a compromise. The conferees had agreed on a tentative program which called for a 20 per cent. tax in each instance as compared with the present rate of 10 per cent. It was agreed today to fix the rates at 15 per cent.

Several factors were considered today in coming to a readjustment of the theatre tax. To begin with, the conferees were faced with petitions bearing more than 350,000 names which had been obtained at theatres throughout the country. There also were thousands of telegrams and letters from theatrical organizations, theatre managers, and theatregoers.

There was also submitted the plea that many theatres would be threatened with ruin, and the attendance at theatrical performances so reduced by the additional taxation that it was a serious question whether the revenue to the Government would actually be increased.

The House conferees had estimated that the taxes would be increased from $54,000,000 to about $81,000,000 by the proposed 20 per cent. tax. This was predicated on the theory that attendance at theatres would not be greatly reduced by the increase. The Senate conferees were not ready to admit that was the case.

The decision reached today strikes out also the House proposal to increase the tax on boxes held at the opera or theatre to 25 per cent. and restores the rate of 10 per cent. Where tickets are sold at an advanced price, a tax of 10 per cent. is to be paid on any excess not above 50 cents and where the advance is more than 50 cents, a tax of 50 per cent.

In cabarets, roof gardens, and similar places of amusement where a regular admission is not charged the admission fee will be figured as 20 per cent. of the amount paid for refreshment, service, and merchandise.

While the conferees failed to reach a final agreement today on the schedule of war excess profits taxes payable in 1919, it was reported that financial experts were rewriting parts of the title, and that a decision might be arrived at within the next forty-eight hours. It is understood that the rewritten title will supply a compromise between the so-called 80 per cent. on corporations suggested in the House bill and the lower schedule proposed as a substitute by the Senate conferees.

The only official announcement made today was that the conferees had agreed upon certain changes which had to do wholly with "technical and clerical" features of the title, and that definite action on the other parts of the tax schedule as related to war and excess profits taxes had been deferred.

DEPLORES CABLE CENSORING

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 22.—Continued censorship of the cables "is working incalculable harm to American commerce," Dr. E. E. Pratt of the Committee of Communications of the Council on Foreign Relations of New York said today in an address before the Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Pratt, who was formerly Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, said it was a fair question to put to the highest Government officials "as to exactly why the commerce of the United States should be burdened and restricted by an indiscriminating censorship that assists our competitors and handicaps our own trade."

The whole matter, he said, was shrouded in impenetrable mystery, and that no explanation could be obtained of delays and failures to deliver cables.

"We are told," he said, "that the cable censorship must be continued because the United States has entered into an agreement with the allied nations to keep it in operation until after the signing of the treaty of peace. This agreement, however, does not apply to the use of private codes."

Dr. Pratt said that Secretaries Daniels and Redfield, Postmaster General Burleson, War Trade Board representatives, and other Government officials had recently assured Mark O. Prentiss, manager of the Council of Foreign Relations, that they would do everything in their power to lift the censorship, but that nothing had been done.

THINK THEY HAVE RYAN.

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio, Jan. 22.—A man believed by the police to be Captain John T. Ryan, former officer in the Spanish-American War, of Buffalo, N. Y., who was counsel for Jeremiah A. O'Leary, now awaiting trial for treason, was arrested here today.

Ryan was indicted in New York City by a Federal Grand Jury as an offender against the espionage and neutrality laws of the United States and for aiding German spies.

The prisoner gave his name as Gerard Crowin Leahy. He denied he was Ryan, or that he was the man wanted by the New York authorities. Leahy, the police say, answers all descriptions sent out for the arrest of Ryan. He is being held in the County Jail awaiting word from New York.

According to the police, Leahy was at one time an attorney in Buffalo, N. Y. He said he was formerly a resident of Brazil, and that he had been working recently in the Government hospital at Nitro, W. Va.

The Federal District Attorney here had received no word yesterday that John T. Ryan, long wanted for alleged treasonable activities and indicted on the charge of treason yesterday, had been arrested at Gallipolis, Ohio. It was stated that all information in possession of the Federal authorities here indicated that Ryan was not in the United States, and doubt was expressed as to whether the Ohio authorities had arrested the right man. He was believed to have fled to Mexico.

STATE WILL PRESS PHONE RATE FIGHT

New Rates Will Continue in Effect Pending Action by the Courts.

HILL ANALYZES CHARGES

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 22.—Until its attorneys prepare the necessary papers in its action requesting a mandamus or injunction restraining the New York Telephone Company from carrying out the orders of Postmaster General Burleson regarding the new schedule of telephone rates, the up-State Public Service Commission will take no further action in the matter. In the meantime the new rates will continue in effect.

Chairman Hill said today that neither the Government nor the telephone company had filed any schedule with the commission showing the new tariff, but the commission firmly believed that the company was violating the present law and would fight the matter to the highest court.

In explaining the increase in rates, which he said varied all the way from 20 to 100 per cent. in the various States, Chairman Hill said that the main features of the old and new rates, in comparison, showed station-to-station messages, person-to-person calls, proposed appointment and messenger rate calls, and night rates. The station-to-station rate, he explained, was the basic rate which had heretofore been called the two-number rate. It meant, he said, that a subscriber was supposed to call by number, but a charge was made if he talked with any one, whether the person wanted or not. Chairman Hill continued:

"The person-to-person call is what we have heretofore described as the 'particular person' call, which means that you talk with the particular person called for and no one else. The minimum rate now proposed for this service is 20 cents for an eighteen-mile service, and if the person desired is not found you are charged a minimum of 10 cents up to a maximum of $2.

"Proposed appointment and messenger rate calls begin at 25 cents for an eighteen-mile service and increase according to distance. The charge is made in addition to the actual charge for a messenger. Under the old rate there was no extra charge for appointments and a uniform charge of 15 cents was made for messenger service.

"The new night rates are for station-to-station calls only, and if a particular person is wanted the full day rate for person-to-person calls is charged.

Makes Comparison of Rates.

"To take a particular instance and assuming that distances will be computed between the same starting points, the following shows a comparison of old and new toll rates between Albany and New York City:

	Old Rate.	New Rate.
Station to station.....Not quoted		$0.90
Person to person.....$0.90		1.10
Appointment.....50		1.35
Report charge.....No charge		.20
8:30 to midnight.....Not quoted		.45
Midnight to 4:30 A. M..Not quoted		.25

"The two last items apply to station to station calls only. If a particular person is called the full day rate for person to person is charged. The public generally has become accustomed to two kinds of toll service, the 'two number' for 'short haul' and the 'particular person' for 'long haul.' In the 'short haul' we have a rate of 5 cents for the first eight miles and 5 cents for each additional eight miles. This two number 'short haul' service has generally been applied only to the 5, 10, and 15 cent rates; that is, points where the traffic is heavy, especially between the larger towns within short distances where the service is speeded up by using the call by number only, and if in any instance the person really wanted is not found the loss is only 5, 10, or 15 cents, and in most cases some one is found to do business with.

"In the case of 'long haul' traffic, where the charge is greater, running from 25 cents to several dollars, people want to make sure that they are going to talk with the person they want; so it has become the practice to make all this longer haul traffic on the 'particular person' basis, and if the person is not found no charge is made.

"In the new order of things the Postmaster General puts in a 'two number' rate extending to all distances. This is exactly the same as the old 'particular person' rate, except for the first four steps, where the charge is 5 cents for the first six miles, 10 cents for the second six miles, 15 cents for the third six miles, 20 cents for the fourth six miles, and then follows the old step of 5 cents for each eight miles additional. This has the effect of making a slightly higher rate for a less satisfactory service in the short haul.

"A considerable increased rate is charged for all of the 'long haul' business under the 'particular person' basis, and on top of this a charge is made for using the wires, even though the person called for is not found and no conversation is held. This 'report charge' was tried out many years ago and abandoned by the corporations because it caused so much irritation. People do not like to pay something for what they consider nothing.

"Under the old rates an appointment might be made without extra charge for two reasons to talk at a certain time. Under the new scheme an extra charge is made for this kind of service, which is considerably above the new 'particular person' rate. This extra charge is also applied where it is necessary to call a non-subscriber by messenger, plus the actual messenger fee. The old rates made no extra charge for calling non-subscribers to the telephone, but made a uniform charge of 15 cents for the messenger service.

"The night rates give a 50 per cent. cut between 8:30 P. M. and midnight and a 75 per cent. cut between midnight and 4:30 A. M. A good deal has been made of this in the newspaper reports, but the public will be disappointed when it finds that it must use the 'two number' basis to get the benefit of this reduction, and if a 'particular person' is sought must pay full day rate. We cannot expect that the night rates will be used for business purposes, and only to a limited extent for social purposes. Night rates at half the day rate were tried out by the corporations many years ago and abandoned as unprofitable."

Government Control Attacked.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 22.—Governor James P. Goodrich of Indiana today placed the resources of his office back of the fight of the Indiana Public Service Commission against the new long-distance telephone rates ordered by Postmaster General Burleson. After a conference with the Commissioners and representatives of the department of the Attorney General of Indiana, Governor Goodrich issued a statement in which he criticised Government control of wire communication systems and Postmaster General Burleson's action. The statement concluded:

"The country, at least the great central part of it, as evidenced by the interest neighboring States are taking in the matter, demands there be an end to advancing either personal or political plans for nationalization of utilities under the guise of war measures, and also an end to deception of various kinds of which Mr. Burleson's is a fine example."

The new rates are not being collected in Indiana because of a temporary restraining order issued by Judge A. B. Anderson of the United States District Court.

Vermont Opposes Federal Control.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Jan. 22.—The Public Service Commission today went on record as opposed to continuance of Federal operation of railroad, telephone and telegraph systems and to Federal regulations fixing intrastate rates for service on such systems.

Opposition by Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Jan. 22.—The Pennsylvania Public Service Commission last night ordered counsel to proceed against telephone companies which have advanced rates by order of the Postmaster General. The action will be either in the courts or before the commission. The proceedings will be started within a few days and will be of a sweeping character.

MANY ADVANCES IN RATES.

High Percentage of Increases in "Person-to-Person" Charges.

The contention of the Public Service Commission for the Second District of New York that Postmaster General Burleson's so-called reduction in telephone rates really constitutes a steep increase in the cost of communication for the business man was further supported yesterday by an analysis of long-distance tolls. Twenty-three long-distance toll rates from all points of the country, figured on a table of computation furnished by the telephone company, disclosed nineteen points where the rates have been advanced, one where no change one way or the other was made, and three where decreases, small in comparison to the increases, were effected.

Although on the face of the figures supplied from the office of Mr. Burleson the cuts in station-to-station rates would on cursory examination give the impression of great economies, the high percentages of the increases in the person-to-person rate, "particular person," calls as they are termed, will strike directly and hard at business.

"On the station-to-station rate, if you call a firm in Chicago, get it, and then ask for a particular person, but find he is out, you have to pay for the call," said a telephone official yesterday. "On the other hand, if you put in a call for Mr. So and So of the Chicago firm, and inquiry establishes that he is not at the office, no charge is made. For this reason, practically all firms use the person-to-person call, and under the new rates, unless one wishes to take the chance of paying for a call that doesn't accomplish its purpose, firms will have to pay the increased person-to-person rate."

6,392 TROOPS BACK; SAW MUCH SERVICE

MANY HAVE SEVERE WOUNDS

Two transports arrived yesterday from France, the American steamship Manchuria and the British steamship Cretic, and brought a total of 6,392 troops, which included a good percentage of sick and wounded.

The Cretic brought back the 55th United States Coast Artillery, who were mostly from Boston, and many of their friends were at the White Star pier and others went down the Bay on the police boat Patrol to welcome their boys home. The regiment was commanded by Colonel John I. Roberts, formerly an officer in the old 7th of New York. In addition to the artillerymen, the Cretic had 210 wounded on board, of whom 52 were stretcher cases, and had to be carried to the transfer steamboat Shinnecock, which conveyed them to the General Debarkation Hospital at Ellis Island.

Many of the wounded belonged to the 7th, 12th, 23d, 47th, 71st, and some from Squadron A, all of the 27th Division, and the majority of them have their homes in New York or Brooklyn. Some of the men who lined the rail of the Cretic as she was hauled into Pier 59 were without a leg, an arm, or an eye, but they were all happy and glad to get back home.

"I was busy cutting the German barbed wires," he said, "when a shell dropped and took off my left leg and broke the other one. Private Chauncey Entrett of Ogdensburg rushed up to me with a stretcher, but just then a second shell came and smashed his left leg, so that he was nearly as helpless as I was myself. Four German prisoners were ordered to carry us to the nearest field hospital, and by that time I was nearly exhausted from the loss of blood. The surgeon asked if any one would volunteer to let me have a little blood to save my life, and Private P. J. Chinock of the 11th Australian Ambulance Corps, a bronzed and brawny six-footer, rolled back his khaki sleeves and told the surgeon to go to it. Nearly a quart of blood from the boy's arm was transfused into me, and it saved my life. I have written to him several times and thanked him, but that does not mean so very much."

Secretary Baker's Brother Returns.

Another passenger on board the Celtic was Major Frank A. Baker, a brother of the Secretary of War, who had been stationed with the Headquarters of the Quartermaster's Department at Tours. He admitted that the camp at Brest was bad, but said that the army was doing its best in the haste to rush the troops back home.

The transport Manchuria had 4,557 troops on board, which included the 115th and 117th Field Artillery, Headquarters of the 55th Artillery Brigade, the 106th Ammunition Train, Headquarters of the 53d Infantry Brigade, training cadres from the 31st Division, and 956 sick and wounded. All the artillery are of the 31st Division, and the men hail chiefly from Florida, Alabama, and Georgia. Many of the wounded wear the French War Cross and Distinguished Conduct medals for bravery on the battle field.

There were two deaths from pneumonia on the voyage home—Sergeant William J. Phillips of the Headquarters Company of the 55th, whose home was at Tamaqua, Penn., and Private Frederick G. Guyette of the 55th, from Wisconsin.

Despite the fact that the 55th Artillery Regiment saw heavy fighting and fired 32,678 rounds of ammunition, its losses were surprisingly small. Only 13 men were killed, 18 died of disease, and there were 61 wounded who did not die during its campaign. It was assigned to the First Army, and was part of the 31st Heavy Artillery Brigade, of which the 96th is from Connecticut and the 67th from New York. The regiment, then in command of Colonel James F. Howell, sailed from New York on the Mauretania in March of last year, trained at Clermond-Farrano Training Camp in France, and came to the battle front at the "crucial hour of the Allies' cause," according to the regiment's historian, who was among the returned soldiers. They were cited by both the French and the American commanding officers.

Lieutenant Paul E. Boomer of Beaver Dam, Wis., of the 12th Machine Gun Battery, was gassed on Oct. 9 and hit with seven shrapnel bullets in the St. Mihiel front when he rescued a French officer lying helpless about 150 yards out in No Man's Land under a heavy machine gun fire. In spite of his wounds, Boomer managed to get the French officer back into the American lines, for which he was cited twice and given the Croix de Guerre.

Another wounded officer was Lieutenant Earl P. Sherry of St. Louis, attached to the 77th Field Artillery and later to the 32d Mortar Battery, who has fought on all fronts in France and Flanders and was wounded in the cheek by a high-explosive bullet, which tore out the roof of his mouth. He was eleven hours in the ambulance before the stretcher bearers, because of the continuous heavy firing from the enemy's big guns, could get him to the field hospital.

Second Lieut. F. V. Collins of Company I, 7th Infantry, said that in four weeks of fighting in the Argonne his regiment lost 33 officers and 85 per cent. of its men in casualties. "We are coming back 35 men to the company," he added.

SOLDIERS HELD IN COURT.

Accused by Tailor of Robbing Him, Assisted by Civilian.

John Huetenin, 50 years old, a tailor, says he was returning to his home at 615 Third Avenue Tuesday night and was about to open the front door when two men said to be soldiers entered the vestibule, followed by a third man, who appeared to be a civilian. He said he called for help twice, and was about to call a third time when he was struck on the head and lost consciousness. Patrolman George Gill of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station corroborated the story to the extent of having seen three men run out of the vestibule. When he drew his revolver the men stopped and were locked up, charged with robbery.

When arraigned in the Yorkville Court yesterday they gave their names as George Williams, 20 years old, of 2,480 Carleton Avenue, Brooklyn; John Murray, 22 years old, of 50 Gouverneur Street, and John Lee, 27 years old, of the same address. Both Lee and Murray were in uniform, and both had overseas stripes on their arms. They were held in $1,500 bail each for the Grand Jury. Magistrate Douras said to the men in uniform:

"Almost every one looks with leniency on a uniform, and there are a lot of soldiers who have been mustered out going around in their military clothes as camouflage and committing crimes of various kinds. This should be stopped."

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The body of an American policeman was found today near the railroad at Tournus, in the Department of Saône-et-Loire.

Wounds on the head indicated that he had been murdered.

Creel

From the instant George Creel was appointed by President Wilson as "Censor" and chief of American propaganda he has been the subject of bitter and constant attack. Whatever you think of Creel, the storm of disapproval he has aroused is proof of activity on his part. However he may have done it the task he was given to do is one of the biggest and most important ever asked of an American citizen.

Everybody's Magazine has lifted the curtain and makes public the story of what Creel's department did in the war—told by George Creel himself.

"America's Fight for World Opinion," by Mr. Creel in the February Everybody's, is an amazing disclosure of the scope and intensity of America's propaganda in every country in the world.

Creel tells how the truth was at last made to penetrate into Germany; how countless thousands of circulars were dropped on German territory from the sky; how the German grip on the moving picture industry of neutral countries was broken; how Italians in America choked the cables in a successful attempt to bring back the Italian morale after the Caporetta disaster; how Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, despite raids on her headquarters and every other kind of attack, by indomitable courage and great ability changed the public opinion of an entire nation.

Creel tells the whole story of America's world-wide propaganda; how it was done and what was accomplished. It is the first of a series of three articles written by Mr. Creel for Everybody's, and it is a narrative to be read with unabated interest by every American. Do not miss it in the February Everybody's now on sale.

DECLARES BURLESON UNDERMINED POSTAL

Reynolds Says Employes Were Allowed to Enroll in Organization of Rival.

CONTRADICTED BY LAMAR

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The accusation that Postmaster General Burleson authorized the enrollment of Postal Telegraph and Cable Company employes in an organization or Western Union employes, thereby destroying the morale of the Postal forces, was made today to the House Committee on Postoffices by Edward Reynolds, who was dismissed by Mr. Burleson from the post of Vice President and General Manager of the Postal system.

Solicitor William H. Lamar of the Postoffice Department, denied the charge, saying that Mr. Burleson was not concerned about the organizations the employes belonged to, but was determined to retain to himself the right of settling wage disputes without being coerced by the labor bodies.

The acrimony between the Postoffice Department and the Postal Company and between certain of the committee members themselves was again apparent today in the hearing. Judge Moon, Chairman of the committee and author of the bill to extend the period of Federal control over the wires, withdrew the charge of "treason" he yesterday laid against Mr. Reynolds on the ground that the telegraph company official had not supported Mr. Burleson's steps in taking over the wires.

Representative McKinley of Illinois launched an independent move against the Postmaster General by introducing a resolution demanding that as Mr. Burleson is holding the wires "only to his own will and pleasure," and has raised rates until they are "burdensome, onerous, and unjust," both matters should be investigated by a Congressional special committee.

Reynolds Accuses Burleson.

The accusation that Mr. Burleson allowed the Western Union employes to enroll Postal men was made when Mr. Reynolds stated:

"About Aug. 1 the Postmaster General issued an order authorizing the enrollment of Postal employes in the Western Union employes' organization that could result in nothing but the breaking down of the morale of our men."

"There was no such order," interrupted Judge Lamar.

"The officers of that association," continued Mr. Reynolds, "came here and were authorized to enroll our men. They went to New York and did not see me, but went to one of our subordinate heads with their proposal and took him out to lunch."

By this time Judge Lamar and Mr. Reynolds were constantly interrupting each other. The Post Office Department, Solicitor was insisting that the only interest the Postmaster General had in labor matters was that he should handle the wage settlements and not be dictated to by labor organizations.

Mr. Reynolds recited an instance in which he said there was an endeavor by Western Union employes in New Orleans to enroll Postal men.

"I wrote to the Postmaster General," he said, "that this was an impossible situation. But he never acknowledged the letter. Later I heard from one of our men that a Western Union employe told him there would be no Postal employes and he had better 'get on the band-wagon' and join the organization. I wrote that, too, to the Postmaster General, but got no answer."

The witness charged that a "horde of Western Union secret service men" had been going through Postal offices, "sowing the seeds of fear among our men to break down their morale."

"The labor men tried to do the same thing when the wires were taken over. I mention here the Konenkamp letters, recently offered in evidence," said Judge Lamar, who asked Mr. Reynolds if he had any proof that the Post Office Department was trying to "undermine" the Mackay companies.

"It's very hard to define, but I know what's in the men's minds, and my dismissal emphasized their fear," was the answer.

Duplicity, Lamar Asserts.

"Did you think," asked Judge Lamar, "you could continue your duplicity and continue in the service of the Government?"

Mr. Reynolds spoke of "underground" methods, and Judge Lamar hurried to characterize this allegation as "unjustified, unwarranted, and untrue." He said he knew what the Wire Committee had been doing, and that nothing such as Mr. Reynolds alleged had been done.

"Your conduct in regard to the letter you wrote, first suggesting changes and later protesting against aiding the Government, shows that the Post Office Department made no mistake in not consulting you," Solicitor Lamar declared.

Mr. Reynolds contended that to the Mackay companies was due pay, not alone for the physical value of the property, but for the good will. He reiterated the Postal's contention that the Western Union has received more in compensation from the Government than it earned last year.

On motion of Judge Moon, Judge Lamar, who was present all day, took up the questions, asking:

"You say you were dismissed Dec. 1 by the Postmaster General. Did you not talk with him before that and make recommendations?"

"I think I did the listening, he made a stump speech," answered Mr. Reynolds.

There was an altercation between witness and examiner in which some members took the side of Mr. Reynolds and some that of Judge Lamar, who later took the stand and who was asked by Representative Azera of Massachusetts if the telegraph operators' strike impending last Summer had anything to do with the seizure of the wires. Judge Lamar said no.

"There is no basis for any charge that the Postmaster General had not kept faith with labor; he made no promises," said Judge Lamar later on in the day.

The Solicitor introduced a witness from the statistical department of the Interstate Commerce Commission to prove that the subsidiaries of the MacKay companies had sworn to their actual value, and not their "nominal" as Mr. Reynolds said yesterday. Mr. Reynolds stuck to his contention.

Would Drop Girl Bellhops Now.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—A movement to displace girl "bellhops" in hotels which employed them because of the war labor shortage was begun today by A. B. T. Moore, National Secretary of the Gideons. Acting on a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the organization, Mr. Moore today addressed a letter to the American Hotel Men's Protective Association, pointing out that the necessity for intensive use of female help has passed and urging that the girl "buttons" be released from these positions, which, he said, subjects them to improper moral influences.

New Telephone Toll Rates

Effective January 21, 1919

In accordance with the order of the Postmaster General, dated December 13, 1918, new schedules of rates for telephone toll calls (to points outside the local service area) under which all toll calls throughout the United States are placed on a uniform basis, become effective 12:01 a. m., January 21, 1919.

Under these new schedules the "station to station" rate is the base rate upon which all rates for the various classes of service offered, are computed. This rate is determined by the air line distance between toll points and is computed, for the initial period, on the basis of 5c. for each 6 miles up to 24 miles and 5c. for each 8 miles beyond that distance.

For toll calls where the calling party does not specify a particular person to be reached at the called telephone, the "station to station" rate is charged. This method provides the cheapest and quickest form of telephone toll service.

"Station to station" calls must be made as far as possible by giving the telephone number of the called telephone. Where the number is not known and telephone directory information is not available, the number should be obtained from "Information," or if the called telephone is at a distant point, the name and address of the called subscriber should be given to the toll operator.

For toll calls where the calling party specifies a particular person to be reached at the called telephone and the connection is established and conversation held with that person, the "person to person" rate is charged. As this service requires a greater amount of operating effort, the rate for such calls is about one-fourth greater than the "station to station" rate. (Minimum "person to person" rate 20c.)

For toll calls on a "person to person" basis, where the calling party, in placing the call, designates a definite time at which he will talk and the conversation is held, the "appointment" rate is charged. As this service involves the making of the appointment in addition to the operating effort necessary for a "person to person" call, the "appointment" rate is about one-half greater than the "station to station" rate. (Minimum "appointment" rate 25c.)

For toll calls made on a "person to person" basis where messenger service is required to secure attendance of the designated person at the called telephone, the "messenger call" rate applies. This rate is the same as the "appointment" rate, plus any necessary charge for messenger service. (Minimum "messenger call" rate 25c.)

In connection with all toll calls other than those made on a "station to station" basis where the connection is established but the conversation is not held, because of any reason beyond the control of the telephone company a "report charge" is made equivalent to about one-fourth of the "station to station" rate. (Minimum "report charge" 10c., maximum $2.00.)

Reduced rates, applying only to calls made on a "station to station" basis are quoted for toll service between the hours of 8:30 p. m. and 4:30 a. m. The rate between 8:30 p. m. and 12 midnight is about one-half the "station to station" day rate, and between 12 midnight and 4:30 a. m. about one-fourth the "station to station" day rate. The minimum night rate is 25c. Where the "station to station" day rate is 25c. or less no reduction is made for night service.

For the purpose of applying reduced rates, for evening and night "station to station" service, the time of day at the calling point is used.

Day rates apply on all calls other than those made on a "station to station" basis, whether they are made during the day, evening, or night.

This does not change the rates for, or the handling of, calls within the local service area, or within the City of New York.

RUSSIAN ECONOMIC LEAGUE

The Russian Economic League, founded by Russian business men at present living in New York, learns from newspaper reports with deep feeling of anguish and regret of the proposal to admit to the Peace Conference as representatives of Russia the agents of the so-called Bolshevist "Government."

Such an act of unfriendliness towards all loyal and true to the Allies elements of the Russian people, can be explained in two ways only: either by a monstrous misunderstanding; or by an intentional unwillingness on the part of the authors of this proposal even in some future time to see Russia great again, united and free, instead of divided, weakened and deprived of significance and a worthy voice among the nations of the world.

The League indignantly rejects the thought even of the possibility of this last explanation being the true one and can only adhere to the first one, namely an astounding ignorance of the world's public opinion as to the real nature of Russian Bolshevism.

The League finds it necessary first of all to point out the significant fact that all such persons as come forward with praise to Bolshevist ideas, invariably start with the emphatic assurance that they themselves are not Bolsheviks.

This phenomena of course has its roots either in the desire to emphasize their supposed disinterestedness or in the tacit avowal of exceptional baseness combined with that Bolshevism which for other reasons the advocates of Bolshevism are eager to exculpate and to exalt.

In Bolshevism it is necessary to distinguish two different sides; firstly, phraseology and secondly, an indescribably abominable practice.

There is no denying the exceptional talents of the leaders of Bolshevism in phraseology. Having been for scores of years put aside from practical work by the Russian Imperial Government, the Russian revolutionary workers have to an extraordinary degree developed their faculties in the use of speech.

The building up of theoretical schemes of universal happiness on earth, although these schemes absolutely disagree with the real conditions of life and actually contradict them, being at the same time, however, of extraordinary beauty and enticement, is no doubt one of the foremost qualities of the Russian Bolshevik theorists.

It cannot be denied that some of them believe in the utopia they themselves have created. Even more, their almost religious belief in their own doctrines has led them into the abyss of moral degradation, in which they have fallen, dragging down with them our entire great country.

The trouble was, when they reached a position making it practically possible for them to realize their ideals, they encountered the fact that actually all the educated classes in Russia were in the camp of their adversaries.

They, however, did not for a moment doubt the righteousness of their theoretical inventions and did not hesitate to quiet their conscience with the accusation of the Russian intelligent classes, in what they said was egotism of class and to begin to make Russia happy on the Bolshevist plan, against the will of the majority.

This first deal with conscience was the beginning of the moral downfall of Bolshevism.

Encountering the firm refusal of the educated class of Russia to abet communistic experimentalizing, they could do nothing else, but begin speculating on the very lowest instincts of the population, and to seek the support of the scum of the people, of everything morally weak, or even openly criminal.

In fact the ranks of Bolshevism and its camouflage, the Soviets, did not only include in corpore the whole of the so-called "black hundred" and the hideous agents of political research, but all such people as had an irresistible desire for a fat living without the corresponding work and talents, all who had long ago lost their conscience.

Among this gang, composed of the scum of human society, the Bolshevist theorists entirely disappear. It is left to them to write fly leafs, which are styled decrees of the Russian Government, but which are put into practice only inasmuch as they serve to sanctify the beastly appetites of the Bolshevist masses.

This literature of decrees, as well as the diplomatic overtures of the Bolsheviks serve only for catching the simple minded foreigners who cannot grasp the idea that anybody could go so far in prostituting human thoughts and words as is done by the Bolshevik leaders.

The practical work of the Bolsheviks, as it appears in Russia, is done not by them but by more "businesslike" elements of the Bolshevist party.

The theorists bluff the world with the highness of their ideals and the practitioners in the meantime organize the All-Russian gangs of thieves and robbers.

The theorists in their irresistible thirst for power try to build the ideological fundament under the destructive work they do in order to satisfy their political ambitions and the practitioners under the banging of highly socialistic and "democratic" watch words build up from their lines a new class of bourgeoisie only one having for basis of its riches not labor and talent, but the most openfaced robbery.

There is some reason for the singular new "sport on sables," which has spread in places where the Bolshevist Government has been liquidated. The population of these places makes a regular occupation of systematic shooting of the fleeing Bolsheviks, explaining this sport by the words that it is more profitable to kill a Bolshevik than a sable, as unfailingly he has on his person not less than 10,000 to 20,000 roubles and sometimes much more.

The public opinion of the world, fascinated as it is by the revolutionary phraseology of the Bolshevist theorists, is not inclined to heed the lessons of history. The phenomenon of Bolshevism, such as it really is and not such as it is depicted by the theorists, is not new to the world. Towards the end of the French revolution and before the coming of Napoleon, France was likewise infected by gangs of robbers and these gangs also hid themselves behind the banners of beautified politics. The only difference is that the French Bolsheviks did not have talented organizers uniting their forces and justifying in theory robbery and violence. France brought forth not a Trotsky but a Napoleon.

In spite of all the high flowing revolutionary phrases or rather under their roar, the Russian people have been so much "liberated" from all rights, not only political ones, but the very elementary human rights, that with good reason they begin to recall to memory even the Czar's regime as something that is worthy of envy and regret, as a lost paradise.

It needs only a slight impulse to see Russia drop back into the most violent reaction.

The Russian Economic League cannot of course make so light of historical events as to satisfy itself with an explanation that a licentious mob composed of the scum of the town populations has found leaders and ideologists full of temper and talent.

There can be no denial that the causes of sympathies for Bolshevism root much deeper than this in the great mistakes and even crimes of the bourgeois order of things (not being, however, connected with the nature of it) in its lack of care for the lower classes, and finally in the cruel sufferings brought on by the war in the perversion of human psychology, in the taste for atrocities raised by the war in the masses and, in their belief, in the efficacy of violent methods.

The masses have been attracted to Bolshevism as the representative of the most radical turn of human thought, hoping to escape from the distressing reality into the realm of ultra-revolutionary dreams.

There is no doubt, however, that the happiness of humanity cannot be attained by idling and destroying, but only by constructive activity, by incentives to and development of labor, talents, creative genius and initiative.

Awaiting when and how this help will take form, the Russian Economic League cannot but loudly give expression to its sentiment that it could not even imagine that help to Russia could take the form of admitting the theorists of Bolshevism to the world's tribune, from which to preach their corrupting lies, and of allowing the practitioners of Bolshevism "a breathing space" for the further strengthening of their "organization."

The Russian Economic League cannot forget that as attested by the most authoritative observers of Russian life, who personally took part in the heroic struggle with the Bolsheviks and the Germans, a military force of ten to twenty thousand disciplined and suitably provided men would have sufficed to take Moscow last summer, and that the same object now requires over 150,000 men.

The Russian Economic League considers it its civic duty to the Allies once more to remind them of the handwriting on the wall: Russian Bolshevism is a danger to the civilization of the world.

The experience of the Russian political parties who tried to treat Bolshevism as a certain kind of honest political creed, which can be made compromises with and can be opposed by parliamentary means, has, in the opinion of the Russian Economic League, shown only too clearly by the tragic end of the Russian Empire that Bolshevism cannot exist at the same time as civilization and democratic ideals.

For Russia the last days are nearing when the help of the world's democracies may still be able to save for her the idea of democracy.

Russia, by the efforts of the Bolsheviks, is already brought to the threshold of the most sweeping reaction, and, following upon this, of such international combinations, which will essentially oppose and menace the interests of really democratic nations.

CAPTAIN ELLSWORTH IS CITED FOR BRAVERY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The War Department issued another list of names today of American soldiers in France who have received the Distinguished Service War Cross from General Pershing for extraordinary heroism in action. Among those in the latest list of citations are:

Lieutenant R. L. Finch of Tempe, Ariz.; Lieutenant Levi Sterens of Alpena, Mich.; Captain A. C. Rubel of Greensburg, Ind.; Lieutenant J. M. Richardson of Uniontown, Ala.; Sergeant H. W. Flesher of Cleveland, Ohio; Sergeant P. A. Smithhisler of Mount Vernon, Ohio; Private W. O. L. Multer of Washington, Penn.; Captain M. C. Overton of Unionport, Ga.; Lieutenant J. A. West of Cincinnati, Ohio; Lieutenant R. S. Landstreet of Baltimore, Md.; Captain H. L. Thompson of Columbia, S. C., and M. H. Chiles of Denver, Col.

One of those mentioned in the list issued today is a Brigadier General whose name and address and specific act of bravery together with those of the three New Yorkers in the list follows:

Brig. Gen. Benjamin A. Poore, 7th Infantry Brigade; for repeated acts of extraordinary heroism at Bois de Septsarges, on Sept. 27, and at Bois de Fays, on Oct. 11. At Bois de Septsarges on Sept. 27 he personally re-formed his disorganized troops, who were falling back through lack of command and because of severe casualties. Under heavy fire he led them to the lines and presented an unbroken front to the enemy. Again, on Oct. 11, in the region of Bois de Fays, he gathered together troops who were taking refuge from hostile fire and turned them over to the support commander. Home address, Mrs. B. A. Poore, 126 East Moorehead Street, Charlotte, N. C.

Capt. Bradford Ellsworth, 306th Infantry; for extraordinary heroism in action near La Besace, on Nov. 5. He displayed great courage by leading a mounted reconnaissance patrol a kilometer in advance of our lines, developed the enemy's line by drawing fire from his machine guns, and remained under this heavy machine-gun fire until the emplacements had been located. Home address, Mrs. Juliet Innes Ellsworth, wife; 145 East Fifty-second Street, New York, N. Y.

Sergt. William Mohrman, Headquarters Company, 307th Infantry; for extraordinary heroism in action near St. Pierremont, on Nov. 4. After passing through a heavily bombarded area Sergeant Mohrman learned that a soldier of his platoon had been wounded and had fallen in the shelled area. He at once volunteered, and went back for him, assisted in bringing him to a place of safety, and later helped to carry him through another shelled area to the first-aid station. Home address, John Mohrman, 170 Chauncey Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Sergt. Abraham Belefant, Headquarters Company, 307th Infantry; for extraordinary heroism in action near St. Pierremont, Nov. 4. After passing through a heavily bombarded area Sergeant Belefant learned that a soldier of his platoon had been wounded and had fallen in the shelled area. He at once volunteered, and went back for him, assisted in bringing him to a place of safety, and later helped to carry him through another shelled area to the first-aid station. Home address, Mrs. Mary Belefant, mother, 511 Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

When you take home a beefsteak

you are not making your wife a present. You are taking her the raw material of a dinner for you both.

When you take her the Woman's Home Companion you are not taking her something for her own exclusive pleasure or profit. You are taking her something that will benefit both.

The sole reason for the success of the Woman's Home Companion has been its ability to deal with the infinite problems of successful home-making in the widest sense.

And successful home-making is a question in which every husband is deeply and unavoidably interested.

You can no more be indifferent to the atmosphere of your home than you can be indifferent to the weather.

You can no more escape your share of responsibility than you can avoid your taxes.

It is just as much your duty to supply expert help and advice as it is to supply food and furniture.

Therefore, see that your wife is supplied regularly with the Woman's Home Companion.

See to it that she knows that you know the value of the service which the Companion offers.

"Good Looks," a "beauty" department that tells how to preserve and enhance one's good looks in natural, sensible and healthful ways.

"Interesting Corner Arrangements," a page of pictures showing how to make an ideal spot for a tired man to read and smoke, which also adds to the furnishing of the room.

"If I Should Lose My Voice," says Geraldine Farrar, "I could be a saleswoman, sempstress, nurse, chauffeur, but not a waitress."

Roland Phillips has gone to France to find out about boys whose families have not heard from them, and report through the Companion.

BAKER AND HIS POTENT CUDGEL ARE LIKELY TO JOIN YANKEES' HEAVY ARTILLERY

FRANK BAKER NOT UNTRUE TO YANKS

New York Third Baseman Has Not Signed with Upland in Outlaw League.

PLANS FOR TRAINING TRIP

Manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees received good news yesterday when he learned that Home Run Baker had not signed a contract to play with the Delaware outlaw league. Huggins's informant talked with Baker yesterday, and said the player denied the yarn that he had signed to play with the Upland Club. In the talk which Huggins had with Baker a few weeks ago the third baseman told him that he would take no definite action without first consulting the New York Club.

While Baker's big contract with the Yankees expired last season, it is believed that the player and club will get together on a new contract which will be satisfactory to both parties. Baker led the Yankees at the bat last season, and his hitting strength would be a big loss to the team. Huggins expects to hear from the player in a few days, and he feels certain that the home run slugger will be with the club when it goes South in March.

Manager Huggins talked over the plans for the training trip yesterday, and he will gather his players at Jacksonville, Fla., about March 24. His large staff of twenty-six pitchers will not report before the other players, for Huggins has decided that there is little to be gained by getting the hurlers at work before the other members of the squad.

The deal between the Yanks and Cleveland is still pending and something may develop to swing the trade whereby outfielder Bobby Roth will come to New York. Huggins has offered either pitcher Allan Russell or Ray Fisher and an outfielder, but Manager Fohl seems to want nothing less than one of the pitchers that Huggins is anxious to keep.

Huggins expects to do some wholesale weeding out of players at the Jacksonville camp, for he has more players than he can ever hope to use. He is in a position to furnish other clubs with promising young players, and before the club comes North he expects to be able to trade some of them for more seasoned material.

Manager Huggins said yesterday that he was not in favor of making any long jumps on the trip home. As Brooklyn has practically decided to train in Florida, the Yankees will play some exhibition games with the Dodgers in Southern cities. It is not certain whether the usual series between the Yanks and Dodgers will be played next Spring, as Brooklyn will have to open the preliminary National League season in Boston on Patriots' Day, April 19. The Yanks will book games in several of the Southern cities and take the trip homeward by easy stages.

Dean Academy, at Franklin, Mass., is going to hold memorial exercises on Feb. 21 for former students who made the supreme sacrifice in the war. One of these is Captain Eddie Grant, formerly baseman of the Giants. The Academy authorities have asked the New York Club to send representatives to take part in the exercises.

Secretary John B. Foster announced yesterday that Captain William Harrigan, who was with Captain Grant in the Argonne Forest when he was killed, would make one of the addresses, while the club will also send one of its players to talk on Grant's baseball career. Manager McGraw is also going to suggest to the National League that some sort of a memorial be erected at the Polo Grounds for Captain Grant.

Ban Johnson, President of the American League, was in Washington yesterday in connection with his efforts to get baseball players out of the army in time for the Spring training and preparation for the coming season. He took with him a list of players, and War Department officials undertook to locate the men for him in order that the clubs might arrange to have them file applications for discharge.

Mr. Johnson conferred with General March, Chief of Staff. So far as known, there will be no change in the policy of the department not to issue any special order in favor of baseball players, but to treat them as all other soldiers are treated and leave it to their immediate commanders to pass upon their applications for discharge. Since the league players have their places awaiting them, however, they fall within the class of soldiers commanding officers have been authorized to discharge without delay where military efficiency would not be injured by that action.

The Cleveland Club will train in New Orleans again this Spring. Members of the Indians will probably go South in two squads. Manager Fohl leaving with his pitchers before the other players. No exhibition games will be played on the way North, it was announced. After a month's training the team will leave New Orleans about April 20, going direct to Detroit for the opening game April 23.

Tim Hendryx, outfielder, and Ray Friday, pitcher, were released yesterday by the St. Louis Browns to the Louisville American Association Club. Hendryx went to the Browns last season from the Yankees. Friday was with the Mobile Club last year.

Annapolis Takes Eleventh Straight Game in Beating Georgetown.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 22.—Georgetown surprised the midshipmen this afternoon with their aggressiveness and good passing and the Navy lads had the greatest difficulty in winning, 22 to 13. It was the eleventh straight victory for the local five. The midshipmen entered the game with Lewis and Deringer, two of their best, on the bench.

After Georgetown got the jump and scored five points, the full strength was marshaled and the midshipmen gradually caught up, the half ending 11 to 8 in their favor. The game was a rough one and two midshipmen and two Georgetown players were banished.

HELLUM GOES TO NORWAY.

Pentathlon Winner Came Here to Learn Our Athletic Methods.

John Hellum, former Pastime A. C. all-around athlete, has left this country for his home in Norway. Hellum sailed Tuesday on the Scandinavian-American Line steamship Oscar II. The departure of the former Pastime A. C. athlete means his retirement from amateur track and field competition. Hellum, soon after his arrival in Norway, will take up a position of Government instructor in athletics.

Hellum was sent here by the Norwegian Government and the Thalve A. C. expressly for the purpose of studying American methods of athletic training. Part of this training course included Hellum's active participation in American competition, to familiarize himself with conditions. It was originally planned to have Hellum attend Columbia University and Yale. The Norwegian star did put in a period of studying at Columbia, but was compelled to forego his intended visit to Yale.

Hellum arrived in this country Dec. 27, 1917. He won the pentathlon championship, the metropolitan senior discus throwing title, and finished fourth in the senior national javelin throwing competition. These performances were the outstanding lights in the Norwegian star's local athletic career. The pentathlon title was gained by Hellum Aug. 18 at Celtic Park. Against a field of ten rivals Hellum returned the low-winning score of 13 points for the five events which made up the test.

HOLLYWOOD FIVE UNDER BAN

Registration Brings Charges of Professionalism Against Them.

E. Wetmore Kingsley of the Hollywood Inn A. A. was cited yesterday to appear before the Metropolitan A. A. U. Registration Committee at its next meeting to answer charges of sponsoring a professional basketball team in the Hollywood Inn A. A. The Registration Committee at a special meeting yesterday took this action on evidence in its possession alleging that the Hollywood Inn quintet played games with unsanctioned teams under the name of the Yonkers Stars on Sundays, and on week days the team competed under the club name.

Brooklyn Collegians Defeated in One-Sided Game, 43 to 13.

Manhattan College's basket ball team scored an easy victory over the St. John's College of Brooklyn five last night in a one-sided game on the De La Salle Institute Court. The score was 43 to 13.

The Manhattan five held the lead almost from the start and with accurate shooting and clever passing easily outclassed the Brooklyn collegians. At the end of the first half the Manhattan lads were leading by 22 to 4.

Van Tassel Wins Billiard Game.

H. Van Tassel scored a close victory over William Blumenthal last night in the A. A. B. A. three-cushioned carrom billiard tournament at Thum's Academy, Thirty-first Street and Broadway. The score was 25 to 35. Van Tassel finished his string in sixty-four innings and had a high run of five. Blumenthal made a cluster of eight markers in his fifty-third inning.

WHITE OWLS CLINCH CUP IN POLO CLASH

STANDING OF THE TEAMS.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
White Owls	4	0	1.000
Royal A. F.	4	1	.800
Squadron A.	1	2	.333
Meadowlarks	1	2	.333
Rovers	0	2	.000
Foxhunters	0	3	.000

The White Owls polo trio clinched the Victory Cup last night in the tournament which has been progressing at Durland's Riding Academy, when they defeated the Royal Air Force team by a score of 13½ goals to 8. The contest was one of the most spectacular of the tournament, and was keenly contested. This victory gives the White Owls a state of four victories in as many games played. The Royal Air Force team has won four games and lost one.

The Canadian players conceded a handicap of five goals to their rivals, and it was this, with penalties for fouls in the first period, which caused the R. A. F. downfall. The White Owls, led by M. Wilder at No. 2, played a dashing game and combined good use of the stick with an unusually clever display of horsemanship.

The form displayed by the Royal Air Force was not up to the standard of their previous matches, and this also played a part in the defeat. M. Baker, at back, was off form, so that Archie Kinney, the sterling Canadian player, had to divide his attention between covering Baker's position and scoring goals for his team. At that he was successful for he accounted for six of his team's nine goals. His pony also got a marker when he kicked the ball into the goal in the second period.

The lineup:

WHITE OWLS. (13½.)	R. A. F. (8.)
No. 1—T. Wynn.	No. 1—J. Finley.
No. 2—M. Wilder.	No. 2—A. Kinney.
Back—O. Coleman.	Back—M. Baker.

Handicaps—R. A. F., 14; White Owls, 9. Goals—Henley, (2.) Kinney, (6.) Kinney's pony, Winn, Wilder, (5.) Coleman, (3.) Foul penalties—Baker one-half point; Henley, one-half point; Coleman, one-half point. Field referee—C. Sherman. Sideline referees—Dr. Blatherwell and Earl Hopping. Timekeeper—P. Chadwick. Time of periods—Ten minutes.

COLUMBIA 'VARSITY DINED.

Coach Dawson and Football Players Guests of Columbia Club.

Fred Dawson and the Columbia S. A. T. C. 'Varsity football team which won six of seven games played last Fall, were guests at a dinner held in their honor at the Columbia University Club last night. There were present at the dinner, in addition to members of the team, Levering Tyson, Graduate Manager of Athletics; Charles Halsted Mapes, Chairman of the Columbia Committee on Athletics, and a number of other prominent graduates.

Plans for next season were discussed, and it was made known that the schedule would be much the same as the one which had been prepared for the 1918 'Varsity eleven, but which had to be canceled when the S. A. T. C. took charge of sports. It was also announced that the 1919 season would be brought to an end by a game with Brown or some other eleven of equal rank.

Patrolman Volberg Is Winner.

Patrolman H. Volberg scored his second victory over his brother-officer, J. Fogler, yesterday in the 200 points pocket billiards match being decided at Lawler Brothers' Academy in Brooklyn. The score was 50 to 27. This success gives Patrolman Volberg an advantage of 100 to 73 in the total score. The match is to decide the championship of the One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Precinct, Brooklyn.

Rutgers Place Five Wins.

Rutgers Place Gymnasium's basket ball team defeated the St. Anselm's A. C. last night in the Metropolitan A. A. U. 145-pound championship basket ball tournament by the score of 32 to 15. The contest was played at St. Anselm's A. C.

BIRDS FOR FRENCH FARMS.

Campaign at Poultry Show to Send Stock to Devastated Land.

A campaign to supply poultry to the farmers in devastated France was launched at the Poultry Show at Madison Square Garden yesterday. The committee in charge hopes to enlist the interest of fanciers to such an extent that the American Committee on Devastated France will be able to furnish a sufficient number of young poultry until the French farmer can again become self-sustaining.

The war has completely eliminated the French cottage breeds, Houdans, Creve Coeurs, La Fleche, and Faverolles. These are the varieties most favored, and the committee will make a special endeavor to forward the necessary breeding stock to France. There is an exhibit of the best and purest varieties of the French breeds at the show, and, while all standard-bred poultry will be welcome in the campaign, the committee will try first of all to send breeding pens of the distinctively French varieties.

A victory for amateur fanciers was scored at the show last night, when J. Robinson Beard of this city won the blue ribbon for the best display pen of Buff Orpingtons, consisting of a cock and four hens. They were raised at his Lucknow Farm, at Stamford.

The Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Reds, the two prominent American breeds, are attracting considerable attention. The largest exhibitor of barred Plymouth Rocks are E. B. Thompson of Amenia, N. Y., and Bradley Bros., of Lee, Mass. Mr. Thompson has been an exhibitor at every show for the last thirty years, and has won the highest honors in the breed for twenty-seven years.

The largest sale recorded yesterday was made by M. F. Delano of Vineyard Haven, Mass., who sold a single-comb White Leghorn to F. L. Sewell for $500.

August de Corte, who has charge of the portable war pigeon coop, released several of the homers yesterday, and, despite all the distracting noises in the Garden, they all returned to the wagon loft. The wagon is similar to those used in France during the war.

LANGDON IS WINNER IN BILLIARD MATCH

J. R. Langdon and Humboldt Foss played one of the longest games of the tournament last night in the continuation of play in the N. A. A. B. P. National Class C 18.2 balkline billiard championship tournament at Lawlor Brothers' Academy in Brooklyn. After seventy-three innings, Langdon won by a score of 150 to 129.

Langdon held the lead practically all the way and Foss seldom came within dangerous reach of his rival. The latter seemed content to play safely at all stages of the contest. This condition accounted for the length of the match. Langdon found it difficult to score consistently with the unfavorable spread which Foss invariably left him. Foss, however, failed to take advantage of many seemingly favorable layouts which were presented frequently, when Langdon missed.

Two games were scheduled for the closing play in the preliminary round, J. Neustadt and Ardie Wickers were to have been opponents in the other contest. This match was abandoned because of the illness of Wickers. It is planned to play the game tomorrow night. Unless the unusual occurs, Langdon and Neustadt will be among those to oppose Ferdinand A. Unger, champion, in the final round for the title.

The score by innings:

Billiard Victory for Blaisdell.

J. M. Blaisdell defeated Joseph Dalton last night in the Victory Handicap 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn, by a score of 130 to 100. Dalton was playing for 140 points. Blaisdell finished his string in forty-two innings, for an average of 3 4-42, and had a high run of 12. Dalton's average was 2 18-41, and which Foss invariably left him. Foss, he had a high run of 12.

A rally in the last ten minutes of play, however, gave the Franklin quintet victory.

The lineup:

RAID SPECULATORS UNDER NEW LAW

Thirty-two Arrests Made, and Eleven Men Held in Court for Examination.

TYSONS HAD NO LICENSE

Most of Prisoners Clerks in Their Offices — Profiteering to be Taken Up Next.

The first attempt by the District Attorney's office to enforce the new city ordinance intended to regulate theatre ticket speculation was made yesterday afternoon by Assistant District Attorney Kilroe. With the aid of three Police Inspectors and sixty detectives, thirty-two sellers in Broadway offices and at other points in the theatre districts were arrested. Eleven of the prisoners were held in $300 bail each in the West Side, Yorkville, and Jefferson Market Courts for examination on Tuesday.

All the others released were clerks or sellers in the twenty-one hotel offices of the Tyson Company, Mr. Kilroe said, and they were freed after an officer of the agency office 1,482 Broadway had announced the immediate application would be made for a license. A single theatre ticket license permits an agency to operate any number of separate selling booths or sales offices.

The arrests were made in three inspection districts, commanded by Police Inspectors Dominick Henry, James S. Bolan, and Frank J. Morris, all of whom accompanied Mr. Kilroe in his search for licensed and unlicensed agencies along Broadway and at all the principal hotels. According to Mr. Kilroe the only resistance met with occurred at the agency of Joseph Le Blang at Broadway and Forty-third streets.

"A detective seized a clerk there for the alleged sale of tickets without a license, and another clerk sought to take the prisoner from the officer, who hit the meddler and tumbled him beneath a counter. He was one of the eleven arrested," said Mr. Kilroe.

The question of profiteering, of which the District Attorney has received several complaints, was not considered in the raids yesterday, but this feature of the ordinance will be taken up later. The maximum penalties provided in the ordinance are $500 fine and six months' imprisonment or both. The ordinance has been in effect since Dec 28. / District Attorney Swann said:

"We believe public opinion approves and appreciates the ordinance designed for the protection of amusement seekers, and we shall enforce it by continual arrests, if necessary. We have no doubt of the authority of the Aldermen to enact the measure, and believe the city authorities have power not only to demand the license fee of $250, but to impose a prohibitive license fee if it were desired—say $2,500 or more."

Louis Marshall, who was retained as attorney for the ticket agencies, will defend the accused men and he intimated that a writ of habeas corpus may be applied for to test the validity of the ordinance in the Court of Appeals. Mr. Marshall holds the measure is unconstitutional and advised that the license requirement be ignored. However, some seven or more of the large agencies have obtained licenses.

"Manon Lescaut" Sung Again.

Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" was repeated at the Metropolitan last evening, with Mme. Alda in the name part, Mr. Martinelli as Hero, Messrs. De Luca, De Segurola, and others, Mr. Papi conducting. A dress rehearsal was held earlier in the day for tomorrow's production of "La Reine Fiammette," the first opera by Xavier Leroux to reach New York, soon to be followed by the Chicago production here of another of his works, "Le Chemineau."

Mr. Monteux was indisposed yesterday, and Mr. Bamboschek directed the rehearsal, with Mr. Lazaro and others, Mme. Farrar singing the title rôle of Fiammette, which was acted in Catulle Mendes's play some years ago by Miss Julia Marlowe.

Alfred Cortot Gives Last Recital.

Alfred Cortot, the French pianist, gave his last recital here for the Society of Friends of Music yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall, having remained some days after the departing Paris Orchestra, with which he came to America last Fall. M. Cortot was heard in Schumann's posthumous "Etudes Symphoniques," a theme and five variations, not the longer and familiar series. He played Liszt's sonata dedicated to Schumann, besides pieces by Schubert, Weber, Mendelssohn, and four of the pianist's countrymen—Ravel, Faure, Debussy, and Chabrier.

ROME HAILS OUR SAILORS.

200 of Them Entertained and Cheered in the Streets.

ROME, Jan. 21.—A contingent of 200 American sailors arrived here today and was most enthusiastically received at the station.

The Italian Government has undertaken to put a special train at the Americans' disposal during their stay here for the purpose of taking them to and fro between this city and Civita Vecchia, the seaport of Rome. Rome is so crowded that it is impossible to find accommodations for the men here at night.

The Minister of the Navy gave a luncheon for the American officers today, while American and Italian sailors lunched together at another restaurant. Wherever the American bluejackets appeared during the day they were heartily cheered by the population.

THE instrument shown at the left is the famous Style 700 Aeolian Vocalion, price $285. Many people consider this the most beautiful of any of the regular Upright Vocalion line. It has a pure, full tone, of great power and richness. Its volume may be beautifully modified in two ways; by the wonderful Graduola with which you may graduate the flow of melody as you will, or by the Volunome—an ingenious device for setting the Vocalion to play at "Piano," "Forte," etc., until a change in volume is desired.

The superior Vocalion Automatic Stop, the famous Vocalion Universal Tone Arm for playing all records, and eight finest quality record albums are included in the splendid equipment of this Vocalion.

Period Vocalions are all equipped with the Graduola, with the Universal Tone Arm, the Vocalion Automatic Stop, and in addition they contain a new and most convenient record filing device. In choosing any one of these Vocalions, you may feel confident that you are securing a phonograph of highest quality—superior in tone, in appearance, and richer in special features than any other phonograph on the market.

JUDGE MOON'S VIEWS ON TREASON.

Representative MOON of Tennessee plants his feet upon the solid rock of consistency and defies a sneering world. Granting the soundness of his views as to the Postmaster General's powers and his exercise of them, Judge MOON's position is unassailable. He is Chairman of the House Committee on Post Office and Post Roads, he is unflinching in his championship of Mr. BURLESON, he believes that the control of telegraphs, telephones, and cables is rightly lodged with Mr. BURLESON, he is loyal to Mr. BURLESON. He stands by his guns and for his courage, at least, he is to be commended.

If it be once granted that a department officer, without limit and without restraint, may exercise war powers after the fighting has stopped, then resistance to that officer's authority becomes a serious matter. Mr. REYNOLDS, Vice President of the Postal Telegraph Cable Company, not standing in fear of Mr. BURLESON, had urged upon employés of the Postal system something perilously like obstruction to the plan of Federal control. In testifying at the hearing given upon Judge MOON's bill to extend the period of control over telegraphs and telephones, Mr. REYNOLDS admitted that he was dismissed because of this act of insubordination. "Because you were treasonable?" asked Judge MOON. To that remark Mr. REYNOLDS objected. "You were disloyal to Mr. BURLESON," persisted Judge MOON. How can that be denied? Mr. BURLESON is sovereign of the wires. Mr. REYNOLDS impudently defied him. Obviously, this was lèse-majesté, a grievous lesion was inflicted in and upon the august person of the sovereign by the insurrectionary REYNOLDS.

In taking the view that this was "treasonable," Judge MOON appears to have the distinguished support of CHARLES E. HUGHES, late Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. In his address to the New York State Bar Association the other day, Mr. HUGHES said that "in increasing measure we are ruled not "by Congress, nor by the Executive, "nor by State Legislatures, nor by "Governors, but by department officials, whose personal will, whose "favor or disfavor measures for practical purposes the rights of American citizens." But here is the point:

> Disobedience to the bureaucrat is a crime, and a citizen prefers to obey rather than chance the disgrace of an indictment. For him due process of law is largely an unreality, for reputation is too dear to enable him to risk the displeasure of the bureau chief or even of a subordinate who can enforce his will by the fact of a criminal charge.

It is unfortunate for Mr. REYNOLDS that these considerations did not occur to his mind in time to save him. He sinned against authority, the axe fell, and now Judge MOON intimates that he is guilty of treason and disloyalty.

It is a solemn thought that a railroad passenger who thoughtlessly opens or closes a car window may bring down upon himself an accusation of giving aid and comfort to the enemy, because of some regulation issued by authority of the Director General, of which he was ignorant. A like disgrace may be incurred by the heedless infraction of some telephone or telegraph regulation issued from sovereign authority. It is because of these risks, and of a thousand inconveniences, that the people of the United States are fervently praying that the war and the legal fiction of its continuance may be brought to an end promptly by the signing of the Treaty of Peace.

Department officers continue to exercise war powers, to ask for an extension of the period of their exercise, long after the fighting has ceased. Persons of a suspicious temper even intimate that these powers are exercised, not because of any war emergency, but because of the deliberate purpose of certain department officials permanently to extend Federal control over railroads and the wires. That suspicion may be treason. It has been popularly supposed that there are limits to the executive power. It has been assumed, even, that the courts would define those limits, that they would protect citizens and their property against acts beyond the authority of department officials under war or other legislation. The cables were seized after the war had ended, in fact but not in law, on the plea that it was necessary that the Government should have quick and unimpeded communication with Paris during the sessions of the Peace Conference. Objection was made that the seizure of the Pacific cables could hardly be justified by that plea. Suits were brought to determine the issues involved in the exercise of Federal authority in that manner, but as Congress had granted very broad powers to the Executive, and as the war in the legal sense had not yet ended, the decision of the Federal Court in this city that the case could not be considered justiciable was not unexpected. The courts, as everybody knows, do not concern themselves with the exercise of the executive power unless it plainly transcends statutory or Constitutional authority. But somewhere there are limits, and as Mr. HUGHES remarked in his address before the Bar Association, the courts of justice "should be keen to detect the step- "ping over the line of official au- "thority." The abuse of power is "the most vicious wrong in democracy," and the only protection "is to be found in courts of justice." States as well as individuals have begun to take notice of the somewhat startling theories of the scope of their powers entertained by department officials.

THE IRISH PARLIAMENT.

It is one of BERNARD SHAW's theories, or statements of fact, as disputable and certain, no doubt, as most other facts, that the Englishman is a dreamer, the Irishman severely logical and practical. An Irishman like Mr. GEORGE RUSSELL, a noble poet and prose writer, an effective dreamer, a mystic, and a master of agriculture, co-operation and one knows not what else, might represent both nationalities. Something of artistry, of humor and the want of it, of simplicity in the best sense, of earnestness, and of ardor is to be expected of all successors of the Tuatha de Danaan.

These characteristics were not missing from the meeting of the twenty-five Sinn Fein members of the British House of Commons, who have organized the Irish Parliament at Dublin. They call it "Dail Eireann," in that Irish language which was the medium of so ancient and memorable a literature, which is venerated even by revivers of it who, like WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS, can't read it, and of which, in translation, the reader who has no Irish can only complain that, in the case of proper names at least, its pronunciation is mighty hard.

Mr. CHARLES BURGESS, Gaelicized as CATHAL BRUGHA, was Speaker of this Irish Parliament. Nothing is wholesomer than laughter, and the audience, mostly women and children, can't have been too much refreshed by the real Irish speeches, the Irish declaration of independence, and address to free nations. The greatest reverence is due to antiquity, yet language revivals demand patience, even of the patriot. An All-Indian Parliament listening to addresses in Sanscrit, a German Parliament whose proceedings were in Old Gothic, a New England Parliament in Algonquin or Hassanamissittese, would be improving and impressive, but not too blithe. Some of the members of the Irish Parliament had trouble in reading their Irish manuscript speeches. All the more credit to them and to their hearers.

Descent was made to En_ _h, however, and the two main documents were translated into English and French. It seems a little strange that these friends of the Irish Renaissance forgot their Armorican cousins. Copies might well have been made in Breton.

Of three delegates to present the Irish cause to the Peace Conference two are in jail for the moment. The third will have to apply in English to the British Government for a passport. "The nation of Ireland," begins the address to the free nations, "having her national independence." Right before the eyes and ears of the Government these declarations of independence are made. These twenty-five men, almost all young and hopeful, chosen to a Parliament in which they won't sit, start on paper a new "nation," though they and their imprisoned colleagues represent not more than a half of it, and for a different purpose. In Dublin Lord FRENCH and the Secretary for Ireland are not in the slightest degree disturbed. LLOYD GEORGE in Paris has several other things to look after. Both on the part of the Sinn Feiners and of the British Government, no more amiable and peaceful conduct could be wished.

BOLSHEVIST PROPAGANDA.

If one believes MAXIM LITVINOFF, late Bolshevist Ambassador in London, his Government has engaged in no propaganda in any foreign country but Germany. But there are excellent reasons for not believing Mr. LITVINOFF. He was expelled from London for engaging in propaganda against the existing British system. He says the charge was false; but several thousand people heard him address the labor conference at Nottingham with a plain exhortation to revolution, and there is good evidence that propaganda literature was sent out from his Embassy.

Detailed evidence is at hand as to Bolshevist propaganda in Switzerland, which was a year or two ago, and perhaps is still, to serve as a centre for agitation in Germany, Austria, France, and Italy. Just before he went back to Russia LENINE himself left a memorandum for his associates at Zimmerwald which, as summarized by the Journal de Genève, laid out a program for the Swiss Socialist and labor elements which was frankly revolutionary. It contained four main proposals: Struggle against the Swiss Federal Constitution with the object of centralizing the State; denationalization, by close co-operation between Swiss and foreign proletarian groups and by facilitating rapid naturalization—a measure which at that time would have immensely forwarded the German plans for gaining economic control of Switzerland; unceasing struggle against the moderate and patriotic parties in Swiss socialism; and opposition to all measures for national defense.

This, to be sure, was LENINE as a private individual. But last Spring LENINE's Government sent a legation to Switzerland, and, according to Swiss newspapers quoted by The New Europe, its head expressly promised the President not to engage in any revolutionary propaganda. Yet very soon the mission was doing propaganda work, both by interviews given by the Minister to the Socialist press and by literature and "news" emitted by his subordinates. There is evidence that this centre carried on the work of LENINE himself, which had included incitement to a proletarian revolution in France as well as agitation in Switzerland, and it also carried out his advice to the Zimmerwaldians and tried to make out of every manifestation of economic discontent an expression of proletarian revolutionary sentiment. So, early in November, the Swiss Government expelled the whole mission.

That some persons, either Russian Bolsheviki or sympathizers with the Bolsheviki, have carried on a strong pro-Bolshevist propaganda at the Peace Conference is evident from the accounts of what is going on there; correspondents and peace delegates appear to be favored with innumerable arguments and apologies for the Bolsheviki. The conference has finally been persuaded that it will be best to give a hearing to the Russian factions, Bolsheviki and all. The best informed friends of the Russian people will feel that this is a deplorable mistake. The Bolsheviki are not only irreconcilable enemies of human society, their leaders have been the paid spies and agents of Germany. It is a fresh betrayal of the Russian people to treat with them. But the Allies, chiefly, it appears, because of opposition at Washington, refused aid to the Russians ten months ago, when they might have put down the Bolsheviki and set Russia free. This is a late and weak attempt to correct that blunder.

DOCKS AND TUNNELS.

It does not fully express the significance of the New York-New Jersey tunnel to say that it is a proposal to unify the Port of New York. That is enough to justify it, or rather to make it imperative to build it. Beyond that joint interest of the two States most immediately concerned, and also beyond the interest of the nation in the port which it neglects scandalously, lies the specific interest of this city. The existing situation is that unless funds are found for harbor facilities the city will lose commerce for the lack of waterside accommodation. The nation ought to help, for it is a reproach that of the billion dollars of Federal appropriations for development of rivers and harbors less than 3 per cent. has come to the port which does 50 per cent. of the nation's foreign trade and supplies three-quarters of the customs collections.

The annexation of Manhattan to the continent is not a local improvement in any sense, but there would be local consequences of specific importance to it. If the vehicular tunnel were built, there would be less need for the forty-six piers now in use by the railways on this little island, and there would be an immediate sufficiency of accommodation for foreign commerce now diverted elsewhere because the city is unable to furnish the piers for which offers have been made. If there were a vehicular tunnel the New Jersey waterfront also would be released from the railway monopoly which prejudices New Jersey. There is not space enough to accommodate the railways between the Palisades and the river, and the railway terminals need many acres further inland. The preferable tunnel would be a railway tunnel, on the broad view of the question. The vehicular tunnel would be a great relief to the New York interest. It would be a substitute for drayage, at the expense of shippers instead of railways. The traffic would be greatly facilitated, but it would remain true that the cost of delivery across the river would equal or exceed the cost of carriage from midcontinent or overseas. The need is so great that consignees as well as shippers would be willing to assume it in despair of other relief, and the time is ripe for availing of their readiness, which may disappear when trade becomes quieter. It should be remembered that the through East and West business needs accommodation as much as the local traffic, and can only get it by great inland railway classification yards, which should separate the two classes of business and deliver the goods where they ought to go on the wheels which bring them to tidewater. The mere cost of breaking bulk for wagon delivery creates a problem as great as the lighterage problem, which has muddled the rate situation for years.

There is no prospect that the railways in their present anaemic condition can build freight tunnels as one road built passenger tunnels. Nor is there any prospect that the Federal Administration will help the railways in the matter. Therefore, there is no escape from welcoming the co-operation of New York and New Jersey in the building of the wagon tunnels. Twelve of the most representative and influential civic organizations have approved, and the only dissent has come from New Jersey. That State does not appreciate what it will receive, and overvalues what it will give. It even ungraciously suspects the motives of its partner State and wants a sectional referendum upon the question of unifying the port. There is danger that the New York vote, either by population or investment, would promote the unification of the port, but it is not a danger which New Jersey needs dread. There is equal representation upon the commission which has the matter in charge, and there is no reason to suppose that anything injurious to New Jersey can even be proposed, and still less be feared, from the malice or covetousness of New York. Tunnels run in both directions, and New Jersey travelers or freight will benefit more by access to Manhattan than Manhattan users of the tunnel will benefit by access to New Jersey.

PORTUGAL.

Of what is to come from the confused, explosive politics and parties of Portugal in the last nine years the seventh son of a seventh son born under Libra, and therefore of balanced judgment, shall make but vain guesses. The Monarchists, who are rising, or said to be, in the north, were mostly pro-German in the war, with the exception of the associates of Dom MANOEL in England. Portugal's ancient friendship and alliance with England forbid any long German success there, and if Dom MANOEL is really bent on a Lusitanian emprise he at least is a good friend of the Entente.

A certain vigor and violence, a remarkable power of intrigue, the spirit of dictatorship, however hidden by republican and democratic names, are characteristic of modern Portugal. If, with the fate of his father and elder brother in his mind, and Europe full of monarchs out of business like himself, Dom MANOEL really goes back to Portugal, he is a brave man who loves adventure, loves Portugal so well that he wants to be buried there as soon as possible.

SAILORS FOR GERMAN SHIPS.

According to the agreement reached at Treves last week, the German ships which are to carry troops to this country and Australia will take back food to Germany. All must be manned by British or American seamen. Germany's delegates in the brief conference asked that sailors of their own country be used. Their plea was rejected. The seamen's boycott appears to have been overlooked.

Nearly all the British seamen have signed a pledge which excludes them for seven years to come from any service in the interest of Germans, and this boycott movement has the support of the French sailors' organization. The leader of it, J. HAVELOCK WILSON, President of the International Seamen's Union, and his Executive Committee have called an international conference, to be held on Feb. 24, for the consideration of a resolution saying that seamen "will "not man any ship going to or coming "from an enemy country" until provision has been made for due compensation to the dependent relatives of those whose lives were taken by submarines. There were more than fifteen thousand British victims of the U-boats. He predicts that the resolution will be adopted "provid- "ing that no food shall go to Ger- "many" until the compensation is assured.

If the seamen stand by their pledges the movement of troops as well as the carrying of food may be delayed, for in many cases the same ship will be used for both kinds of service. The German ships in home ports are ready for sea work. An early announcement by the Peace Conference of its purpose to care for the dead sailors' dependents would promote effective and immediate use of them, if German seamen must be excluded.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Promise Must Be Kept. People in and out of Congress who are making such bitter moan over the prospect that the Government must pay $2.26 a bushel for wheat when the market price is likely to be about $1.35, feel a perfectly comprehensible grief, and one that is shared, probably, by everybody except the farmers who are going to get an extra billion or more for their crop. They, of course, view the situation with pleased equanimity.

Hard, however, as the bargain does seem, now, and hard as it undoubtedly is, the thought of not standing by its terms has not received expression from any quarter, and it should not. National faith is involved in keeping the contract, and even a suggestion to evade the Government's agreement would have deplorable consequences—possibly fatal consequences, perhaps, if ever there should arise in the future another emergency like the one that existed when the agreement was made. It was vital, then, to the world's safety and welfare to be assured that the next wheat crop in this country would be large enough to make up for the difficulty or impossibility of getting adequate supplies for the Allies, their associates, and their friends in other lands. There was no failure here or anywhere else to recognize that fact, and the only question raised was, not as to fixing a minimum price for all American wheat, but as to the size of the price that should be fixed.

Criticism Queerly Reversed. Even the fiercest of the orators now discussing the price of wheat have the grace to admit that the agreed price must be paid. Somehow or other, however, they must utilize for political purposes the general and natural reluctance to pay more than the market price for anything, and they have found what they think is a way to do it. Their naïve device is to attack the man whom, with some plausibility, they can attack as having had much to do with determining the amount every American farmer should get for every bushel of wheat he could and would raise.

They forget that, only a few months ago, every politician who had any regard at all for the farmer vote was denouncing that same man for insisting that $2.26 was a price quite enough to make wheat raising attractive, because profitable. They vehemently declared that amount insufficient to make the farmer confident of making both ends meet or to inspire him with either eagerness or willingness to risk planting a large acreage to a somewhat uncertain crop. The clamor, then, was for $2.50 a bushel, and when that was refused prophecies rang through both halls of Congress that our sturdy yeomanry were about to be ruined because of that same man's ignorance or malice.

At present the contention is that the country is to be robbed of a billion because he set the price too high! If Mr. HOOVER is well supplied with appreciation of the humorous, he may be only amused by this oscillation of opinion as to his judgment; if he isn't, his temper must be much tried.

A Warning Familiar in Sound. As it will make no practical difference whether or not New York State ratifies the prohibition amendment—as the amendment, that is, will become a part of the Constitution, regardless of what New York does—there is some difficulty in understanding how the "wet" spokesmen at Albany managed to put so much fire into their orations. It was easy to see, however, that they used more fire than wisdom, especially in the case of those who substituted for argument based on facts an appeal to fear.

Prohibition, they declared with an almost convincing semblance of sincerity, would be followed by a Bolshevist revolution here, and then, they said, we'd be sorry for shutting up the distilleries and breweries that hitherto have guarded us from that awful fate!

Now, if these seemingly apprehensive persons really are afraid of such a result of prohibition, they are quite the most timid people in the United States, and they shouldn't be allowed as far away from home as Albany unless attended by nurse girls at least as competent as Orphant Annie to guard them from Black Things.

Their warnings recall what we used to hear would happen to us if, ignoring the opinions and will of our pro-German residents, the United States dared to join the Allies in fighting the Central Empires. As a matter of fact, just nothing happened—nothing, that is, except that many Americans of German birth or descent promptly volunteered to fight under their adopted country's flag, and a considerably greater number submitted to conscription with no less docility than their neighbors.

Prohibition will doubtless have its troublesome consequences, but neither a Bolshevist revolution nor a Bolshevist uprising will be one of them.

The police would not permit it.

Another British Blunderer. Prince FEISAL, son of King HUSSEIN, is a most disappointing person. His remarks, as reported by the ever-accurate Associated Press, contain not one trace of Oriental imagery—not one reminder of the Arabian Nights—not one indication that he is even trying to add something of picturesqueness and of the unfamiliar to the day's discussion.

He seems to be an entirely practical young man, with aspirations differing in no respect from his many fellow-fishers in the troubled waters the war has left, and for anything that appears in his talk he might have been born and raised, not in Medina, but in Paris, London, or even Trenton, N. J.

It's not that what the Prince says isn't sensible, intelligent, and commendable. It's that it isn't touched with the glamour of the East. Perhaps this is the fault, not of Prince FEISAL, but that of the British Colonel who has him in tow and presumably edits and possibly writes his speeches. If that is so, the British Colonel is either not wise enough to hold the place he does or else he is too wise. Somebody ought to give him some good advice as to what is expected of an Arabian Prince who really is a desert warrior and could talk like one if he were allowed to be himself.

"AND THERE IS NO PEACE!"

The god of love, the god of strife—
Twin brethren, they, and lords of all;
And, at the trumpet call of life,
They answer to one battle call.

The bowman, Cupid, armored Mars—
Eros and Ares—one in name,
They lead, as one, through life and wars,
For life and warfare are the same.

In bleeding heart and crimson hand
Their banners float in every land
Whereof the oceans still hold trace.

The fertile seed of life they sow,
And water it with blood and tears;
By blood and tears the nations grow
Through all the unremembered years!

The hand shall not put up the sword
Until the beating pulses cease,
And, all its crimson banners lowered,
Life yields the victory to Peace!

M. E. BUHLER.

THE BOLSHEVIKI AND THEIR APOLOGISTS.

The Kind of "Order" We Have in Russia—The Force Necessary to Save the Country—Lloyd George's Suggestion.

By GEORGE KENNAN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A general and apparently concerted attempt is being made by radical Socialists in the United States to excite sympathy for the Russian Bolsheviki, on the ground that their Government is a new, untried, and peculiarly Russian form of democracy; that it has maintained order in Russia for a period of fourteen months; that it has the support of a majority of the people, and that the Russian masses ought not to be prevented, by foreign intervention, from trying out the theories in which they firmly believe. No one knows, it is said, what the real situation in Russia is; the alleged cruelties and atrocities of the Red Guard and the Extraordinary Commissions are probably exaggerations, if not inventions, and there is really no good reason why delegates from the Government of the Bolsheviki should not be admitted to the Peace Conference on a perfect equality with delegates from the anti-Bolshevist Governments in Omsk, Ekaterinodar, and Archangel.

In a speech made in Cooper Union last night and reported in THE TIMES this morning, Mr. M. J. Olgin, one of the many apologists for the Bolsheviki, said:

"Though I am not a member of the Bolsheviki and do not approve of the course of the Russian revolution, I must say that the Bolsheviki were the only ones who introduced order out of chaos. They have maintained order for fourteen months and they show no signs of weakening."—(NEW YORK TIMES, Jan. 20, 1919.)

It would be interesting to know just what Mr. Olgin's conception of "order" is. It must be something like the unrestrained activity of lunatics from a public asylum, a cohort of Black Hundred pogrom rioters from the Jewish Pale of Settlement, and a gang of "Forty Thieves" from the Arabian Nights. According to Maxim Gorky (as quoted by William E. Walling) there have been in Russia, since the revolution began, more than ten thousand cases of lynching, "with theft and robbery increasing every day." And for most of these crimes of violence, committed in what Mr. Olgin calls a state of "order," the Bolsheviki and their adherents are directly responsible. Mr. Walling also quotes Oskar Tokoi, formerly Socialist Prime Minister of Finland, as saying:

"Only a small minority supports the [Bolshevist] Government; and, what is worse, to the supporters of this Government are rallying all the hooligans, robbers and others, to whom this period of confusion promises a good chance of individual action."—(NEW YORK TIMES, Dec. 30, 1918.)

Mr. Olgin says that "it would take a scholar many years to analyse the vast system of laws which they [the Bolsheviki] have introduced." But in all this "vast system of laws" the commandments "Thou shalt not kill" and "Thou shalt not steal," which were handed down from Sinai for the protection of life and property, do not seem to have found a place. Perhaps Mr. Olgin thinks that the "vast system of laws" devised by the Bolsheviki has superseded the Ten Commandments, and that killing and stealing are not incompatible with a state of "order."

In arguing against foreign intervention in Russia Mr. Olgin says:

"Are the Allies going to fight Russia because they do not believe in its political principles? The Russian masses have done things they ought not to have done; but are we to invade Russia and kill them off because we disagree with them? To send an army to Russia would require 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 men, and the war might last from five to fifteen years."

This is more extraordinary, if possible, than the assertion that the Bolsheviki have maintained order. If the Allies invade Russia in force, it will not be to "kill off" the masses, but to prevent the Bolsheviki from killing them off. The Bolshevist Red Guard and Extraordinary Commissions are the killers; the allied armies would be the life-savers. Mr. Olgin's estimate that it would require a force of two million to three million men and a war of from five to fifteen years to overthrow the Bolsheviki is almost too irrational for serious consideration. A few divisions of Czechoslovaks, insufficiently armed and with very little ammunition, took away from the Bolsheviki last summer the whole line of the Trans-Siberian Railway from the Urals to the Pacific. A much smaller force of Russians and Czechoslovaks—only a few regiments in fact—boldly attacked the Bolsheviki, within a few hundred miles of the latter's headquarter's, captured from them the important cities of Samara, Ufa, Syzran, Stavropol, Simbirsk and Kazan; forced the evacuation of Nizhni-Novgorod, and threatened even Moscow itself. If they had had the support of a single division of allied troops, with artillery and machine guns, they would probably have taken Moscow by assault and put an end to the Bolsheviki forever. The forces of Lenine and Trotzky, composed mainly of Russian mercenaries and marauders with a stiffening of Germans, Hungarians, Letts and Chinese, could not stand against the Czechoslovaks and the "People's Army," even when they outnumbered the latter seven to one. The city of Kazan, which had a garrison of 8,000 Bolsheviki of the Red Guard, was taken by three hundred Serbians, three companies of the People's Army, and four companies of Czechoslovaks, with only a single 37-millimetre field gun. (For details of all these operations see "The Russian Democracy in its Struggle with the Bolshevist Tyranny," by Colonel Vladimir I. Lebedeff; N. Y., 1919, p. 13-31.)

And now we are told by Mr. Olgin that 3,000,000 veteran British, French and American soldiers would have to fight from five to fifteen years in order to conquer a Bolshevist Red Guard that was defeated a dozen times last summer by a mere handful of patriotic Russians and Czechoslovaks. The only word that seems fitly to characterize such an estimate is—preposterous! But Mr. Olgin does not stand alone when he declares that it would take 3,000,000 allied soldiers fifteen years to overthrow the Bolsheviki. Other admirers of the Red Guard say that it would take 5,000,000. In an address on "Lloyd George's Policy toward the Soviet Governments of Russia," which was delivered last night in the Church of the Ascension of this city, Mr. Jerome Davis, who is described as the "Senior Secretary in charge of all the war work of the Y. M. C. A. in Russia," said:

"To crush out the Bolsheviki would be impossible, were it desirable. Those who have made a study of the question, Professor Harper of Chicago University among them, assure us that it would take 5,000,000 men."—(NEW YORK TIMES, Jan. 20, 1919.)

This estimate is even more extraordinary than that of Mr. Olgin. It would require us to believe that the Red Guard of mercenaries—the Bolshevist army of Russians, Germans, Hungarians, Letts, and Chinese—which could not hold its own last Summer against a few thousand half-armed Czechoslovaks, has since become so formidable that to crush it would require a force comparable to that which Marshal Foch used in smashing the veteran and victory-flushed armies of Germany. If Trotzky ever reads THE NEW YORK TIMES he will feel a thrill of pride when he sees that, in the opinion of Professor Harper and the Senior Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., his Red Guard would be almost if not quite, a match for five million such men as fought at Château-Thierry and in the forest of the Argonne.

Mr. Davis is also reported as saying that even if the Allies do not intervene for the protection of the harried and terrorized people of Russia—if they merely send "ammunition, clothing, food, and supplies of all kinds to the opponents of the Bolsheviki"—they will so incense and exasperate Lenine, Trotzky & Co. that the latter will attack their enemies more fiercely than ever, and bring about a state of "chaos which will make the so-called Red Terror look mild in comparison." This policy, moreover, on the part of the Allies, will bring about in some unexplained way "the starvation of hundreds of thousands of women and babies." And for all this, including wholesale Bolshevist massacres and starving women and babies, we, the Allies, are to be held directly responsible. It will be, as Mr. Davis says, "on our heads."

What, then, is to be done? Shall we, in the words of President Wilson, "stand by Russia," or shall we stand by the Bolsheviki and let Russia perish? Mr. Davis seems to favor the latter course, inconsistent as it may be with Y. M. C. A. principles. The only policy left, he says, "is the one sponsored by Lloyd George. We must be proud of England for taking this stand, and it must be that it is the result of superior information which Lloyd George has, and which most of you have not. I am inclined to think that it is based on the reports of the British High Commission, reports which have not been published, but which I understand convey the offer of the Bolsheviki to co-operate with the Allies."

This policy, which Mr. Davis says is recommended by Lloyd George and the British High Commission, would be a disgraceful compromise with what Ambassador Noulens has called a system of "tyranny and terror which should place the bloody chiefs at Moscow and Petrograd outside the pale of humanity." It would admit as delegates to the Peace Conference unrepentant Bolshevist murderers who ought long ago to have been tried for their innumerable crimes and hanged by the neck until they were dead. It would condone assassination and mass terrorism; it would put the stamp of toleration on such acts of violence and outrage as those committed by the Germans in Belgium; and, worst of all, it would invite red-handed criminals from Moscow to come to Paris, mingle with honorable men, and take part—as witnesses at least—in the proceedings that are to determine the future fate of Russia.

France, certainly, will never consent to the adoption of any such policy, and it is to be hoped that the delegates from the United States will unhesitatingly take their stand beside Ambassador Noulens and Foreign Minister Pichon. If Lloyd George believes that delegates from the Bolsheviki are worthy of admittance to the Peace Conference, he is in violent disagreement with his own Ambassador to Russia, Sir George Buchanan, who witnessed the rise of the Bolsheviki to power, and who now joins Ambassador Noulens and Foreign Minister Pichon in denouncing them as cold-blooded murderers and traitors to the Allies, whose atrocious crimes "should place them outside the pale of humanity." In a recent article in The Fortnightly Review, Sir George said:

"Russian workmen and peasants alike have realized too late by bitter experience what Bolshevist rule means, and how it has spelled ruin both for themselves and their country. Liberty, the watchword of the revolution, has long been a dead letter—it is the monopoly of a single class, of a minority which through its Red army terrorizes the majority of the nation. All who do not subscribe to the articles of the Bolshevist creed are disfranchised, all papers which do not support the Government are suppressed. Justice is unobtainable, or only to be bought, and corruption is rampant. Never since the days of Ivan the Terrible has Russia suffered from such tyranny; and when, some weeks ago, the Bolsheviki feared that their power was on the wane, they indulged in an orgy of massacre and pillage, in the hope of overawing a helpless people with the Red Terror. Nobody's life is safe—all their political opponents, whether belonging to the Socialist or non-Socialist parties, to the working classes or to the aristocracy, are styled counter-revolutionaries, and as such are judged guilty and sentenced to death. The process of passing sentence on individuals is even found too slow, and they are massacred in batches, the Red Guard or the Chinese mercenaries employed as executioners being free to choose their victims from the list of the proscribed. Such are the methods by which those pseudo-democrats, Lenine and Trotzky, have attempted to found their Socialist State, and such are the precepts of the Bolshevist gospel which they would fain see preached in this and other countries.

"I believe in Russia's eventual resurrection, provided that the Allies will help her to cast off the Bolshevist tyranny, which is sapping her vital force, and that they will further, with all the means at their disposal, her political and economic reconstruction."

Will Mr. Davis and the Y. M. C. A. please take notice!

General Bell.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

During General MacArthur's campaign to the north from Manila in the Spring of 1899 I served on his staff as a civilian aid, on the recommendation of Major J. Franklin Bell. One evening, after a day of very lively skirmishing, Bell and I were just making our own little camp with a few armfuls of rice hay and one blanket when the General approached. He took Bell aside, but only a few feet, and complimented him on what he had accomplished, concluding with these words: "Major Bell, you have been worth your weight in gold to me this day." There was no other auditor besides myself.

BECK URGES FRATERNITY

Says Sentiment of Unity Between Liberal Forces Is Needed for League of Nations.

Sir Henry Babington Smith, Acting High Commissioner of Great Britain in the United States, speaking yesterday at the sixteenth annual meeting of the Pilgrims at the Waldorf-Astoria, said that there are influences and activities, some subtle and some gross, some open and some secret, whose object it is to create discord and destroy the confidence created in the last 100 years between Great Britain and the United States.

Referring to the villain in "Hamlet," who murdered Hamlet's father by pouring poison into his ear while he was asleep, Sir Henry declared earnestly: "Poison is being poured into the ears of the American people, and if they be not awake to the danger it will have its murderous effect. I believe, however, that whatever attempts will be made they will be powerless for evil, provided that we are on our guard against them."

A similar sentiment was spoken by James M. Beck, former United States Attorney General, who declared that there are two great currents running through this country; one the sentiment of accord with Great Britain and the other a current of deep-seated prejudice and passion against everything British. "And these two currents will come into active collision before many a day," he added. The chairman of the meeting was Chauncey M. Depew.

"The war is over, but we have not yet made peace," said Sir Henry in his address. "We are all rather inclined to believe that we are at the end of our troubles, to grumble at the slowness of demobilization and at everything that interferes with our return to business as usual."

After adding that the process of readjustment is going on with surprising rapidity Sir Henry remarked that a period of convalescence is necessary, for the patient cannot go about his business as usual the moment the fever has subsided. The world, he said, is going through this period of convalescence, and the doctors are in consultation in Paris.

Sees Difficulties Cropping Up.

"There is indeed just as much need of co-operation and unity now as there was during the war, and it is more difficult to maintain it," he continued. "In the war the one paramount object was to defeat the enemy. In this we were all agreed. But now that the fighting is over and the compelling force of military necessity ceases to operate, divergent interests and desires begin to reappear, not only between nation and nation, but it may be between different political parties, different social groups, or diverging national aspirations in the same country. On the broad principles which should guide the settlement there is substantial agreement, but in the detailed application of these principles there is room for difference, if only because of the complexity of the problems to be solved and of the variety of the forces which come into play."

The governing idea underlying the League of Nations, Sir Henry urged, was that the reign of law which in civilized life governs the relations between individuals should be extended to govern the relations between nations.

"The League of Nations, if it is to be an effective instrument and a living reality, must be the expression and the embodiment of the fixed will and determination of the world. Two things are necessary; the creation of the law-abiding habit of mind in international affairs, and the creation of machinery for giving effect to law, whether it be for the guardianship of young nations, for the settlement of disputes, or for the coercion of the law-breaker, but the former is as necessary as the latter. In the last resort the effectiveness of the league's action would depend on the wills of the nations composing it, and not upon the ingenuity or aptness of the provisions devised for its constitution. It is only by the force of the nations composing the league, whether that force be exercised as moral suasion, or in case of necessity, by economic pressure, or by armed compulsion, that the league can give effect to its obligations or to its decisions. They must guard against the danger of providing machinery from which the motive power will be lacking, and which will therefore remain ineffective.

"For this reason doubts have been expressed whether the present is the right time for forming the league, and it has been suggested that it would be better to wait till passions were cold, and till the normal economic life of the world has been resumed. I venture to dissent from that view. Steel has to be cast when it is hot, not when it is cold. It is true that the strength of the casting depends upon the strength of the metal when it is cold, but if you wait till it is cold the casting cannot be done."

Summing up the union of Great Britain and America during the war, Sir Henry declared that there were not wanting those who will try to efface that impression. "They do not hesitate to distort facts, to suggest vile or selfish motives and to appeal to every outworn prejudice and animosity of the past." He concluded by declaring that the surest guarantee for the peace of the world, the firmest foundation for a League of Nations, lies in the understanding and friendship, the unshakable confidence between Great Britain and the United States.

Beck Refers to Prohibition.

Mr. Beck, after referring to the prohibition amendment as a new child, but not a true child of our constitutional system of Government, declared that the victory of the allied nations was one of sentiment; for it was the sentiment of the free peoples that enabled them to conquer the nations which had prepared for war.

"So far as Great Britain and America are concerned," he added, "it is easier now than ever before to develop this sentiment of fraternity, and I say this notwithstanding the efforts that are now being made in many ways to divide these two countries. A peace conference can meet, solemnly deliberate, engross elaborate treaties of peace, form leagues of nations, bind them together by yards of red tape, and attach signatures with many seals; but, when all is done, these will prove little more than scraps of paper unless behind them is the sentiment of unity and fraternity between the liberal forces of the world that have won the victory. We have fought together. We must remain together."

Former Senator Depew, referring to the fighting already going on between some of the smaller nations of Europe, said it was as dangerous to be in Jugo-slav territory at the present time as it was to be a husband on Long Island. He said there could be no revolution in this country, where people think straight and have liberty, and he denounced the Bolsheviki for "regarding the murder of those who disagreed with them as liberty."

WANT WOMEN JURORS TO SERVE AT WILL

Club Presidents Favor Bill Providing for an Elective System.

DOUBTFUL ABOUT FARMERS

Miss Wren Says They Will Not Pass a Bill That Would Take Their Wives from Farm Duty.

Presidents of Women's Clubs at a meeting called by the Brooklyn Women's Bar Association at the rooms of the Professional Women's League, on West Forty-eighth Street, yesterday afternoon voted unanimously to favor a bill making women of the State subject to jury duty. The proposed bill does not make jury duty mandatory as it is for men, but elective, the women to have the right to refuse to serve if they wish to do so.

This was not the desire of the gathering or of the Brooklyn women lawyers, who consider that the exemptions which free men from duty under many circumstances would be equally satisfactory for women, but they voted for elective jury duty because they said the up-State farmers would never pass a bill which might call their wives and daughters away from home in the middle of Winter to spend a week in a town hotel.

"There are two Winter sessions of the court," said Miss Amy Wren, President of the Brooklyn Lawyers' Association, who presided, "and the men go to court as they would to the theatre, but you couldn't get the farmers to pass a bill that would make it mandatory for their wives and daughters to go. If the men enjoy it I don't know why the women should not have a little of the fun."

"The women would love it," said Miss Mary Wood. "I'm an up-State woman and I know. The men have all that fun and are paid for it, too."

"Unmarried women are not as well fitted for jury duty as the married," said Mrs. Ellen Kirk Downs. "They cannot understand children and family conditions."

"I consider the unmarried women are much better fitted," said Miss Wood, "because they are unprejudiced."

"No one can understand a boy like a mother," persisted Mrs. Downs.

"Cases of children under 16 are tried in the lower courts where they have no jury," said Miss Wren, "and the age is going to be raised to 18."

"I have heard Judge after Judge say that they have had cases where they would have been thankful if they could have had even one woman on the jury," said Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw.

"Most men and women believe that jury duty goes automatically with the privilege of voting," said Mrs. Olive Stott Gabriel. "Women always rise to their responsibilities and they will make good jurors."

LENBACH PAINTING, $1,750.

"Portrait Study of a Man" Leads Moderns in Halsey Collection.

At the sale of paintings and miniatures of the collection of the late Frederic R. Halsey at the Anderson Galleries last evening an unusual "Portrait Study of a Man," the half length figure of a Bavarian peasant in relief against a background of rough gray boards, by the German artist Lenbach, brought the highest price for a modern picture, going to L. M. Robbins for $1,750. Another Lenbach, "Portrait of a Peasant Girl," a life-size study, an early work of the artist, went to the same buyer for $925. The returns for the evening were $13,429.

F. A. Lawlor was one of the biggest buyers at the afternoon sale of art and household furnishings, paying $625 for a bronze group, the "Four Seasons," in four pieces; $200 for a pair of modern bronze amphoras, French; $145 for an Empire candelabraum, and $100 for two figures, Anthony Van Dyke and Rubens. The returns for the afternoon were $7,315. The sale will be continued this afternoon.

SOLDIERS TO SEE PARIS.

Pershing Issues New Order Providing Leaves of Absence.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—All American officers and soldiers will get a chance to see Paris in a leave of absence of three days before sailing homeward, according to General Order No. 14 issued from American General Headquarters on Jan. 18. American soldiers of Italian, French, Belgian, and British extraction will have an opportunity to visit their former homes or relatives before returning to the United States.

The general order, however, carries one condition to the clause concerning visits to Paris, as follows:

"Permission may be granted without special reason to men of exceptional good character, who may be expected to conduct themselves properly at all times and who have sufficient funds."

Black marks against privates will not prevent them, however, from obtaining leaves of absence to visit relatives in France, Belgium, Great Britain, and Italy.

Leaves are hereafter to be granted on a more liberal basis.

Y. M. C. A. MAKES DENIAL.

Asserts Cigarettes for Free Distribution Were Not Sold.

Charges that the Y. M. C. A. sold in France packages of cigarettes intended for free distribution, made by an Army Chaplain, were denied last night by the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A.

In the statement given out by the Y. M. C. A. refuting these charges, it is said that Beveridge C. Dunlap of New York, was one of the Y. M. C. A. workers with the regiment to which the Chaplain was attached and that he has received from the men in the regiment a loving cup, costing $100 in appreciation of the services he performed. Mr. Dunlap has received a letter from Colonel William Screws, commander of the regiment, in appreciation of his work.

The statement says that this is the first specific charge against the Y. M. C. A. that has been fully investigated, and that it has been found to be entirely without foundation.

It shows that the property put in trust for Mrs. Flagler's benefit when she was declared incompetent and sent to Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald's sanitarium at Central Valley, N. Y., is now worth $7,950,327, an increase of $1,289,477 over the value reported last year. In that year there was a shrinkage of $1,310,000, due to the depreciation of securities in the trust.

EX-SENATOR OLIVER DIES IN PITTSBURGH

Publisher of Two Republican Newspapers Was Former Steel Manufacturer.

BEGAN CAREER AS LAWYER

Elected to United States Senate for Unexpired Term of Knox, He Served Continuously Until 1917.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Jan. 22.—Former United States Senator George T. Oliver died at his home here this morning after a lingering illness. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon, and will be private.

George T. Oliver, former United States Senator, lawyer, steel manufacturer, and newspaper publisher, was born in Dungannon, Ireland, Jan. 26, 1848, while his parents were visiting there. His lifelong home was in Allegheny, now a part of Pittsburgh, and he was educated at Bethany College, West Virginia, of which subsequently he was a trustee.

He was admitted to the bar in 1871, practicing with notable success until 1881. His legal business had been largely identified with the steel industry, and eventually he withdrew from professional practice and devoted himself to manufacturing. During twenty years of connection with steel he gave the subject the same careful attention he had previously given the law. Until 1899 he was Vice President and then President of the Oliver Wire Company, and was President of the Hainsworth Steel Company from 1889 to 1897. He remained President of the amalgamated companies until 1901, when he disposed of all his manufacturing interests.

Senator Oliver became the owner of The Pittsburgh Gazette in 1900, and a little later he purchased an afternoon paper, The Chronicle-Telegraph. He completed his newspaper purchases in Pittsburgh six years later when he bought The Times, a morning paper, and merged it with The Gazette under the name of The Gazette-Times. For eighteen years he directed the papers, with his two sons, George S. Oliver and Augustus K. Oliver, associated in the management. In the meantime he became the owner of extensive real estate in Pittsburgh and contributed to the upbuilding of the city.

While a newspaper publisher he became active in local, State, and national politics as a Republican, exerting potent influence in the nomination and selection of State and national officers. He was elected United States Senator in 1909 for the unexpired term of Senator Knox, who had become Secretary of State, and subsequently was elected for a full term of six years ending March, 1917. While in the Senate he gave close attention to tariff matters affecting iron and steel and other products of Western Pennsylvania.

Senator Oliver left in addition to the sons already mentioned, one son, Lieutenant Bennett Oliver, and three daughters, Mrs. John P. Young and Mrs. Alexander C. Blair, Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Edward McCauley of Washington. His wife, who was Miss Mary Kountze of Omaha, died in May, 1917.

EX-EMPEROR OF KOREA DIES

TOKIO, Jan. 21.—Former Emperor Yi Hiung of Korea is dead. He died after a stroke of apoplexy.

Former Emperor Yi Hiung abdicated the throne of Korea on July 19, 1907, when his throne was threatened by dissensions in the Korean Court. Yi Hiung, it was said at the time, was without a friend among the Governments of Europe. He succeeded the preceding monarch on the throne in 1864, being the thirtieth in succession since the founding of the dynasty in 1392, but did not assume the title of Emperor until October, 1897. Yi Hiung was succeeded by his son, Yi Syek, who maintained his position on the throne until Aug. 22, 1910, when Korea was formally annexed to the Empire of Japan and the name of the country changed to Chosen. Yi Hiung was 68 years old.

Moses H. McKee.

Moses H. McKee, one of the Commissioners of the Board of Elections since July, 1911, died Tuesday night at his home, 275 West 140th Street. Mr. McKee had long been active in Republican politics of this city and was leader of the Twenty-first Assembly District. For many years he was a close friend of ex-Governor Odell, then State Chairman, but in 1906, when he found that most of the Republicans in his district were in favor of Herbert Parsons, he went with the other wing of the party. In August of that year he succeeded Edward H. Healy, an Odell man, as State Deputy Commissioner of Excise, and five years later he was appointed by Controller Prendergast as Deputy Collector of Assessments and Arrears. Later he became a member of the Board of Elections.

Charles Alfred Hamilton.

Charles Alfred Hamilton, Vice President of the International Silver Company and a Director of the Bridgeport Brass Company, with offices at 11 Maiden Lane, died yesterday at his home, 431 West End Avenue, in his seventieth year. He was born in Albany, and came here many years ago. He had a Summer home at Ridgefield, Conn., and was a member of the Loyal Legion and the Lotos Club. Mr. Hamilton is survived by his wife and one son, Captain Burgoyne Hamilton, who returned Saturday from France, where he had been in active service.

Miss Dorothy Hamlin Dies in Paris.

Miss Dorothy Hamlin, a Red Cross canteen worker for a short time in England and France, died of influenza at Hospital 101, in Paris, on Jan. 13, according to announcement made yesterday by the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Hamlin of 79 East Fifty-sixth Street, and left here on Nov. 27, after having been engaged in canteen work in this city for more than a year. PAYS HONOR TO GIBBONS AS A GREAT AMERICAN Cerretti, Presenting Pope's Jubilee Message, Also Says Red Hat Was Intended for Ireland.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 22.—In an address not only eulogistic of Cardinal Gibbons but which also paid a tribute to President Wilson, Archbishop Bonaventure Cerretti, Papal Under Secretary of State, today presented to the Cardinal the congratulations of Pope Benedict on the golden jubilee of his episcopate.

Archbishop Cerretti also indicated that had he lived Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul would have been made a Cardinal.

"The Sovereign Pontiff has sent me to express his love and admiration for that great American whose name is written with letters of gold in the hearts of the American people," said the Archbishop to Cardinal Gibbons. "But in honoring you, your Eminence, the Holy Father honors the whole American Church, honors America, for in your Eminence is represented all that is great and noble in American religious and civil life."

In speaking of the close friendship which existed between Cardinal Gibbons and the late Archbishop Ireland, Mgr. Cerretti said:

"If the Archbishop of the West had been spared, he would have rejoiced to be here today, and we also would rejoice were he with us today. Especially would we all have rejoiced in the near future—this I may say without indiscretion—when the great Archbishop Ireland, whom the Holy Father esteemed so highly, would also have received the highest distinction within the power of the Sovereign Pontiff to bestow.

"We are gathered together in a historic moment for America. The eyes of the world are turned with hope and confidence toward this great Republic. Your great President Wilson has enunciated to the world the highest and the noblest principles of humanity. He has proclaimed, in the most eloquent terms, the spirit and nobility of American manhood.

"And we are indeed gratified to know that those great principles which the American people love, those principles which President Wilson has never ceased to expound, to develop and to apply, according as the events of the gigantic world struggle have evolved, we are gratified to know, I say, that they are based upon the general outlines already traced by the Holy Father during the critical period of the war.

"It is well known what the Holy Father proposed for the restoration to the world of a just and lasting peace, that peace for which he together with the whole church has prayed so fervently. It was in particular these four points: That the right of might should give way to the might of right, that the just aspirations of nationalities should be satisfied, that no nation should be subjugated by another, because nations do not die; that there should be a general disarmament of nations and an international court of arbitration established."

A FIRST MORTGAGE HYDRO-ELECTRIC LONG TERM BOND PRICE TO YIELD 6%

The company issuing these bonds operates without competition.

The net earnings are over 2¼ times the amount required to pay bond interest charges.

The power furnished is of hydro-electric generation employing water instead of steam, which not only lessens cost of production, but eliminates to a large extent the labor factor, because of the few men required in the operation.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The atmosphere surrounding stock market transactions was clearer yesterday than for several preceding days, inasmuch as conflicting information about the railroads was absent, and prices recovered part of the distance lost since Monday morning. Probably much of the buying which imparted the firm tone to the list as a whole and gave particular stocks a strong appearance was in the way of realizing of profits on earlier short sales. Such a process was not unnatural in view of the downward tendency of railroad issues before and may have been hastened somewhat by the fact that only a moderate degree of liquidation occurred when prices looked weakest on Monday and Tuesday. Trading was quiet, and the upturn was as free of untoward movements as had been the progress toward lower levels. Any survey of the course of dealings for some time past would be incomplete without reference to the relative indifference which the public has displayed toward the market. Inquiry in bank and brokerage circles indicate that many of the sellers of railroad stocks from long accounts were much closer to the ticker than the average owner of railroad securities, and therefore was more easily disturbed by reports and conjectures which gained a hearing in market circles. Baltimore & Ohio recovered 2 points, St. Paul preferred 1½ points, New York Central 1 point, and many of the other prominent stocks moved forward good-size fractional distances. Reading, which had been under considerable pressure the day before, rose 1½ points under persistent buying, which was also the case with Southern Pacific.

Market comment turned from the rails to industrial stocks again. Naturally, the steel issues came in for close study and here decidedly mixed opinions were voiced. Information coming from manufacturing centres goes to show that mill operations are decidedly "spotty." The largest single unit is extensively engaged in working up commercial orders which have accumulated in the last year or more, and its plants are reported to be still operating in excess of 90 per cent. of normal, taking the varied forms of output as a whole. The Iron Age said that the larger Chicago mills were operating from 70 to 90 per cent. of capacity, while, in the East less than 50 per cent. has been the rule this week. The companies with diversified products and substantial bookings to be specified against seem to be doing pretty well, but new orders are said to be coming in at a rate equal to no more than half of current operations which indicates that the period of deflation is not yet over. Every day of partial activity means progress toward the time when buyers and sellers will get together and the steel stocks have not yet reflected any undue apprehension among the holders that the period will be so long as to deplete their patience.

The foreign exchange market contained movements against the Swiss and Belgium francs. The Belgium check rate now stands at 5.67, as compared with 5.62 when business was begun a few days ago. This movement may have reflected some transfers of funds to this centre from Antwerp, but the decline has not been greater than would be expected to follow the renewal of financial transactions after the long interval in which the market was disrupted. Call money was slightly firmer than on Tuesday.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Farmers' Income Tax.

Owing to the high prices which farmers received for their products last year it is to be expected that much heavier income tax payments will come from agricultural regions than before. Congress is considering a special appropriation to meet the guarantee of $2.26 per bushel for wheat. A banker suggests that the income taxes of the farmers be applied as completely as possible in order that the Government may get back a large part of the payments for wheat from the farmers' tax.

Waiting for the Law.

Dealers in municipal and other bonds exempt from the income tax say they expect an increase of bidding for such securities as soon as the Revenue bill is made into law. While the income tax rates are expected to go through approximately as they stand in the bill at present, still it is said many individuals are holding back their investments in order to be certain of the terms.

Brokers' Accommodation.

A broker, whose firm has just taken over a rather large account from another firm, makes an interesting point in the general question of brokers' bank accommodation. This firm, of course, has a theoretical loan limit, beyond which it is not expected to go. But by the act of taking over the account which was financed through another firm previously and is not new speculative business, it has increased its requirements. Now, asks the broker, would it be proper for his firm to receive additional accommodation at the expense of the firm from which the account came?

Pittsburgh Men Blue.

A well-known steel man from the Pittsburgh district who was in New York yesterday said that all the mill men were blue and the coal and coke men were even bluer. He said that he knew of one instance where a mill which had been turning out a large quantity of special material for the army had had its contracts canceled in toto without notice, necessitating the laying off of several hundred workmen. This, he said, resulted in a general depression in that particular city, and not only the discharged workmen but the officers and directors of the company in question began to liquidate their holdings of Liberty bonds and other negotiable securities. In the case of the coal and coke men he stated that many fuel tonnages have been canceled and there has been a considerable offering of this fuel at prices slightly lower than those at which it was purchased.

Lower Shipping Rates.

The announcement from Washington that shipping rates would be lowered will afford to American manufacturers an opportunity to compete on even terms with foreign industries in the race for world trade. The British and French rates have already been lowered and it was therefore imperative that American rates come down so that there could be an opportunity afforded for the expansion of the industries of this country in foreign fields commensurate with the plans as to export that were being undertaken. The formation of many export companies under the Webb act has shown conclusively that American industry, expanded to greater productive capacity than ever before, must seek an outlet for its commodities in the world markets or else fall back to a plan of decided curtailment.

Confidence in Britain.

While the security markets in this country, and in some of the neutral lands, have been steadily inclining to lower levels since shortly after the signing of the armistice, due to the doubt as to the stability of business conditions during the transition period, there has been a marked contrast in the tone prevailing on the Paris Bourse and the London Stock Exchange. In those two countries values have been appreciating, not rapidly, to be sure, but consistently. This on the surface seems to indicate a greater confidence in the immediate future than is entertained here. It might be pointed out, however, that securities both in England and France were so intimately related to the war situation that there was no boom such as was evidenced here on the strength of high war profits. The prices there might be considered as recovering from the effect of war depression, while here they are reacting from a war enthusiasm.

Signing the Contracts.

The news from Washington that Director General of Railroads Hines has come out flat-footedly for the signing of all of the compensation contracts between the carriers and the Railroad Administration was well received in local railroad quarters yesterday. Operators and bankers have been deploring the fact that so much time has been lost in executing these instruments, and it is understood that in some instances this has militated against some very necessary refinancing. If the majority of the contracts can be signed within sixty days, as suggested by the Director General of Railroads, it is generally admitted that the railroad situation will at least have one definite prop to lean against in its period of uncertainty.

Buying Power Evident.

Baltimore & Ohio at the opening of the stock market yesterday was in fair demand, and following the placing of several orders, there was a rush to cover by those who had sold short on the rumor that the directors might not decide to pay 2 per cent. or both the common and preferred stock, which served to advance the quotation 2 points. Later in the day there were some offerings of stock and the common sold off 45¼, but recovered to 46 at the close. In the late trading there was substantial buying of Reading, which advanced to 78½ at the close and lead the majority of the rails in an upward movement, which apparently reflected what might be interpreted at least as a momentary restoration of confidence in these issues. Other railroad shares which displayed underlying strength and moved upward were Texas & Pacific, Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, New York Central, and Pennsylvania.

TO OPPOSE ALIEN RIGHTS IN MEXICO

Carranza Sends Envoy to Paris to Seek Support for Radical Property Doctrines.

HITS AMERICAN INVESTORS

American Oil Interests Send E. L. Doheny to Combat Proposals at Peace Table.

The Mexican Government is planning retaliatory measures against the action of the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico in consolidating all the interests having conflict with the Carranza Government. An American delegation will make representations at the Peace Conference at Versailles, asking for the abatement of the present unsettled conditions in Mexico and the firm establishment of the property rights of foreigners, and it was learned yesterday that Alberto Pani, who recently sailed for France as the representative of the Mexican Government, will have entire charge of presenting the case of his country, which is expected to stand in opposition to the contention of American business men.

With him when he sailed was a large delegation of Mexicans, many of whom it is understood will be directly associated with him in his endeavor to have the ideas of the new Mexican Constitution incorporated as a principle of international law. Large as this delegation is, however, it is believed here that additional lawyers will be dispatched from Mexico in the near future to give their support to Pani's proposals.

It is said that the plans which the Mexican representatives hope to offer before the Peace Conference will be revolutionary as regards the custom of nations. The chief point which Pani has been instructed to present is the so-called Carranza doctrine which was enunciated by President Carranza in a message to the Mexican Congress on Sept. 1 last. This is to the effect that no nation shall have the right to interfere in the affairs of another country even where the property rights of citizens in a foreign country are in question, that being the province only of the country in which the rights are held.

Another Carranza Contention.

Pani will also support another Carranza contention that a Government by alteration of its constitution can legally take such properties within its borders as the demands of the Government may indicate. It is the belief of the Mexican President that in such cases there can be no appeal to an outside nation which may feel that its citizens are being discriminated against, this being a question which only the courts of the country can determine.

This doctrine was submitted at the International Labor Conference at Laredo, Texas, recently for ratification, but after consideration it was turned down by the delegates, mainly because of the opposition of the American representatives.

The proposals of Carranza are in keeping with the new Mexican Constitution which was adopted more than a year ago, and in which was set forth the principal that all the subsoil rights in Mexico were inherently the property of the Mexican Government and that they never could have been sold to foreign interests. Where such sales were made it is maintained that they were in contravention to the rights of the Mexican Government and therefore could not be legal. This applies not only to the purchase of subsoil rights by foreigners after the passage of the Mexican Constitution, but is retroactive to the extent of application in all cases where foreigners hold such rights.

It was to support this idea that the Carranza doctrine was promulgated. It is hoped that Pani can now have the Peace Convention ratify the proposals Peace Conference ratify the proposals the Carranza Government had with foreigners will be at once settled by international decree. The Mexican Government does not consider that its proposals are confiscatory, but a contrary view is held by the Governments whose citizens have made investments in Mexico. Several sharp notes have been dispatched to Mexico on this subject by both the American and British Governments.

Sees Advantage for Mexico.

Pani, it is believed, hopes to have an advantage over the delegates from this country in that he may be able to obtain a seat at the peace table as the representative of one of the neutral nations. Steps have already been taken looking toward this end. The American representatives, on the other hand, will have no official standing, their hope being that they will be called before the Peace Conference to describe conditions as they have been found in Mexico. It was said yesterday by an authority on Mexican affairs that there might be a stumbling block to Pani's aspirations in that Great Britain will not recognize the Carranza Government until certain confiscated British properties have been restored.

The National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico is steadily advancing its cause. Yesterday afternoon the oil interests identified with the association appointed as their delegate to Paris E. L. Doheny, President of the Mexican Petroleum Company. Together with several other oil men he went to Washington last night to arrange for passports. Mr. Doheny expects to sail on Feb. 1. Whether the other representatives of the association will sail at the same time is not certain. Some of them have not yet been appointed. Cornelius F. Kelley, who is expected to represent the mining interests, may leave for France a little earlier.

The State Department, it is said, is thoroughly conversant with the plans of the American Association, and is understood to have said that the last note of President Wilson to the Carranza Government, in which he described the proposed enforcement of the subsoil provisions of the Mexican Constitution as confiscatory, was a document on which it was prepared to stand.

COTTON MARKET IRREGULAR.

Shows Strength in Forenoon, but Drops Sharply in Afternoon.

Yesterday's cotton market was highly irregular. Starting firm, it rose 30 to 40 points in the forepart of the session, mainly on cheerful reports from Liverpool, where both futures and spots were strong, and on a fairly considerable amount of short covering by local traders, who seemed entirely satisfied to accept the more optimistic foreign attitude. The South again sold, but its selling was neither large in volume nor aggressive in character, and was quite overshadowed by the buying, which dominated the market and controlled the price movement.

The improvement abroad was undoubtedly in response to the announcement that the British Cotton Control Board has removed some of the restrictions on manufacturers. Local interests took this to mean that the export movement here will quicken, and as the slowness of exports has been one of the chief retarding factors for some time, this was considered bullish.

But the strength was short lived. In the early afternoon buying began to fall off and in the last hour selling became general and fairly heavy. With demand satisfied, the bears found but little opposition, and hedge selling from the South and a resumed output of short contracts by many of the ring traders, who had covered early in the day, sent quotations down sharply. At the low point January was off 100 points from the previous closing, March was down 46 points and July was off 54 points. Just before the end a slight rally occurred, but even with this quotations finished 25 to 55 points under Tuesday's ending.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

BANKS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

The election of several new officers for banking institutions took place yesterday. Richard L. Morris became a Vice President of the Bankers Trust Company and will be connected with the bond department. He was formerly with the banking firms of Potter, Choate & Prentice and Kean, Taylor & Co., and the commercial paper house of Blake Brothers & Co. Mr. Morris lately served as Chairman of the Committee on Legislation of the Investment Bankers Association.

Alfred G. Fletcher was elected Vice President of the American Foreign Banking Corporation. He was with the Canadian Bank of Commerce for seven years and took part in the organization of the Metropolitan Bank at the time of its merger with the Bank of Nova Scotia in 1914. The American Foreign Banking Corporation was formed last year by several of the local banks to extend banking facilities abroad. Amos F. Hill of Boston was elected by the Executive Committee of the Clearing House section of the American Bankers Association as Secretary, succeeding Jerome Thralls. Mr. Thralls resigned recently to become Secretary and Treasurer of the Discount Corporation of New York. Mr. Hill was formerly connected with the Traders National Bank of Lowell, Mass.

TO MOVE CLEARING HOUSE.

New Quarters to be Provided in Stock Exchange Building.

At the weekly meeting of the Governors of the Stock Exchange yesterday it was decided that the Clearing House of the Exchange, now more than a block from the big board, should be housed in the basement of the Exchange building, which runs through the block between Broad and New Streets, and which houses not only the trading floor but executive offices, libraries, and a luncheon club.

After yesterday's meeting a Governor of the Exchange said that the decision had been reached after considerable discussion, and that the change meant that the necessity of transporting large quantities of valuable negotiable securities through busy thoroughfares would be abolished. The new plan will be carried out as soon as possible.

SAYS CHINA WANTS AMERICAN EXPORTS

Consul General Appeals to Business Men to Enter Far East Market.

ENCOURAGES FOREIGN TRADE

Assistant Secretary Long Says State Department Wishes to Stimulate Expansion.

Chao Hsin Chu, Chinese Consul General at San Francisco, in an address made yesterday at a luncheon of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, held at the Hotel McAlpin, said that the Chinese market offered big opportunities to enterprising exporters. Breckenridge Long, Third Assistant Secretary of State, who was the other speaker, pledged the full support of the State Department to the campaign for overseas trade. More than 300 representatives of the country's large manufacturing export concerns were present.

"Commercial opportunities everywhere in China are awaiting you American business men, Consul General Hsin Chu said, "You have been building up your foreign trade in Latin-American countries, but you have not paid proper attention to your foreign trade in the Far East. Prior to the war Germany had developed a large trade in the Orient. The German interests have now been driven out of business and it is a good opportunity for America to enlarge her foreign trade there, and such replacement, I can assure you, will become permanent and most acceptable."

Discussing China's tariff the Consul General said that even if American manufacturers chose to "dump" their products into the Chinese market no protective tariff law would be invoked. "On the contrary," Hsin Chu said, "I am inclined to believe that we should enjoy the dumping, for we are always anxious to obtain large quantities of foreign manufactured articles to satisfy the universal needs and wants."

The Consul General recommended that agencies should be given to Chinese firms, as local conditions and different dialects would discourage foreign salesmen in the interior of China; that direct trade should be facilitated between the two countries and the so-called compradore system dropped owing to its indirectness, and that to remedy this Chinese merchants should be allowed to become "partners" instead of compradores through some sort of American-Chinese mercantile company, to be formed for the purpose of securing better means of co-operation on the part of Chinese merchants. Mr. Chu's recommendations also included a comprehensive and sustained advertising campaign in Chinese newspapers and periodicals to push the sale of American goods, and exhibit rooms in Chinese commercial centres.

Assistant Secretary of State Long said that the Department of State desired to encourage and stimulate American foreign trade, and in pursuance of its policy applied every legitimate means to accomplish its object. "Industry in the United States," Mr. Long said, "cannot stand still. It must either expand or contract, and its influence upon the life of the entire country is so powerful that we must secure for it a normal rate of development, and, to that end, provide it with the room for expansion which only foreign trade can furnish. Our international interests today are greater than they ever have been before. We have been living in stirring times, we have been in an international atmosphere, and I wonder whether, when it is over, if there will not remain to us, individually and nationally, something of those emotions which we had."

Mr. Long added that during the last Summer there was established in the Foreign Trade Adviser's office of the State Department a new economic intelligence section, which is equipped to deal with the economic and commercial questions which are more and more frequently arising.

FEW NEW STEEL ORDERS.

Buyers Show Disposition to Wait for Lower Prices.

New orders in the steel trade are coming in slowly, according to this week's reports from trade centres, and buyers continue to show a disposition to wait for lower prices. Mill operations in different quarters of the industry show wide variations in comparison with normal times, ranging from 50 per cent. to 90 per cent. of capacity. The Iron Age says:

"With new bookings less than half of current production, the industry is measurably nearer the moment of total deflation from the war basis. In many lines of finished steel there is not much over a month's work ahead. The encouraging feature from the buyer's standpoint is that labor now idle shows a disposition to resume at reduced wage rates, and firm offers for steel at below present levels are now the more likely to lead to successful negotiation.

"Threats of strikes in the Pittsburgh district seem unwise. Pig iron makers have been piling iron; melters are for the greater part in possession of three months' supplies; high cost plants are contemplating shutdowns, and there is no hesitation to blow out furnaces for relining and repairs. January pig iron production will be considerably below that of December.

"While in the heavier tonnage items of finished steel, production is at a low ebb, in sheets, tin plate, and wire products, there is comparative activity, mills averaging 70 per cent. of capacity. Nor is the country as a whole on a uniform manufacturing basis, the larger Chicago mills operating at 70 to even 90 per cent. of capacity, while in the East less than 50 per cent. is the rule."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"In Pittsburgh, steel works are operating at an average of 70 per cent. capacity. About thirty blast furnaces have been blown out in the East, and South Buffalo furnaces are again becoming a powerful factor in the New York pig iron market, owing to the fact that the freight rate from Buffalo to the metropolitan territory is lower than the rate from Pittsburgh. Inquiries for 5,000 tons of foundry iron for delivery during the first half are now pending in New York. Moderate export activity continues. Japan, which is actively pushing its shipbuilding program, has placed 35,000 tons of plates in the Chicago district and ordered 10,000 tons of pig iron."

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United States Express Company announces that the sixth dividend in course of liquidating the company, amounting to $1.25 per share of stock, will be paid Feb. 21 to shareholders of record Feb. 1.

The Western Gas and Electric Company has applied to the California Railroad Commission for authority to sell $450,000 of its 5 per cent. bonds at a price not less than 85.

Directors of the Republic Iron and Steel Company have decided not to issue a quarterly report covering the three months ended Dec. 31 last. The necessity for additional time to adjust accounts for the annual statement and the uncertainty about tax legislation caused the decision.

The Irving National Bank has prepared a pocket edition of its commercial map of Latin America for the convenience of commercial travelers.

OPPOSED TO LUXURY TAX UPON CLOTHING

Manufacturers in Convention Declare Against Proposed Measure.

DON'T WANT WAGES LOWER

Wholesale and Retail Clothiers Deny That 1919 Fall Prices Will Be Lower Than Those Last Year.

Following a conference between manufacturers and retailers, a report was made yesterday to the annual convention of the National Association of Clothiers, held at the Hotel Astor, covering uniform credit terms, in which it was recommended that a study of the subject be made with a view to deciding whether it was possible to establish a basis for uniform terms, either net or regular, or both. The report emphasizes that there should be uniformity in either one or both of these methods.

The convention approved lifting the ban now prescribed by the style regulations for the Spring of 1919 on double-breasted suits, and on golf suits, where the latter were made with knickerbockers, but not including golf suits made with vests and long trousers. The association also went on record as opposing the so-called luxury tax on furnishings, and also a similar tax on clothing, if the latter should finally be incorporated in the Internal Revenue bill now in conference.

The manufacturers passed a resolution suggesting that the Chamber of Commerce of the United States send a commission to Europe, composed of men of high standing, to study and report upon industrial conditions. David Kirschbaum of Philadelphia stated that a fund of $150,000 had been set aside by the manufacturers to investigate fraudulent advertising and seek its correction, even to the extent of legal prosecution of offenders who misstate the quality and values of their goods through public advertisements.

It was the sense of the convention that neither an increase in the hours of labor nor a reduction of wages was desirable, but attention was called to the fact that the minimum wage in Great Britain for clothing workers was for women $3.50 per week and for men not more than double that sum. Under this wage scale, it was said, American manufacturers could not successfully compete with the English, despite the fact that American clothing is the best made in the world.

Samples to be Larger.

Following a brief discussion, it was decided to return to the old sample sizes of 6½ by 9 inches double, or 13 by 18 single, which is just double the size which has been in operation during the war. This course was taken because there is no longer vital necessity for the conservation of material. A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered by the convention to the War Service Committee for the excellent work it did during its life.

Mr. Kirschbaum told the members of the association that the American clothing industry alone now disposes of $600,000,000 of manufactures annually, and that if domestic manufacturers could successfully export clothing, the business would be doubled. The next convention will be held in Chicago, Dec. 16 and 17 of this year. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Ludwig Stein, Chicago; Vice Presidents, Jacob J. Abt, Max H. Friedman, David Kirschbaum, Max L. Holtz, E. R. Smith, and Eli Strause; Treasurer, Max L. Wile, and Secretary, William R. Corwine.

In connection with views attributed to some who attended the convention of the National Association of Clothiers on Tuesday that the price of men's clothing would probably be lower next Fall, Ludwig Stein, President of the National Association of Wholesale Clothiers, and Andreas E. Burkhardt, Vice President of the National Association of Retail Clothiers, made the following statement yesterday:

"In our judgment prices of men's and young men's clothing for the Fall of 1919 will be the same as the opening prices of the Fall of 1918, or will possibly be slightly higher on trustworthy merchandise. While prices of the raw material, that is, the cloth for the Fall season, will be offered at slight concessions over prices which prevailed for the Fall season of 1918, conversion cost has advanced materially.

Stocks Nearly Exhausted.

"The statement made in this morning's TIMES that the stocks of the retail clothiers were 25 per cent. higher than normal is erroneous. The business since the signing of the armistice has been exceptionally good, and stocks of the better kinds of merchandise are pretty well exhausted, particularly in suits, as has been evidenced by the fact that larger operators have been obliged to replenish their stocks of heavyweight suits to considerable extent during the last sixty days. A conference of the National Association of Retailers and the National Association of Manufacturers was not held yesterday, as reported, but was held today, and many matters of interest were discussed. Among these was the question of price reduction, which was covered by the following resolution:

"It is the sense of this convention that an article published in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning to the effect that prices for men's clothing will be cheaper for Fall and Winter was not reflected in the deliberations of the convention, and does not represent the views of the delegates. The fact that the manufacturing costs are higher at this time than ever before does not give encouragement to the theory of lower prices."

Samuel Weill, retiring President of the National Association of Clothiers, added the following statement:

"The conference bases this recommendation on the apparently certain outlook and on facts so far as they can at this time be determined, that the elements that go into cost of production do not warrant even the hope that prices for next Fall can be any lower than for the season just closing. In fact, there is a possibility, and it cannot be determined at this time, that prices generally speaking, at least for worthy merchandise, will be higher rather than lower."

Samuel Weill of Rochester, N. Y., presided at the annual dinner held last night in the grand ballroom of the Astor. More than 1,000 clothing and fabric manufacturers, jobbers, and retailers were present. Felix Frankfurter, Chairman of the War Labor Policies Board, who had as his subject, "The Constitutionalizing of Industries," discussed the future relations of capital and labor. Referring to the clothing manufacturing industry, he said that the subject of seasonable occupation "warranted" close study, since it was bad for the morale of workers to be idle periodically. Mr. Frankfurter congratulated the association upon having formed a labor bureau.

Edmund James Cattell of Philadelphia said that he saw a big future for American trade. Ludwig Stein, President-elect of the association, expressed the belief that a wonderful prosperity would exist in this country during the next few years. D. Thomas Curtin of the Northcliffe Press, London, told of his experiences as a war correspondent in eleven campaigns, covering seven countries.

Oppose Skip-Stop System.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 22.—Unless the Public Service Railway Company abolishes the skip-stop system within the city limits of New Brunswick, the city's Fire Department will be used to compel compliance with the demands of the City Commission, Commissioners E. F. Houghton and J. J. Feaster declared today. Fire trucks will be run along the trolley tracks in front of each car, stopping at every corner and thus compelling the cars to stop. City Attorney T. F. Hagerty declared the trolley company had been profuse in its promises to abolish the system, but that nothing had been done, so the Commissioners decided on drastic action.

MOVE FOR SHIP CONTRACTS.

Senators Want Administration to Revoke Ban on Foreign Orders.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A resolution to require the Shipping Board to revoke all orders preventing ship construction in America for foreign account was introduced today by Senator King of Utah, Democrat, and was referred to the Commerce Committee.

President Wilson's failure to remove such restrictions was criticised by Senator Jones of Washington, who declared it unjustifiable and "almost criminal." Such a policy, he said, not only compelled shipyards to suspend operations, throwing thousands of men out of employment, but resulted in these contracts being awarded to firms in other countries.

"Foreign shipbuilding contracts are sought in American shipyards," said Senator Jones. "These shipyards cannot take these contracts, because they cannot get a permit to do so from their own Government. American shipyards are closed. American labor is idle. American resources are unused. Hundreds of millions of foreign capital wanting to come here is directed to foreign countries. Why? Because an American President, using the power given to him to carry on the war, refuses for undisclosed reasons to permit our people to take those contracts and build these ships. No reason is given to justify this action. None can be given to justify it."

DISCUSSES GOMPERS' STAND

Henderson Says American Federation First Urged Labor Conference.

BERNE, Jan. 21.—Arthur Henderson, who is representing British labor at the International Socialist and Labor Conference here, issued today a statement relative to the refusal of Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, to attend the meeting. He said that it was the American Federation which first proposed a world labor and Socialist conference, to be held at the same time as the Peace Congress.

The Social Democrats of Russia have indicated their sympathy with the movement in a message to the Organization Committee of the meeting. They are represented by M. Axelrod.

Finland has sent M. Koto and M. Utolijok as delegates, and Esthonia is represented by M. Martna and M. Köstner. The Swedish Socialists are expected to send Hjalmar Branting, and two other prominent Socialists, probably Moller and Engberg.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 22.—The German Social Democrats, according to a dispatch from Berlin, will be represented at the International Socialist and Labor Conference at Berne by Herman Müller, Otto Wels, and Richard Molkenbuhr.

St. Lawrence Still Open to Ships.

QUEBEC, Jan. 22.—Never in the history of navigation on the St. Lawrence has a steamer left Quebec for the open sea so late in the season as the Canadian Voyager, which departed today for Halifax and then overseas. The St. Lawrence is ordinarily ice locked here at this time of year.

To the Holders of Five Per Cent. First Mortgage Gold Bonds OF The Northwestern Terminal Railway Company

Issued under the Mortgage indenture dated July 1st, 1906 (and supplements dated September 27th, 1909, and January 2, 1915), made by said Company to The Mercantile Trust Company (now Bankers Trust Company), as Trustee:

The Northwestern Terminal Railway Company (herein called the Terminal Company) has defaulted in the payment of the semi-annual interest due January 1, 1918, July 1, 1918, and January 1, 1919, upon the above issue of bonds. The 1916 and 1917 State taxes upon its property are unpaid and delinquent. We are advised that its terminal railway properties in and near Denver, Colorado, were taken, and now are, under Federal control. All the property of The Denver and Salt Lake Railroad Company (herein called the Salt Lake Company) was placed in a creditor's bill receivership in the District Court of Adams County, Colorado, in August, 1917, and such receivership is still in effect, except that the railway and transportation system of the Salt Lake Company is in Federal control. Under existing agreement whereby the Salt Lake Company occupied and used (and the Federal Railroad Administration is now occupying and using) properties of the Terminal Company, the Salt Lake Company agreed (in effect) to pay, as rental, among other things, the interest upon the Terminal Company's First Mortgage Bonds and taxes upon its property.

The undersigned, holding and representing large amounts of the First Mortgage Bonds of the Terminal Company, believe it to be essential that the holders of such bonds be in a position to take prompt and concerted action for the protection of their interests, and therefore have agreed to act as a committee for that purpose. This Committee is the result of an agreement whereby former committees organized separately, in New York and Denver, have been dissolved, and succeeded by the undersigned.

It will be to the advantage of the Bondholders promptly to deposit their Bonds with the Committee in order to participate in the benefits to be gained by concerted action on the part of the majority of the Bonds. Bondholders are therefore urgently requested to deposit their Bonds, with the January 1, 1918, and subsequent, coupons, on or before March 1st, 1919, with The International Trust Company, Denver, Colorado, the Depositary under an agreement, dated December 18th, 1918, providing for such deposits; or with Bankers Trust Company, 16 Wall Street, New York, the Agent of the Depositary. Transferable certificates of deposit will be issued therefor.

The Committee will promptly pay any interest which may be received by it on the Deposited Bonds to the holders of the certificates of deposit representing the Bonds in respect whereof such payments of interest shall be made, deducting any income tax required to be withheld.

Copies of the Deposit Agreement may be obtained by application either to the Depositary or to its Agent above mentioned.

PROPOSE NEW LAWS TO AID STATE BANKS

Banking Council Would Admit Savings Institutions to Federal Reserve.

OTHER FEATURES OUTLINED

Also Provide for Departmental Banks to Operate Under National Charter.

The United States Council of State Banking Associations has mailed to all banks operating under State charters a bulletin which sets forth proposed legislation affecting such banks which is now under consideration by the Federal Reserve Board. A résumé of the bulletin says:

"The proposed legislation is divided under three heads. First, to admit to membership in the Federal reserve system mutual savings banks, which have no capital stock, and stock savings banks with insufficient capital stock to entitle them to become members under the existing law, provided the surplus of mutual savings banks and the combined capital and surplus of such stock savings banks are equal to the capital stock required of national banks in the places where such savings banks are located.

"Second. Authorizing the board by regulation to prescribe the conditions under which time deposits may be classed as savings deposits and providing that two-thirds of the 3 per cent. reserve against savings deposits may consist of United States bonds issued since April 24, 1917, or United States certificates of indebtedness deposited with the Federal Reserve Bank.

"Third. Authorizing savings banks which convert into national banks to maintain separate savings departments and authorizing national banks to establish separate savings departments to be operated in substantial conformity with State laws.

"While two of these proposals relate especially to the membership of savings banks in the Federal Reserve system, the outstanding feature is the third proposal, which in effect creates a departmental bank under national charter, national banks being now authorized to conduct both a commercial and a trust business under certain conditions.

"Under the third proposal it would also be possible to organize a national bank solely for the purpose of conducting a savings business against which two-thirds of the required reserve could be carried in Government bonds. In such event it is more than probable that the use of the word 'savings,' both in corporate title and advertising, would be upheld by a Federal court, whether or not in contravention of State law.

"The Federal Reserve Board has taken no action or expressed any opinion in regard to these proposals, but has consented to their circulation in order that the State bankers of the country may have an opportunity to express their views on the subject. In this action the board has evidence a desire to co-operate with the State institutions."

Very little doing in storage eggs on the open market. Most of the dealers have discontinued their use, and there are some lots offering for which it is not easy to find buyers at recent prices. PLAN FOR CHEAPER FOOD.

Produce Exchange Asks President to Remove War Restrictions.

The New York Produce Exchange directed an appeal to President Wilson yesterday asking him to take prompt action to remove the present war restrictions on food products and to discontinue price-fixing as now applied to hogs, grain, and similar commodities. Conditions of supply and demand, it was asserted, should now be allowed to govern prices. If these were to be permitted full sway the Exchange believes that there would be brought about a material reduction in the cost of living. With reference to wheat a special memorandum was added to the resolutions adopted by the Exchange in which it was asked that the present method of handling the 1918 wheat crop and the price for the same remain as at present. With reference to special agreements the resolutions said:

"In cases where the Government is obligated, either by law or by agreements entered into in good faith, to maintain prices, we are in favor of an honorable fulfillment on the part of the Government of such obligations up to the present time, but not beyond. Such obligations should be at once terminated or canceled, and just an equitable adjustment should be made to provide for any actual bona fide loss accruing under such agreements, believing that such a course would be wiser and economically safer, as well as more just and equitable, than to maintain the prices at a high and artificial level to the benefit of about 30 per cent. producers against about 70 per cent. consumers who are now suffering from the high cost of living, which we believe is not justified by the actual conditions of supply and demand now existing."

TELLS OF WAGE INQUIRY.

Consumers' League Reports Findings in the Case of Working Girls.

The Consumers' League made public yesterday a report of a survey of the cost of living of girls employed in Manhattan and Brooklyn. The report says that in proportion to costs the girls in most cases were receiving the same wages that were paid in 1916. According to the report, the cost of living has increased as follows: Clothing for women, 112 per cent; food, 65 per cent; fuel and light, 25 per cent; incidentals, 62 per cent.

The League found 3,016 girls receiving less than $12 a week. Of these 45 per cent were receiving less than $10 a week; 30 per cent less than $9, and 11 per cent less than $8. The statistics, it says, were gathered at the high water mark of wages in 1918 from employment files where trained workers register. The industrial history of the girls, the report says, showed a lack of standarization and failure to recognize long years of faithful work. Cases are cited of girls who after working 15 and 20 years receive $8 and $11 a week.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

There was a firm tone to values at the close of the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final prices were substantially higher in the standard industrials and rails as the result of an active demand which was more than sufficient to absorb what stock was offered. This demand made for a general advance in the final half hour and had a favorable influence on those stocks which had shown a reactionary tendency previously. Reactions and rallies alternated throughout the session but price improvements, except in a few issues, were maintained.

Dress Industry Service Bureau.

A service bureau, to furnish data to buyers who come to this city, has been installed by the Associated Dress Industries of America. The information to be given will include the kinds of goods made in this market by individual manufacturers, the range of prices for each concern, the character of garments made and such other facts as may be found useful. A questionnaire on the subject will be sent today to all manufacturers who are members of the association.

Variety in Gray Goods Trading.

More than the usual variety of constructions were dealt in in the local gray goods market yesterday but the trend of prices was downward. Now that Government competition is out of the way, the variations in the quotations on cotton seem to be more of a factor in influencing the prices of the fabrics. Among yesterday's print cloth sales were 39-inch 72-76s and 68-72s at 14½ and 12 cents respectively and 38½-inch 64-60s at 10 cents. In sheetings 48 square, 36-inch, 4 yard goods were sold at 12½ cents. In spite of the strike in the waist and dress industry, a fair amount of voiles was disposed of but at considerable concessions. There were also sales in some volume of sateens, twills and low counts.

SPIRITED BIDDING FOR FURS.

European Buyers Make Big Purchases at St. Louis Sale.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 22.—Eighty thousand civets were offered at the opening of the fur sale this morning, and they attracted many buyers. They sold at an advance of 10 per cent. and for a total of $15,000. The day's sales amounted to $350,000, making the total for the three days $2,300,000.

Twenty thousand house cats sold from 9 to 90 cents each, for a total of $10,000; 5,500 ringtails sold quickly for $5,700; 500 swift fox went for $750; 300 hair seals brought $2,000; 400 mountain lions sold for $1,500; 1,700 leopard and leopard cats brought over $8,000; 1,400 bears sold for over $20,000; 130 polar bears brought $3,000.

At the afternoon session 118,000 ermine attracted strong and steady bidding. American choice lots brought good advance prices. The entire offering brought about $235,000 at prices nearly the same as at the October auction.

There were some extra choice skins in the offering of 1,000 silver fox. Paris and London buyers bid heavily and contention was strong throughout this sale.

European buyers purchased well with considerable confidence in the market, declaring that Paris can absorb large quantities of the finest furs. Because of European shortage, buying was heavy. Buyers stated they expect the era of high prices to continue abroad, and see no reason why prices here should drop. American buyers expected prices to decline.

CUTS SEA FREIGHT RATES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Reduced ocean freight rates over various routes, including some special rates on commodities to Belgium, which are expected to aid in reconstructing the commerce of that country, were announced today by the Shipping Board. The new rates follow:

Cotton from American gulf ports to Ghent, $5.10 a hundred pounds; phosphate rock from Florida to Antwerp and Ghent, $40 a gross ton; cocoanut oil from North Atlantic ports to Antwerp (and Rotterdam), $50 a long ton; rosin from American ports to Liverpool, $2.80 a hundred pounds; pine tar and turpentine from Atlantic ports to Liverpool, $3 per hundred pounds; coal from American gulf ports to Chile, $16.50 a gross ton; coal from Hampton Roads to Hawaiian Islands, $20 a ton; tanning extracts from Curacoa to New York, $30 a long ton; barley from the Pacific Coast to the United Kingdom (for the Food Administration), $52.50 a short ton.

More Buying in the Drug Trade.

General resumption of buying is reported in the drug trade, and inquiries have increased. Drug and Chemical Markets will say today. Many products are lower, including acetanilid, carbolic acid, glycerin, mercury, and cocaine. Camphor has advanced owing to scarcity, and Russian ergot is higher. Prices of dyestuffs remain steady, with few exceptions. Some dealers have been unloading too rapidly and have sold at concessions in fear that still lower prices might cause heavy losses. Benzol has advanced. Toluol is very plentiful and the price is low. The Government still holds large supplies. There is new life in heavy chemicals, and prospects are brighter for larger domestic business and for export trade.

Combinations in Women's Hats.

Besides the combination of chrysanthemum braids with georgette there are also displayed combinations of lisere with georgette and pineapple braid in women's hats that range in price from $24 to $42 a dozen, according to the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America. A few of the medium-sized mushrooms in lisere with georgette crowns have thick layers of ostrich covering the entire upper brim. Moiré ribbon forms a prominent trimming feature on the lisere models. Wide ribbon flares on the crown in a contrasting shade and soft ribbon edges are seen. On the smaller shapes there are entire ribbon crowns.

In the Coat and Suit Trade.

There is very little activity in the women's coat and suit industry at present, and it is said by firms in this trade that the buying will not start until the retailers have purchased their Spring lines of dresses. The sales that are being made are relatively small in comparison with last year's business. This, however, is not causing much concern in the trade, as most of the business is looked for during the middle of next month. Conditions outside of the city are not as good as was anticipated, but it is expected that most of the buyers will come into the local market for their merchandise.

Larger Size Shirts Wanted.

In view of the lull in the shirt trade during the last two months of the past year, many of the manufacturers of men's shirts have been unloading their stocks, and in some cases reducing the price. This, it is said, accounts for the numerous shirt sales is now being held throughout the city. Although the sale of these goods has been exceptionally good in the retail stores during the past month, buyers are still holding off to a certain extent. Where orders were formerly received for shirts ranging from 14 to 14½ in size, retailers are now asking for the 15 and 15½ sizes. Many of these are being sold to men recently discharged from the service.

Wamsutta Sheeting Prices.

Watts, Stebbins & Co. have issued the following price list on Wamsutta wide sheetings, the figures representing a reduction of about 12½ per cent.:

Width.	Wamsutta.	New Bedford.	Percale.
42-in.	55½	50½	41½
5-4	58	59½	49½
50-in.	49½	42½	51½
6-4	45	45½	56½
63-in.	58½	61	71½
9-4	73½	76	88
10-4	81	83½	96
11-4	88½	91	$1.04

Have Advanced Prices.

In the local trade there has been a decided increase in the sale of leather handbags and suitcases. Orders that are being received from the New England States are very large, but in the West and on the Pacific Coast business is not as good as was expected. Some of the firms in this industry have advanced the prices on these goods that range from 50 cents to $2, depending upon the size and the quality of the material used in the construction of the article.

Fall Lines of Men's Hats.

During the last week many out-of-town buyers have been in the local trade looking over the Fall lines of men's hats. For the most part, the buying has been rather light, as the tendency seems to be to hold off for lower prices. Owing to the prevailing prices of silk, fur, and leather, it is the contention of the makers that there will not be any break in the market until the prices of these materials are much lower than what they are quoted at present.

Orders for Lace Curtains.

Lace curtain buyers who are now in town are devoting much attention to filling in orders for the Spring season. Owing to the depleted stocks in the retail stores, the merchandise that is now being sold embraces a wide range of patterns in various materials. Although there is still a big sale in the West for marquisette curtains and yard goods, more galls are being received of late for voiles. It is expected that after the inventories in the retail stores are completed more buyers will be in the market for these goods.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The Irving National Bank has issued a pocket edition of its commercial map of Latin America for the convenience of commercial travelers in those countries. It contains data of all kinds useful in facilitating and extending trade.

Concerns engaged in making floor coverings have formed the National Wholesale Floor Coverings Association to promote better business conditions for those engaged in the trade. The officers are: President, L. B. Clough; First Vice President, W. C. Hanton; Second Vice President, H. J. Alexander; Secretary, E. W. Goodman, and Treasurer, H. E. Stickel.

Another of the schools of foreign trade, established at various centres, is to be organized by the Central Y. M. C. A., 55 Hanson Place, Brooklyn, under the direction of E. E. Pratt, formerly with the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Lectures will be given weekly on eighteen Wednesdays.

Brown & Macrae, resident buyers of 1,270 Broadway, have added the following accounts: Miller, Rhoades & Swartz of Norfolk, Va., and the Block & Kuhl Company of Peoria, Ill.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Considerable activity characterized the realty market yesterday, the chief feature of which was a report that the National Park Bank had practically closed negotiations for additional property on Fulton and Ann Streets, for the purpose of enlarging its Broadway bank building in the near future. In the Bronx the resale of the Great Northern Apartments closed a $500,000 deal and Manhattan was productive of several good transactions.

The officials of the National Park Bank declined to affirm or deny the reported deal, but it was stated that the property to be acquired includes the well-known Mouquin's restaurant building and the old Brosnan's cafe, one of the oldest establishment of its kind in the city, at 151 Fulton Street, adjoining the bank building. The latter property, fronting 23 feet by 818 feet deep is owned by the Alexander Ventura estate and the reported deal involves the taking of a long lease by the bank. Adjoining is the Mouquin Restaurant property, at 149 Fulton Street, running through to 20 Ann Street, 23.1 feet on each street and 134.8 feet in depth. This is owned by the Pauline A. Morgan Estate. The old building at 18 Ann Street was purchased by the National Park Bank in 1917.

With the acquirement of this additional property the bank would control a frontage of 137.10 feet on Fulton Street and 114.14 feet on Ann Street. The bank building has a frontage of 59.4 feet on Broadway, flanked by the St. Paul building on the Ann Street corner and the old structure on the immediate Fulton Street corner.

The Great Northern Apartments Held at $500,000 Resold to Syndicate.

The Great Northern Apartments in the Hunts Point section of the Bronx, recently sold by the Johnson Estate to Frederick Brown, operator, have been resold to the syndicate headed by Louis Cohen.

The porperty, which is assessed for taxation purposes by the city at $425,000 and was held at $500,000, consists of two six-story elevator apartments, occupying a plot 126 by 288 by irregular on 161st Street between Westchester and Hewitt Avenues.

There are eighty-two apartments and three stores in the two buildings, which show a gross rental of about $63,000 a year. It was an all-cash transaction, negotiated by Leitner Bruner and Starr.

At a substantial profit the Morgenstern Brothers Syndicate sold to Joseph Gulinsky its contract to purchase 2,109 Harrison Avenue. The property consists of a five-story modern apartment, occupying a plot 75 by 100, adjoining the corner of 180th Street, in the West Bronx section. It is fully rented, shows an annual income of $14,000, and was held at $90,000.

YOU CAN DUPLICATE
THIS WOMAN'S SUCCESS
IN SELLING.

Up to the middle of last month Mrs. Lucy R—— had never in all her life sold anything. She had a room to let which is how our head designer happened to meet her.

"So you design custom-made corsets?" remarked Mrs. R——. "I wonder if I could sell them?"

"Try it," was the suggestion. Next morning Mrs. R—— called at our office. We showed her how to fit. Next day she called on a woman whose name we gave her. The first week she took nine orders and made $36. Since then she has made steady gains.

Mrs. R—— is busy, happy, and independent. She is putting money in the bank. Wouldn't you like to hear her story from her own lips? We can offer similar opportunities to a few more women under 40. Write A 427, Times Downtown.

Education Notes.

The Teachers' Union will hold a meeting at 4 P. M. today at P. S. 62, Hester and Grand Streets. The subjects of discussion will be unionism and the salary bill of the Teachers' Union.

The Harlem Evening High School, 13 West 118th Street, will offer a free course in stenotypy, (machine shorthand,) beginning next month. Young men and women wishing to take this course may register during the week of Jan. 27.

The scholarships in Latin and in Greek offered by the New York Classical Club have been awarded as follows: The Latin scholarship to Miss Anna Meade of Curtis High School, with a percentage of 86.5; the Greek scholarship to Walter Ferriss of Erasmus Hall High School, with a percentage of 87. Mr. Ferriss is a nephew of Mrs. Ruth S. Russell of the Board of Education. The plan of the examination for the scholarships has been changed from the former plan of averaging the answer papers on examinations set by the Regents, chiefly because the dates for the Regents and for the College Entrance Board examinations conflicted. The examination prepared by a committee of the New York Classical Club is now a composite paper in each subject, and is somewhat more exacting than in the former plan. This explains why the percentages are not so high as they have been formerly.

A class in cooking is in session at Evening School 93, Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-third Street. Lessons in table setting and table serving are also given. The hours are from 7:45 to 9:45 P. M., on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

A special course in stenotypy is now being organized in the Washington Heights Evening High School, 145th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, for men and women. All those who desire to enroll may register any evening at the Principal's office on the fourth floor.

The following sites for school buildings were selected yesterday: Washington Avenue and 170th Street, adjoining P. S. 55, the Bronx; Longwood Avenue and Beck Street, opposite P. S. 39, the Bronx; Clarkson Avenue, East Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth Streets, Brooklyn, and Wool and Van Horn Streets, between Lewis Avenue and Laconia Street, Nassau Heights, Queens.

Mrs. Pauline Perlman, a teacher in P. S. 25, Manhattan, and Mrs. Lillian N. Viett, a teacher in P. S. 65, Manhattan, have been suspended for neglect of duty in absenting themselves from school.

A leave of absence without pay until Jan. 15, 1920, has been granted to Michael S. Lobenthal, of the Julia Richman High School, to serve as auditor with the United States Treasury Department.

A leave of absence with 40 per cent. of her pay has been granted to Anna G. Smith, a teacher in P. S. 74, Manhattan, from Feb. 1, 1919, to Jan. 31, 1920, inclusive, her application for a disability pension having been filed with the Board of Retirement.

FEAR A DEADLOCK IN GARMENT STRIKE

Leaders Declare Unless Employers Change Attitude Strike Will Continue.

CONFERENCE AT CITY HALL

Mayor Hylan Discusses Prospects of Arbitrating Trouble with Union Officers.

The outlook for a settlement of the waist and dress strike was not bright yesterday, according to union officers who declared that before there was a chance of arbitration either one side or the other must shift its position. The strikers say that 35,000 workers are idle.

Mayor Hylan conferred yesterday with Benjamin Schlesinger, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Solomon Seidman, a union officer. The Mayor wanted to know what could be done to bring about a speedy arbitration of their differences. Mr. Schlesinger pointed out that the manufacturers had refused to arbitrate the question of the right to discharge workers and for that reason he did not see how the Union could arbitrate. The trouble began, he said, over the renewal of the protocol under which the question of discharges was referred to a Board of Review. The workers held that with the passing of the protocol there passed also the means by which both sides got together and that there was no longer means to review actions that one side or the other considered detrimental to general welfare.

Mr. Schlesinger went into this phase of the question with the Mayor. He said afterward that the Mayor had been fair, but he did not think the Mayor would be able to do anything in the matter, in view of the stand taken by the Dress and Waist Manufacturers Association, and that the strike would continue. The union will conduct its efforts to have the points at issue reviewed by some board that will be acceptable to both sides.

Mr. Schlesinger said that he was seeking to have a group of Columbia University professors review the questions at issue and have them give an impartial view. Their answer to the contentions of both sides, the union leaders believe, will at least set the union right in public opinion.

Unless President Morris Weiss of the Manufacturers Association receded from the position he took several days ago in a letter to Mr. Schlesinger, it was said that the Columbia professors would not arbitrate the strike for the employers. The association then held that the time had passed when outsiders could decide upon questions about which they knew nothing, and which vitally affected its business. Mr. Schlesinger said Mayor Hylan promised that he would make every effort to see that the police did not act arbitrarily with the strikers.

It was reported yesterday that members of the employers association met quietly at the Waldorf-Astoria on Tuesday night and that it was the consensus of opinion that they were willing to arbitrate. This report was received by the workers with skepticism.

Strike meetings were held in several halls yesterday, and the work of picketing the shops was begun. It was reported that 350 independent manufacturers were ready to settle, and that they had asked for the demands of the workers. The latter are preparing to distribute thousands of circulars giving their side of the controversy.

Two striking garment workers, Rebecca Learner of 335 Crimmins Avenue and Rose Gold of 630 East 170th Street, were fined $5 each for disorderly conduct by Magistrate Sweetser in the Morrisania Court yesterday. The complainant in the case was Miss Minnie Varenelli, a dressmaker, of 148th Street near Third Avenue. She said that when she left her shop on Tuesday evening with two of her workers the strikers jeered at them and called them names.

The factories throughout the city, and especially those in the district between Twenty-third and Thirty-Eighth Streets in Manhattan, are being picketed by strikers chosen in rotation from the ranks. They have been repeatedly warned by the strike leaders that there must be no violence.

It is the contention of the manufacturers that the number out on strike is not as great as the strikers claim, and that only 12,000 workers voted for the strike.

SEEKS RUSSIA'S STATUS.

Railroad's Attorney Interposes Objections in Black Tom Litigation.

Charles A. Boston, counsel for the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, appeared before Federal Judge Mayer yesterday to challenge the right of Frederic R. Coudert to begin an action on behalf of the Russian Government for damages growing out of the Black Tom explosion. Mr. Boston called the court's attention to an alleged statement by President Wilson that there was no Russian Government, and told of his own efforts to obtain from the State Department information as to whether the United States recognized such a Government. The information sought, Mr. Boston said, was refused on the ground that it was contrary to precedent, but that the court, on application, would receive the information.

Mr. Coudert submitted a copy of a certificate signed by Secretary of State Lansing on Oct. 31, 1918, to the effect that this country, since July 5, 1917, had recognized Boris Bakhmeteff as Ambassador of the Russian Kerensky Government, and said that when Ambassador Bakhmeteff went abroad on Dec. 3 the embassy was turned over to Sergus Ughet as Chargé d'Affairs, and that he has since been recognized as the representative of the Russian Government by the United States.

Mr. Boston questioned the accuracy of this information and said that Kerensky was deposed on Nov. 7, 1917. He asserted that Bakhmeteff had never been recognized as Russia's spokesman in this country.

Judge Mayer said that he would give the matter consideration, but that he would hesitate before asking the State Department for information concerning the status of Russia, because such an inquiry might embarrass the Government's position at the Peace Conference. The threatened suit involves many millions.

PLAN TO REOPEN FERRY.

Business Men Pledge Fund to Operate Astoria Line.

John H. Delaney, Commissioner of Plants and Structures, at a meeting of business men of the upper west side of Manhattan and Harlem and of Astoria, yesterday at the Queens Chamber in Long Island City, to discuss the probable reopening of the Astoria and Ninety-second Street ferry, informed the men who want the ferry operated that he would oppose municipal ownership and also the granting of a subsidy.

"The New York and East River Ferry Company, which has the franchise for this ferry and has been operating it, wants $50,000 for each of its ferry boats," said Commissioner Delaney. "It would cost $20,000 to put each of them in repair. The Astoria terminal is assessed for only $70,000. I only believe in the city purchasing nonpaying properties in an emergency, and I do not believe such an emergency exists in this case, and I will oppose the purchase by the city."

The Yorkville Taxpayers' Association, the Harlem Market Association, the Twelfth and Nineteenth Ward Property Owners Association, the Astoria Taxpayers' Association, together with manufacturing concerns along the East River in Astoria, were represented. After the attitude of Commissioner Delaney was learned some of the business men of both Manhattan and Astoria pledged themselves to provide a fund to operate the ferry, for the use of teams and working people. This plan is now being worked out.

SAYS LOWER MEAT IS NEAR.

P. Q. Foy Declares Consumers Will Benefit by Drop This Week.

New York City is now receiving virtually a normal supply of milk, estimated by the Health Department to be 1,800,000 quarts daily, from the sources from which milk was obtained before the strike on Jan. 1 of members of the Dairymen's League, when they failed to agree with the distributers on the price for January milk. No milk at all was received by the distributers yesterday from points outside of the regular New York milk territory.

P. Q. Foy, of the Market Reporter, said yesterday that in view of the present wholesale prices consumers generally should reap a benefit of a general drop in retail prices in beef and other meats by the latter part of the week.

"Since the publication of the storage reports," he said, "prime beef has dropped from 3 to 5 cents a pound, while the lower grades are down from 5 to 6 cents a pound. Lamb and mutton are from 8 to 11 cents a pound lower than a week ago. Veal dropped from 8 to 10 cents, pork, heavy, has declined 6 cents and medium light pork has come down 4 cents a pound.

"Butter—creamery extra—which was 67½ cents Jan. 14, was 61½ cents to-day. The price of creamery extras has fallen from 70 cents Jan. 11 to 61½ cents to-day. Eggs, Western firsts, which were 68 cents a dozen Jan. 11, were quoted to-day at from 61 to 62 cents."

SAIL FROM HALIFAX.

Americans Forced to Go to Canadian Port to Get Fast Ships.

On account of many of the fast Atlantic liners turning around at Halifax instead of coming to New York, American travelers who want to get to England in a hurry are being compelled to make the long overland journey through snowclad Maine, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia to the northern port.

One hundred first-class passengers will leave the Grand Central Terminal at 10 o'clock this morning via Boston to embark on the White Star liner Olympic, which sails from Halifax for Liverpool on Saturday. Among them are E. J. Nally of the Marconi Company; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. B. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Paton, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Barber, and Colonel I. M. Lewis, the inventor of the machine gun which has done such good work in the war.

The passengers are due to arrive at Halifax at midnight tomorrow and remain in their sleeping cars until Saturday morning, when they will go on board the Olympic, which is scheduled to reach Liverpool early on the following Friday.

Begin Scott Nearing Trial on Feb. 3.

The trial of Professor Francis Scott Nearing and the American Socialist Society on indictments charging violation of the Espionage act will begin on Feb. 3 before Federal Judge Meyer. The charge against Nearing is based on his pacifist writings and that against the society for the publication of a collection of anti-war literature under the title of "The Great Madness." Professor Nearing is under $5,000 bail. Morris Hillquit is counsel for the defendants. Albert Paul Fricke, the agent of a German toy concern, under indictment for treason, will be arraigned for pleading next Tuesday.

FOOD RELIEF BILL AGAIN ATTACKED IN THE SENATE

RESENTS ORDERS BY CABLE

BILL STRONGLY SUPPORTED

Its Passage Today Is Expected, with About Twenty Votes Against It.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Passage tomorrow of the Administration bill for food relief in Europe was predicted tonight by leading advocates and opponents after another day of debate, which proceeded with only a few members in their seats. Polls taken by leaders today were said to show only about twenty votes in opposition to the measure.

The bi-partisan support of the $100,000,000 bill was further indicated today. Speakers urging passage of the measure included Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, Democrat, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Smoot of Utah and Kellogg of Minnesota, Republicans. Principal opponents in the day's debate were Cummins of Iowa and Sherman of Illinois, Republicans.

Declaring that the proposed appropriation was not for charity, Senator Hitchcock urged the Senate to aid President Wilson and his work at the Peace Conference by voting the fund. Its rejection, he declared, would involve repudiation of America's representatives.

Food Administrator Hoover, who has been severely attacked by opponents of the bill, was highly praised by Senator Hitchcock, and also by Senator Smoot. The Nebraska Senator said attacks on Mr. Hoover were "stabs in the back," and he joined Senator Smoot in commending the Food Administration's work in fixing live stock and meat prices, declaring both consumers and producers had been protected.

Senators' Assertions Clash.

"I have not any use for the packers' combine," Senator Hitchcock said. "I would be glad to support any measure that would result in bringing them under Government control, and I know Mr. Hoover would be, but if the word of the United States or of a recognized official of the United States has been given to the packers, and they have acted on it, it is our business to see that it is made good. Mr. Hoover under the powers intrusted to him by Congress, was under an obligation to use those powers for the purpose of stimulating all the energies necessary to win the war, and he did it."

"Does the Senator think that when Mr. Hoover, or the men who were in his employ, utilized the powers which were conferred upon them to put independents out of business, that was helping to win the war?" asked Senator Borah.

"No," replied Senator Hitchcock, "and I deny that he did it."

"I say that he did," insisted Mr. Borah. "I say that the evidence is sufficient to show that he did."

"I deny it," said Senator Hitchcock.

"I say he did," persisted Senator Borah.

"I deny it absolutely," retorted Senator Hitchcock. "I say that Mr. Hoover is coming out of this thing vindicated, with a reputation better than any other public official. In my opinion, Mr. Hoover stands in the hearts of the American people equal to any man in the United States. I am very sure that no member of the Senate running for President against Mr. Hoover would be able to poll as many votes as he would poll."

"I have not, any doubt," Senator Borah commented, "that there is no man who would be able to raise so large a campaign fund."

Russian Policy at Paris.

Senator Sherman said the agreement on a Russian policy at Paris proposed recognition of the Bolshevist Government, and in this connection he inveighed against Socialist propaganda, which, he said, was being forwarded by professors in nearly every American college. Denouncing these professors as "firebrands of sedition," Senator Sherman said some men of their type were attached to the American peace mission.

Senator Sherman called the proposed $100,000,000 appropriation "not a relief fund for starving nations, but a campaign fund for the President as a candidate for Chairman of the Peace League of the World."

"Strip off this insolent pretense that covers this appropriation; tell the truth about it once in a while, if you must shame his Satanic majesty in doing so," said the Illinois Senator. "I am tired unto death of the sickening pretense with which Senators condole and satisfy themselves in this chamber.

"A hundred million dollars is the first tribute we pay to a departure from the warnings in Washington's Farewell Address—how much more nobody knows. It is one continued round of appropriations.

PARIS, Jan. 23, (Associated Press.)—The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Montenegro has made public the following note:

"The King of Montenegro, learning of the tragic incidents now desolating his country, is anxious to stop the shedding of blood and has addressed a note to his people as follows:

"'To My Beloved People: I beg you to remain quietly in your homes and not oppose by arms troops which seek possession of the Government of our country.

"'I have received the highest assurances from high representatives of the allied countries that very soon a true opportunity will be afforded the Montenegrin people to pronounce freely on the political form of their future Government. For my part, tell them that I shall adhere to that decision with pleasure.'

"The message was approved by the Peace Conference yesterday, which authorized that it be sent to Montenegro."

SWIFT WOULD KEEP MEAT PRICES FIXED

LARGE STOCKS ON HAND

He Opposes Proposal to Have Government Take Over Ownership of Cars and Stock Yards.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Louis F. Swift, President of Swift & Co., packers, testifying before the House Interstate Commerce Committee today in opposition to Government ownership of refrigerator cars and stock yards, said that the regulation of meat prices by the Food Administration had been advantageous to the Government, the producer, and the consumer because it stabilized the market, prevented speculation and assured a continuous shipment of meat products abroad.

During his testimony, Mr. Swift admitted that he had large stocks of pork on hand—250,000,000 pounds. A drop of a cent in the price of pork, he said, would cost his firm $2,500,000.

One opinion expressed by Mr. Swift was that the critical time for both the producer and consumer still existed and that the regulation should be continued while the stabilization appeared necessary.

"Would the high prices of pork and meat have existed if the Food Administration had not fixed the prices?" asked Representative Sweet of Iowa.

"The prices might have been higher," replied Mr. Swift. "The Food Administration tried to stabilize prices to prevent a series of sensational declines and advances and to keep the price at an average level which would be fair both to the consumers and the producers."

"Then it accomplished a good thing for both?" asked Mr. Sweet.

"Yes, I think so."

"Should the regulation continue for a year or so?"

"Now is the most critical time," replied Mr. Swift. "The need is now as great as it was during the actual warfare. I should say that the regulation has been advantageous to the consumer, the producer, and the Government. It has been the only possible way to make shipments abroad."

Mr. Swift explained that there were 25,000 stockholders in Swift & Co., and that the majority of the stock of a capitalization of $150,000,000 was not owned by his family. In 1918 the firm earned $21,000,000 or 11.2 per cent. on the capital and surplus. The earnings in 1917 amounted to 22 per cent., in 1918 the profits for each $100 invested amounted to $1.76, whereas in previous years it was $3.98.

"I cannot make an exact answer to that, but I would say that more than 90 per cent. relates entirely to the packing industry proper," replied Mr. Swift. "Swift & Co. branched out into the buying and distribution of butter, eggs, and poultry but refrigeration was necessary and it was found to be a related part of our business. Nell, Libby & Nell, which was once owned by Swift & Co., became packers of fruits, and we have distributed them for them. That is our only connection with the distribution of anything outside of the packing line."

Yards Must Be Efficient.

"Will Government ownership of stockyards benefit the producer?" asked Mr. Sweet.

"It will make no difference to the producer who owns the stock yards if they are properly and efficiently conducted," replied Mr. Swift.

Mr. Swift disclaimed that the five big packers could control the price of meat on the hoof. He said that 35 per cent. of the beef killed went to the five big packers; that the independents use 35 per cent. of it and the remaining 30 per cent. was killed by the farmers and small men in different communities. He said that as far as he knew no packer had any interest in hotels; that his firm had refused to buy stock in hotel properties, although he believed that Mr. Armour, for some reason or other, had

ASSEMBLY ADOPTS 'DRY' AMENDMENT, 81 VOTES TO 66

REFERENDUM BILL KILLED

SENATE MAY VOTE TUESDAY

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—The Assembly ratified the Federal prohibition amendment tonight by a vote of 81 to 66 after a seven-hour session.

Similar action is expected in the Senate next Tuesday, following a caucus on Monday night, at which the Republicans will make the ratification resolution a party measure. Prohibitionists claim 27 votes in the upper house, one more than necessary to put New York State in the dry column.

Eleven Republicans, six of them from New York City, aligned themselves with the Democrats and Socialists against ratification. The New York men who voted negatively were John C. Hawkins, William W. Pellett, Herman Weiss, James H. Caulfield, Sol Ullman, and Joseph Steinberg. The remaining Republicans who voted against ratification were George Blakeley of Westchester, Nicholas J. Miller of Erie, John G. Malone and Clarence F. Welsh of Albany, and Edward J. Wilson of Westchester.

Defeat of the anti-prohibition forces was forecast in the first test of strength, when the McElligott Referendum bill, which the Democrats revived yesterday, was recommitted to the Judiciary Committee by a vote of 79 to 66.

Prohibition workers crowded the Chamber, and when partial victory had been assured them they congratulated Speaker Sweet on his stand in their favor. The Speaker predicted consummation of their fight in the Senate next week.

Every step for final action on ratification was contested by opponents of prohibition. When the Republicans had succeeded in obtaining a suspension of the rules to permit advancement and passage of the ratification resolution, they were faced with an amendment to the resolution, offered by Assemblyman McElligott, which proposed a referendum to the people before the question could be acted upon by the Legislature. This proposal was beaten, 83 to 65.

Immediately upon convening this morning the majority went into a caucus, which lasted an hour and forty-five minutes, before the referendum bill had been beaten and victory assured the "drys" through making ratification a party measure. The submissive bill was killed in caucus by a vote of 74 to 5. The Republicans who later refused to vote for ratification refused to attend the caucus.

No new arguments were advanced by either side in the lengthy debate that followed when the ratification resolution came up for adoption. Warning was given that illicit liquor stills would spring up throughout the country, that prohibition meant a transfer by the State of its police power to the Federal Government, and that ratification action meant a lessening of personal liberties.

Assemblyman McCue of New York delivered the most vehement speech against ratification. He served the warning that prohibition would bring illicit distilling of liquors and he attacked the clergy who had fought with the "drys."

"They have discarded the Ten Commandments and are now amending the Constitution," he declared. "They read the Bible no more, they are seeking to substitute the policeman's nightstick for the Bible of Jesus Christ."

Socialist Assemblyman Claessens, who followed McCue, deplored his "bitterness" and declared his attitude was one of inciting to riot. Claessens also declared that law cannot be enforced unless the sentiment of the people is back of it.

John Kennedy of Queens said it was his belief that the prohibitionists were financed by the Rockefeller Foundation. He added that it would mean the demoralization of labor throughout the country.

At least half of the $24,000,000 of State revenue, now obtainable from the excise tax, but which will be lost when prohibition takes effect, can be raised through greatly increased taxes on soft drinks, according to Senator Sage, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

While the Assembly was voting in favor of the national amendment today Senator Sage was holding a conference in his office with other legislative leaders on the question of obtaining more revenue, and it was the unanimous opinion of those present that ice cream sodas, grape juice, and other nonalcoholic drinks should be made to bear a heavy part of the taxation burden now borne by the "hard stuff."

A bill providing for increased taxes on all such drinks probably will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

Blockade Killed 500,000, German Government Asserts

BERLIN, Jan. 22, (Associated Press.)—It is announced officially by the Government that further investigation of mortality "due to the blockade", from the Autumn of 1916 until the end of 1918 shows that the figures were much higher than were at first estimated.

More than 500,000 deaths, it is said, were caused by malnutrition or under-nutrition. Only civilians are included in the list, which, says the announcement, "if it errs at all, it is by giving too low figures."

Only such cases were included, it is set forth, as were definitely established to have been due to the causes named. The officials intend to publish the material on which the investigations were based "to demonstrate that this is not propaganda, but strictly for the purpose of establishing the facts."

34 WOMEN WON AT GERMAN POLLS

Will Sit in the Assembly Which Will Frame the New Constitution.

EBERT PARTY'S VOTE 164

Predicted That Democrats Will Play a Big Part—Eisner Beaten in Bavaria.

BERLIN, Jan. 22, (Associated Press.)—The former National Liberal Party was the only party which elected no women delegates to the National Assembly.

The Majority Socialists elected 15 women, the Independents 3, the Democrats 5, the Clericals 7, and the Conservatives 4.

BASLE, Jan. 23.—Reports from the twenty-seven electoral districts in Germany, returning the full number of 421 members of the National Assembly, show that the Majority Socialists will have a plurality in the Assembly, with a total of 164 votes. The next highest number of members was returned by the Christian People's Party, the former Centrists, who will have 88 members.

The distribution of the members by parties will be:

Majority Socialists	164
Christian People's Party	88
Democrats	77
German National Party	34
Minority Socialists	24
German People's Party	23
Guelphs	4
Bavarian Peasants' League	4
Württemberg Bourgeois Party	2
Peasants' and Workmen's Democratic League	1

Kurt Eisner, the Bavarian Premier, failed to win a seat in the National Assembly in any of the constituencies in which he was a candidate.

Premier Ebert and Philipp Scheidemann have gone to Weimar to superintend the making over of the Court Theatre there, in which the Assembly is to meet.

Assembly Coalition Predicted.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—It is presumed here that the Majority Socialists and the Democrats, supported by an overwhelming majority of the people, will be in position to dominate the German National Assembly.

Among those whose seats are assured are Count Posadowsky, Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former Chief of Police Eichhorn, and Hugo Haase.

The Poles in Posen and the Danes in Schleswig refrained from taking part in the election. In Posen, out of 1,250,000 Poles entitled to vote, only 129,000 did so.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 21.—The elections for the German National Assembly have clearly demonstrated the ideas in the minds of the bulk of the people as to the future form of the German Government. By their votes they placed it beyond all doubt that they desire a democratic republic, freed of monarchial or Bolshevist influences.

The extremists on both wings have been heavily defeated. The strongholds of the Pan Germans have been stormed by the Democrats and the Spartacides have failed to reach any of their objectives. The Majority Socialists have not realized their expectations of two months ago.

For this disappointment, however, they were prepared. The disorders in Berlin immediately produced a certain reaction among many people who, though not in the least genuine Socialists, looked during the debacle of November to Ebert and Scheidemann as only men with sufficient authority over the masses of the people to restore the established order of society. But the failure of the Government to grapple with the Spartacides until the last moment weakened their faith in the Majority Socialists and provided

SAZONOFF, REJECTING WILSON PLAN, SAYS HE 'WILL NOT SIT WITH ASSASSINS'; OTHER LEADERS SAID TO BACK HIM

COUNCIL TAKES UP LABOR

Responsibility and Reparation for War Also Considered.

PERSHING TO ATTEND TODAY

PLANS FOR LEAGUE SHAPING

PARIS, Jan. 23, (Associated Press.)—The Supreme Council of the Peace Conference met again at 10:30 o'clock today, all the members being present, and definitely fixed upon four main subjects to be presented at the full conference on Saturday—first, international labor legislation; second, responsibility and punishments for the war; third, indemnities; fourth, internationalization of ports, waterways, and railways.

These subjects are not to be discussed in detail, but will be immediately referred to committees for study and report. The American members of these committees were selected at an extended conference between President Wilson and the American delegates this afternoon.

The American plans on the first topic are already well advanced. While there is no definite information on the second point, relative to the responsibility and punishments for the war, the sentiment in American quarters inclines to a negative attitude, with some suggestions that those responsible for international crimes who have fled from Germany should be returned for Germany to deal with.

The third subject, indemnities, will not be presented in the conference with statements of the amounts claimed by each Government, but a committee will be charged with the task of assembling these amounts and also of determining the probable maximum the enemy powers are able to pay.

The meeting tomorrow will have added importance in bringing together the Supreme War Council, with President Wilson, the Premiers, and Foreign Ministers, reinforced by Marshal Foch, Field Marshal Haig, General Pershing, and General Diaz and the full membership of the War Council of Versailles.

The subject for consideration is not Russia or Poland, as was supposed, but the status of the present military occupation of Germany, on which the Council desires information from the military leaders.

In some allied quarters it had been suggested that the American strength in the occupied regions should be relatively larger than that of the other powers, as the European Allies had gone through longer service. This view is not shared in American quarters, where it is maintained that the relative American strength is fully up to the requirements.

The presence of the military leaders tomorrow is expected to bring a pretty full understanding on this subject.

The official statement of today's proceedings reads:

The President of the United States, the Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers of the Allied and associated Powers, and the Japanese representatives met this morning at the Quai d'Orsay. The meeting proceeded with the examination of the agenda for the plenary meeting of the Conference on Saturday. The following questions were considered for this purpose:

First—International legislation on labor.

Second—Responsibility and punishments in connection with the war.

Third—Reparation for war damage.

Fourth—International régime of ports, waterways, and railways.

In addition, the meeting began consideration of the procedure to be adopted with regard to territorial questions.

The Supreme War Council will meet tomorrow morning at 10:30. Marshal Foch, Field Marshal Haig, and General Diaz will be present, as well as the military representatives at Versailles of the Allied and associated Powers.

League Questions to the Fore.

British Plan an International Labor Board Which Will Be Responsible to League of Nations

PARIS, Jan 23, (Associated Press.)—Great Britain's plan for the actual working machinery to carry out the proposed internationalization of labor was outlined today to The Associated Press by George N. Coll Barnes, Minister without portfolio, whose proposals will be considered by the Peace Conference Saturday.

Briefly, his program calls for the establishment of an international commission, made up of the representatives of both labor and capital, for the settlement of labor problems. This commission is to be responsible to the League of Nations.

Under the Barnes scheme would be the appointment by the Peace Conference of a small commission composed of delegates from the Great Powers. This commission would convene the first labor conference, which, in turn, would become the central international commission for the betterment of labor.

Because of lack of machinery, the present Peace Conference would be unable to establish a perfected commission, although the Peace Conference may make certain suggestions and even bind the powers to them.

For example, such questions as the right of the people to form themselves into trade unions might be settled by the Peace Conference. The matter of the hours of labor and similar problems would come before the International Labor Commission. In case of nonfulfillment of labor agreements the League of Nations would be called in to settle the matter.

The International Labor Commission, or bureau, will not deal with purely internal problems of the nations. Capital and labor will still work out their local differences as before.

Asked as to what power the commission would have back of it to enforce its rulings, Mr. Barnes replied in substance that if any nation refused to play the game she might be brought to reason by depriving her of trade privileges with sister States.

TROTZKY'S FORCES QUIT PETROGRAD

Red War Minister Said to be Moving His Headquarters to Nizhni-Novgorod.

ADMITS CAUSE IS BEATEN

He and Trotzky Told Moscow Soviet Recently That Aid Must Be Sought.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 23.—The Bolshevist forces are evacuating Petrograd and removing all stores, according to a dispatch to the Berlinske Tidende from Helsingfors.

The dispatch adds that Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Minister of War, is transferring his headquarters to Nizhi-Novgorod, and that the anti-Bolshevist movement is growing daily.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Leon Trotzky the Russian Minister of War, has ordered Zinovieff, the Bolshevist Governor of Petrograd, to surrender that city without a fight, if it is attacked by the Northern Russian forces, according to Exchange Telegraph advices from Copenhagen.

[The agency's dispatches on the same subject last night made it appear through an error in transmission that the Bolsheviki had been ordered to abandon a town named Sinoveff.]

In Northern Russia, the dispatch adds, the Bolshevik forces have been defeated and a large part of them have surrendered. In addition great numbers of peasants are reported to be in revolt in various part of Bolshevik Russia.

Unconfirmed reports have been received in official circles that the Bolsheviki have captured Orenburg, on the Ural River, about 250 miles north of the Black Sea.

If the report proves true, the difficulty of the Russian-Siberian Army getting in touch with General Denikine's force is increased. The capture of Orenburg also would be a threat to the small British force in Transcaucasia.

Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier, and Trotzky, speaking recently before the Moscow Soviet, confessed that the Bolshevist régime was bankrupt, especially regarding industrial production, finance, and food, according to a Helsingfors dispatch to The Mail.

They said that it was time that experts from the middle class were invited to co-operate with the Soviets. A similar invitation had been addressed, the speakers said, to intellectuals who had heretofore stood outside the Civil War.

In referring to the foreign policy of the country Trotzky is reported to have intimated that the Soviet Government was prepared, under certain conditions, to abandon its internationalist aims and raise the banner of "Russia for the Russians."

RUSSIANS HERE ARE DISAPPOINTED

Say Conference Offer Comes Just at Time When Bolsheviki Need Respite.

DOUBT SUCCESS OF PLAN

Recall That Reds Said They Would Treat with the Devil for an Advantage.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Russians here who have been identified with the effort to overthrow the Bolsheviki and set up an All-Russian Government on a firm and solid basis, are somewhat disappointed over the decision of the Supreme Council to ask for a conference to which the Bolsheviki are invited to send representatives.

"The plan is not what we desired," said one Russian authority today, "and it is still to be seen if it will be successful. It has come at a most opportune moment for the Bolsheviki. They have just been defeated by the Esthonians. They have been driven out of Perm and further back by the armies operating under the authority of the Omsk Government. They have been beaten by General Denekine's volunteer army in the Don country. Latest advices record their losses on the Archangel front, and it is reported that Trotzky is preparing to evacuate Petrograd, in view of the Red Army's most recent disasters.

"Therefore, the offer of the Allies and America comes at a moment when a respite is needed by the Bolsheviki, and it is not unlikely that it will be accepted. It is remembered that at Brest-Litovsk they said they would treat with the Devil if it gave them advantage in carrying out their program for a revolution to cover the world."

President Wilson's plan, adopted at Paris yesterday, is looked upon in well-informed quarters here as a compromise between the French and British plans. The French were opposed to any form of recognition of the Bolsheviki. The British plan contemplated inviting all Russian factions, including the Bolsheviki, to send representatives to Paris to discuss with the Allies the means by which friendly aid might be given to Russia by the Allies and at the same time point out ways for trying to solve the Russian problem.

It was suggested here today that the French plan might have denied the right of the Russians to determine their own future by imposing the power of one faction upon the entire nation. One factor operating against the adoption of the French plan, which was supported by eminent Russian spokesmen in Paris, was the unwillingness of the allied nations to send into Russia armed forces sufficiently large to deal adequately with the situation. The American and Japanese Governments were opposed to such a plan and Great Britain is not understood to have favored it.

Senator Johnson of California, in a statement today on the Peace Conference's Russian agreement, declared that it gave no information regarding the return of American troops from Russia, while press dispatches told of fighting between the Americans and Russians.

"If our professions made since January, 1918, repeated often since then, and yesterday again, are anything more than mere empty words," he said, "let's cease making war in violation of our laws and our Constitution, and bring home our soldiers who are now in Russia."

RUSSIAN POLICY IN BALANCE

Early Reports of Acceptance Are Quickly Contradicted.

LVOFF DENOUNCES PLAN

BITTER ATTACK BY TEMPS

PARIS, Jan. 23, (Associated Press.)—Sergius Sazonoff, the former Russian Foreign Minister under the old régime and now representing the Government of Yekaterinodar and the Siberian Government at Omsk, declares in a statement that he will not participate in the meeting proposed by the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference with Bolshevist representatives.

M. Sazonoff told the Echo de Paris today that he would not go to Princes' Islands for the proposed conference between representatives of the various Russian factions and the allied Governments.

He added that it was very likely that neither the Government of Admiral Kolchak nor that of General Denikine would send emissaries, for they were fully aware of what Bolshevism meant.

Prince Lvoff, former Russian Premier, in a statement today, strongly deprecated the decision of the Supreme Council regarding Russia.

"We never thought," said Prince Lvoff, "that the conference would begin its peace work by renewing relations with our tyrants. The Bolsheviki have won their greatest victory in Paris. The decision of the council is of danger not only to us, but to the whole world. It gives new impulse to anarchy."

Esthonians State Their Position.

Charles R. Pusta, representing the Esthonian Government at the Peace Conference, said tonight that the Esthonians were ready to send delegates to the Princes' Islands to give their views to the powers, but that they wished to maintain the right to put forward the same views at the Peace Conference in Paris, from which they expected definite satisfaction of their claims.

Whether the effort of the Great Powers to tranquilize Russia was to succeed or fail was still in the balance tonight. No reply had come from the Bolsheviki, and as the wireless message embodying the proposal of the associated powers was not sent until 2 o'clock this morning, some days may intervene before anything definite is heard from Russia itself.

In the meantime, during the day prominent anti-Bolshevist leaders in Paris were apparently not clear as to their course. The first reports that they were favorable to the plan having been followed by a statement by such leaders as Sergius Sazonoff that they would not sit at the table with assassins.

The semi-official Temps also asserts that the Supreme Council's proposal "permits traitors who withdrew Russia from the war and turned the entire German strength against France to be received on the same footing as the faithful."

Hold Proposal Was Wise.

The American and British delegates feel, however, that the proposal was the only course open.

Information reaching the Allies indicates that the Bolsheviki have a powerful army in which discipline is being enforced. In view of this information, one of the Premiers pointed out today that the Bolsheviki could be combatted only by a large number of allied troops, which would have to be on the spot immediately, whereas none of the Governments could ask people already wearied by war to undertake another large military expedition.

of the Peace Congress was considered here as the first visible manifestation and realization of American and British accord on the great issues before the Peace Congress. This accord was pledged in speeches and in private expressions in England by both President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George.

It is understood that, inasmuch as the Supreme Council has accepted the American plan for the settlement of the Russian question, the British plan may form the foundation of the structure which the Peace Congress may erect to house the League of Nations. Yet, it is pointed out by observers here, that this is a mere exchange of courtesy. The plan for settling the Russian question is regarded as virtually identical with that which Premier Lloyd George suggested in his note to Stephen Pichon, French Foreign Minister, on Jan. 3. It is understood, although no official admission has been made, that the British plan for the creation of a League of Nations is essentially identical with that which American experts formulated after close study of every promising available plan among the two score which were presented.

Hope for Russian Bondholders.

While yesterday's official statement was silent on the question of the redemption of Russia's foreign debt, there is some reason to believe that, through unofficial but powerful sources, assurances have been conveyed that the Bolsheviki will recede from their threat to repudiate this debt in consideration of relief, through Entente aid, of desperate economic conditions in Russia. It is believed that assurance on this point induced France to sanction the plan, which averts the spectre of financial loss to French holders of Russian securities.

REDS STILL SHELL OUR LINES.

ARCHANGEL, Jan. 22, (By The Associated Press.)—The Bolsheviki are continuing their shelling of the American positions at Ust Padenga, thirty miles south of Shenkursk, and the American artillery is replying to the enemy fire. The infantry attack which the Bolsheviki were expected to make yesterday failed to materialize.

Peasants say that the Bolsheviki suffered 500 casualties in the infantry attack of Jan. 19, leaving many wounded, who froze to death in the forest. The American casualties in the fight were less than fifty all told.

ESTHONIANS PURSUE REDS.

Rout the Radical Force and Move Toward Petrograd.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Helsingfors states that the Esthonian communiqué of Tuesday says that the Bolshevist rout following the capture of Narva has become complete.

The Esthonians have crossed the Narva-Gdoff line and their advance guards are only 75 miles from Petrograd. They continue to capture men, guns, and munitions, and have taken an armored train. The dispatch adds:

"I have reason to believe that the Esthonians will push on as far as the Luga and Russa, the last important rivers before Petrograd is reached, which will enable them to encircle the town of Pskov from the north. But there is no possibility of their attacking Petrograd without help from outside their own frontiers.

"According to trustworthy information from Petrograd, men of the former Imperial Guard at Seminoff on Saturday shot dead Anveld, the military commissary, who had gone to persuade them to leave for the Narva front.

"The success of the ill-equipped little Esthonian army is explained by the Bolsheviki as the result of treason on the part of the commander of the Second Fusiliers Division."

TO DISCUSS AIR PROBLEMS.

Inter-Allied Commission on Rules Will Soon Sit in Paris.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The Inter-Allied Air Commission will soon meet in Paris to settle the big problems connected with the aerial traffic of the world. Technical experts of the various powers now are engaged on plans to be submitted to the commission. The British scheme, according to the Paris edition of The London Daily Mail, is ready.

One of the chief difficulties to be overcome is the drawing up of a set of rules for aerial passage applicable to all nations, in view of complicated geographical conditions. Ordinary rules for flying, such as speed, height, navigating lights, etc., are easily adjustable, but the political and commercial aspects are bound to involve controversial points.

SOCIALISTS AT BERNE TO DISCUSS THE LEAGUE

British Delegate Says Reconstruction of the Internationale May Also Be Considered.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Jan. 23.—The International Socialist Conference will be opened on Monday or Tuesday next in the hall of the Volksmaus at Berne, and will last two or three weeks. Arthur Henderson, the British Labor Party leader, who is a delegate, says of its program:

"Our conference is an ad hoc meeting. It is a natural consequence of the late interallied Socialist conference. It is, therefore, a mistake to assume that its chief object is the reconstruction of the old Internationale. Many of the expected delegates were never even members of the Internationale. Our aim is to elaborate the statutes of a future League of Nations as we understand them and to establish the international character of labor legislation.

"We hope to exert an influence on the decisions of the Peace Conference as regards these vital questions. On my way through Paris I saw Mr. Lloyd George, who has promised me that, after the termination of our conference, a delegation chosen from its members will be received by the Peace Conference at Paris, to which it will submit its suggestions.

"The problem of the best policy to adopt toward Bolshevism in Russia will also be discussed at the Socialist conference and only after the solution of these questions will the reconstruction of the Internationale perhaps be taken into consideration."

German Socialists will certainly attend the conference. Russia will be represented by Tchsidze and Tseretelli, of early revolutionary fame, who are coming from the Caucasus, while Axelrod and Ruvanoff will arrive from Paris.

GRAND COMMITTEE FOR PEACE LEAGUE

Plenary Session Will Be Asked to Name Members to Examine Various Proposals.

OBJECTS OF BRITISH PLAN

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—When the second plenary session of the Peace Conference is held, it will be invited to approve of a permanent League of Nations and appoint a Grand Committee to examine proposals on the subject offered by the American, British, and French delegations. President Wilson will move a resolution to that effect, which will be supported by one French and one British delegate, unless Clemenceau, as President, decides to do so himself, in which case either Lloyd George or Balfour will speak for the British.

Lord Robert Cecil and Léon Bourgeois may be called upon to give exposition of their respective projects if President Wilson goes into any details in outlining the American plan. Viscount Bryce is now on his way to Paris. He is President of the British Union for a League of Free Nations. He will act in a consultative but unofficial capacity.

As already stated in these dispatches, the text of the British project of a league is in the hands of the printers. It cannot be published until it has been presented to the Grand Committee; but it may be stated that it is essentially an effort to provide practical measures to meet concrete eventualities. The French proposals will probably be found to be a more symmetrically developed logical thesis. The British plan seeks to provide machinery which can be extended and improved with the growth of the League. Such existing machinery as wartime necessities have already set in motion—for instance, the Allied Maritime Transport Council—is to be utilized; but opportunity is left for adding other methods of handling the current business of the league.

The British scheme has two fundamental objects in view—to check ambitions for territorial aggrandizement, and to limit the race of armaments. It is proposed to form a permanent council of the league, consisting not of second-rate diplomatists with ill-defined powers, but of the Premiers and Foreign Ministers, who would be able to take immediate decisions practically binding their respective Governments.

The principles of the league will, of course, require definition. This definition, which might be described as a charter of rights and duties of all nations, may be found to have received adequate treatment either in Wilson's proposals or in Bourgeois's thesis. All the nations in the league, if the British plan is adopted, will be required to make two pledges: First, to arbitrate all justiciable disputes, and not to go to war until time has been given for a public ventilation and negotiation of all matters affecting the national honor; second, to support the league with all the economic or other force required. The league, according to the British plan, would be the trustees for the smaller nations. This is the idea already outlined by General Smuts.

Conversations among President Wilson, Lord Robert Cecil, and Léon Bourgeois are understood to have shown a practical unanimity of view respecting general principles. Lord Robert Cecil, in conversation today with British journalists, went over much the same ground as he covered in his talk with the American newspaper representatives last week.

DELAY IS THE ESSENCE OF CECIL LEAGUE PLAN

British Expert Also Favors a Permanent International Council, Meeting Frequently.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Lord Robert Cecil, who today announced in Paris that he had submitted to the Peace Congress a draft of the British view of the subject of the League of Nations, believes the world has not yet reached a stage at which an absolutely rigid system for the preservation of international peace can be set up, according to a Reuters' dispatch from the French capital. In discussing his idea of the form the league should take, Lord Robert says he thinks an international tribunal with absolutely binding powers is not practicable at present.

"The creation of non-rigid international machinery by which a council, by exerting influence toward conciliation, may work, will be the main strength of future peacemakers," he said. "Such a body must, however, possess at least sufficient internationally guaranteed power to be able to prevent surprise declarations of war and to compel disputants to accept delay, during which the forces of civilization may have time to try to avert a calamity.

"The interdependence of modern States has become so great that no nation can control its own affairs entirely without regard to the effect of its actions on other nations. It is important to proceed with the utmost respect for national sovereignty. At present certain international organizations, such as posts and telegraphs, are regulated by international agencies. Before the war we had the Danube Commission, the Rhine Convention, and even international labor organizations.

"It is easy to see that in the future certain cities located on waterways will have to be under international control, which will guarantee free access to them. Some of the new States formed out of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, for example, cannot possibly have independent access to the sea. Switzerland is, according to newspaper dispatches, considering a plan which will give her a way to reach tidewater. Certain nations have a strong interest in having free access to Saloniki, but it is out of the question for them to plan possession of that port. The most important example of this kind, of course, is that of the Dardanelles and the Bosporus.

"These examples of international agencies, which are necessary, lead naturally to a new organization, the object of which will be the welfare of the nations of the world.

"Delay, which can give opportunity for discussion and conciliation, will be the main resource of the league in dealing with disputes in which the vital interests of great nations are involved. As in the Peace Congress, the ultimate decision must rest with the Great Powers, since, as a last resort, the league can enforce its decisions only by the military power which will always be possessed by the great nations."

Speaking of the attitude of other Powers represented at the Congress, Lord Robert said he had found in conversations with delegates that there was, in very large measure, an agreement on the the principles he had outlined. In case of smaller disputes between nations, there was no reason, he said, why they should not be settled by an international tribunal.

"In general, the power on which the league must mainly rely will be public opinion," he continued, "and it is for this reason that the power imposing delay on disputants is so important."

Lord Robert said he favored the establishment of a permanent international council of the league, which would sit at a place agreed upon. Above this, he said, there should be a superior council, consisting of Premiers or important members of various national Governments, which might meet regularly, and during the next few years very frequently.

New States formed out of the wreck of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, Lord Robert said, could be admitted to the league without difficulty as soon as settled Governments were established.

EARLY RECOGNITION OF POLAND EXPECTED

Paris Hears of Failure of Negotiations Between the Poles and the Germans.

Conferences have been in progress during the last few days at Bromberg, German Poland, between German and Polish Commissioners. According to a telegram received by the Polish National Committee in Paris, the Germans rejected all terms of agreement, containing fourteen points, proposed on behalf of the Poles by Albert Korfanty, a member of the Supreme People's Council of German Poland and formerly a Deputy in the German Reichstag.

The entire situation in Poland is difficult, according to the Polish viewpoint. The Germans are falling back, and, it is said, are handing over arms and ammunition to the Bolsheviki and not permitting the Poles to take suitable measures for their own defense against the Bolsheviki. It is asserted also that German troops are being sent from the interior of Germany with the object of fighting the Poles.

It is stated that Ukrainians to the number of 30,000 have attacked the Poles. It is believed that the Ukrainians want to obtain possession of the disputed territory before the decision of the Peace Conference can be promulgated.

In Esthonia the Bolsheviki appears somewhat disorganized, partly owing to the trouble in Petrograd and the recent disaster they suffered at Perm.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—German Main Headquarters has been transferred to Kolberg, Pomerania, according to a German wireless message received here, and Field Marshal von Hindenburg will take charge of operations to protect the German eastern frontier.

of Nations. This question promises to command virtually the undivided attention of the delegates until their action regarding Russia shows results one way or another. As the Russian delegates are not expected at Princes' Islands until Feb. 15, this means that nearly the whole attention of the Congress will be turned to the League of Nations until President Wilson's departure for America.

Out of the Russian negotiations it is hoped that some unanimous agreement will be reached that will bring representatives of that country into further sessions at Paris. Delegates of all the associated Governments have expressed the opinion that a secure peace can hardly be considered to have been made while Russia remains on fire.

It is regarded as quite significant in circles surrounding the Peace Congress that it should be announced that the first plan for a League of Nations to be considered comes from Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain. This is quite in consonance with what has been known in a very small circle close to the American delegates, that President Wilson plans to have European ideas come before the Congress in advance of his own.

American Plan Awaits Others.

American officials explain that Mr. Wilson's purpose is not only to show deference to the European nations which have sacrificed so much in the war, or out of deference to the views of European statesmen, but to obtain a technical advantage in reserving American plans until all others have been fully discussed, when they may be brought forward, probably to form a bridge by which disagreements that may have developed may be dispelled.

Mr. Wilson has told his colleagues that he has no personal pride of authorship in the plan for the league, and is quite ready to place himself in a position of supporting some other nation's plan rather than of proposing one of his own if he feels that procedure will best serve the common purpose. If discussion goes on according to this plan it appears likely that both the British and French plans will be discussed before the President brings out his own, which is now entirely completed and ready for presentation at any time.

Mr. Wilson will go ahead with his announced purpose of devoting all his energies to the reducing of various views on the League of Nations to a basis of agreement while awaiting results from the effort to compose the differences between Russian factions. He intends to adhere to his determination to hold all other plans secondary, including his visit to Brussels and his trip to the battlefields and devastated regions.

The preliminary peace will be signed early in June at the latest, according to the most trustworthy information, says Marcel Hutin in the Echo de Paris today.

SWISS PRESIDENT TO SEE WILSON TODAY

HAS A PEACE FORMULA

Expects His Country to be Admitted to Conference When Neutral Interests Are Discussed.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The Presidents of the United States and Switzerland will hold a formal conference tomorrow evening. President Ador, who arrived from Berne today, will confer with President Poincaré, Premier Clemenceau, and possibly Premier Lloyd George, before he talks with President Wilson, whom he saw for a few minutes today.

He comes to Paris bearing an official statement of the views of the Swiss Government on pending international questions, which will be laid before the Peace Congress. Following is the text of the statement:

"1.—Switzerland expects to be admitted with other States to the peace negotiations as far as they will deal with her own special interests or with problems of general importance. Exclusion from deliberations on problems of the League of Nations would be considered by the Swiss people as inconsistent with the principles of democracy. Neutral States, though not having been called upon to make as heavy sacrifices as belligerents, have, nevertheless, suffered severely in consequence of the war. All have been able, especially in case of Switzerland, to render considerable service to humanity.

"2.—Switzerland highly approves of the creation of a League of Nations for preserving peace, and expects from it a complete reform of international relations. Consequently, the maintenance of peace should not really depend upon the observation of a procedure of inquiry previous to a declaration of war, but must be founded upon a general interdiction to parties in conflict not to resort to arms. International conflicts must, as far as their character allows, be solved either by arbitration tribunals formed by the free consent of the parties, or else by a permanent international court offering every guarantee of political independence. All other international disputes must be submitted to a procedure of mediation through which lasting settlements on the basis of equity and justice can be arrived at.

"3.—Switzerland recognises the necessity for action which may ultimately consist of military pressure within the system of the League of Nations. Nevertheless, Switzerland is determined not to abandon her neutrality, which is laid down in the Swiss constitution and based on 400 years of peaceful politics. This neutrality is necessary for Switzerland, considering the composition of her population, as well as on account of her being in a particularly exposed strategical position. In case armed conflict should, after all, occur under the reign of the League of Nations, the existence of the several permanently neutral and inviolable states would be a great benefit also for the league itself. The institution of the Red Cross must be based on the existence of such neutral territory if it is to be able to entirely fulfil its task.

"4.—Freedom of production and commerce is of vital importance for Switzerland. The Swiss people hope peace will re-establish the principle of commercial freedom. As far as limitations will be imposed concerning importation, exportation and free passage of goods and raw materials, all states should mutually accord each other most-favored nation treatment.

"5.—Switzerland, as a landlocked country mainly dependent upon its share of the world's commerce, highly approves of the principle of free access to the sea. First of all, Switzerland attributes great importance to the maintenance and improvement of the existing international waterway of the Rhine from Basle to the North Sea. Switzerland fully expects, besides, that it will soon be possible to come to an understanding with France and Italy for opening the Rhone and Po-Ticino rivers for navigation on a big scale, and obtain recognition of similar principles regarding these rivers as are in vogue for already internationalized waterways. It is the case of vital interest to Switzerland to obtain the right of passage over railroads to the sea and through European states eastward.

"6.—The political, legal and economic principles formulated by President Wilson are so entirely in conformity with the traditional wants of Switzerland that she will adhere to them, whatever difficulties may lie in the way of their realisation."

ITALY HAS A LEAGUE PLAN.

ROME, Jan. 23.—A commission made up of professors of international law, Councillors of State and Judges of the Supreme Court, recently appointed here, has decided to recommend to the Peace Congress a project for a League of Nations, founded upon the principle of right, which each State would stand ready to defend.

It is suggested that the Central Tribunal of the league should be constituted by the appointment of a council from all signatory nations, each State being represented by plenipotentiaries, for the consideration of questions of common interest.

STRAUS TO SAIL TOMORROW.

Announcement of His Presence in Paris Was an Error.

Oscar S. Straus, Chairman of the committee that will represent the League to Enforce Peace in Paris during the Peace Conference, said yesterday that the league would probably not be able to participate in conferences with the British, French, and Italian League of Nations Associations before the second week in February. A dispatch from Paris, published yesterday, stated that Mr. Straus, representing the American group, Leon Bourgeois, head of the French group, and Viscount Bryce of the British group would meet next week in Paris.

"This announcement," said Mr. Straus, "was probably due to the fact that the British and French associations know that I had intended to depart for Europe on Jan. 15. The sailing of the Lapland, on which I have booked passage, has been postponed until Saturday, Jan. 25, and I shall not be able to reach Paris before the second week in February. I have cabled this fact to Paris and have received assurance that even if the allied associations decide to hold their first conference on Jan. 26, as originally planned, they will adopt no final resolutions until my arrival."

The main purpose of the League to Enforce Peace, in sending this committee to Paris, Mr. Straus continued, was to give all possible support to President Wilson in promoting his League of Nations program. "The whole campaign of the league in this country," he said, "is based on the idea that we must show the European statesmen that the League of Nations plan is backed not only by our President but by an overwhelming majority of our people."

STUDYING PROBLEMS OF RELAXING BLOCKADE

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—The object of the resumption of the sessions of President Wilson's "War Cabinet" here is to consider and dispose of pressing problems affecting America and Europe—particularly the industrial situation in this part of the world, where the restoration of normal conditions is of great urgency. The economic crisis of Germany and other enemy countries will come immediately before the War Cabinet.

To facilitate the handling of that problem another body has been formed in Paris, composed of experts from each of the allied powers, who will pass on questions requiring immediate attention. This committee will work in combination with the commission just formed by the commanding Generals of the allied forces in occupied German territory. The procedure will be that the commission for the occupied territory will make recommendations to the governing body of the Peace Conference, which, after obtaining the views of the interallied committee experts, will pass judgment on them.

The report that General Smith, the American Administrator at Treves, has arranged with the Allies to permit the resumption of manufacturing in the territory occupied by United States troops, the products being sold wherever possible, but France having the first call on them for cash, is not understood by American officials here. It is explained that General Smith has no authority to make such arrangements without the direct approval of the Supreme Council of the Peace Conference, which, according to the statements of officials, has not had the proposal brought to its attention.

It is officially stated that the blockade against Germany has not been lifted except as to the importation of a limited quantity of food, and no permission has been given for German trading with the outside world, nor has any encouragement been afforded Germany for the resumption of industry.

Some American officials are opposed to lifting the blockade, and apparently sympathize with the refusal of the British and French to agree to the suggestion of the American Commission for letting Germany engage in commerce; but even they are of the opinion that it will be absolutely necessary to modify the blockade restrictions to a greater degree than was called for in the agreement reached recently at Treves for the use of the German unsurrendered merchantmen in return for food equal in value to their charter price.

These expected modifications are mostly in line with the decision to let Germany have food. For instance, it is explained, the German railways are in a deplorable state on account of the lack of lubricating oils, and, in order to facilitate the transport of allied food supplies to the parts of Germany where they are most needed, it will be necessary to let Germany have such oils. Then, Germany is in crying need of clothing, and it is believed that the Allies will be obliged to let clothing supplies enter German territory.

Appeals are being made to the Peace Conference from several neutral countries for the abolition of the German trade blacklist. It is represented that it interferes with the resumption of world trade, and the arguments advanced appeal to some of those officially attached to the American delegation. But considerable opposition to granting these appeals is being shown. The main ground of opposition is that the abolition of the blacklist will release German credits in neutral countries, which are believed to be considerable, and give Germany so much advantage in business when she is permitted to engage in international commercial operations. These credits may play a part in the reparation Germany must make to the allied nations and the devastated smaller countries.

While the Treves conference arranged that Germany should receive food equaling in value the services rendered by the German merchantships, it may be necessary to utilize these credits for the payment of the additional supplies needed by Germany, such as food, lubricating oils, and clothing. There is gold in Germany, also, and the opposition to lifting the blockade takes into account that this could be used to advantage by the German Government if the blockade restrictions were abolished.

KAROLYI WARNS ALLIES.

Says Dismemberment of Hungary Will Mean Future Trouble.

BUDAPEST, Jan. 22.—Count Karolyi, the President of Hungary, declared today that the maintenance of the territorial integrity of Hungary was essential to a European peace.

"France and England," the Count said, "fought to prevent the realization of Mittel Europa, but if they continue to act as they have been doing since the armistice they are going toward the reconstitution of this Mittel Europa."

Count Karolyi declared it was a mistake to take territory from Hungary as it was before the war and give it to new States, "for we can perfectly well give these peoples whom it is sought to detach from us, autonomy which will make them ethnical entities similar to the Swiss Cantons." He continued:

"By cutting up Hungary the Allies will not only wipe out a people with a glorious past, who will not forget, but will break down the Hungarian economic system. Transylvania, Banat, and Slovakia are economically Hungarian territories and not Rumanian, Serbian or Bohemian. Look at all the rivers which flow toward and join the same collector, the Danube, which is the hub of the Balkans. All that forms an economic territory, perhaps more so than any similar regions in Europe.

"I am not opposing the geographical conception of nationalities to the ethnical one. On the contrary, I wish to conciliate them and wish to give all peoples inhabiting the Hungarian economic territory ethnical autonomy and full liberties as possessed by the Swiss Cantons."

The Hungarian leader said he could not have any foreign policy because he was not in contact with any of the powers, but should much like to see the formation of a Danubian Federation.

FRENCH TORPEDO BOAT SUNK

PARIS, Jan. 23.—French torpedo boat 325 has struck a mine and sunk off the coast of Tunis. Eighteen men of the crew are missing.

Torpedo boat 325 was launched in 1906. The vessel was 222 feet long and had a speed of 26 knots an hour.

LONDON IS DIVIDED ON RUSSIAN POLICY

IMPARTIAL TONE DEPLORED

Chronicle Regrets Putting All Russians on One Level—News Has High Hopes of the Outcome.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—In its comment on President Wilson's proposal for the solution of the Russian problem, The Daily Chronicle says that its phraseology is extremely Wilsonian, but its substance does not seem to differ materially from that of Lloyd George, made some weeks ago.

"Much may be said for and against it," The Chronicle observes, "and perhaps we may admit that its strongest recommendation is the total inability of the five powers to agree on any alternative policy for themselves. We rather regret the phrase in the document which might suggest that the Allies ignored the very different record of the rival Russian leaders. The alliance of General Denikin and his friends, for instance, never ceased at the greatest risk and sacrifice to remain loyally at war with Germany, while the Bolsheviki repudiated every allied obligation and went on to treat us as enemies. It was necessary for the purposes of the conference that we should make quite plain our desire not to stand in the way of any internal reconciliation between Russians, but we should beware of speaking as if we were at all indifferent to the loyalty which some Russians have shown toward us."

Times Sees Dilemma for Reds.

The Times says that the President's proposal was evidently the product of previous consultation and agreement, and that there is a clear, consistent, and humane principle discernible in it. The Times recognizes that its success is doubtful. "But," it adds, "even if it fails, we shall feel better for having made it, and the powers at the conference will be united as they could never otherwise have been.

"The best fate that we should desire for Bolshevism is that it should commit suicide. If it meets the other representatives of Russia, and they succeed in devising means for ascertaining the will of the Russian people, then the suicide of Bolshevism is assured. Our quarrel with it, over and above the fact that it opposes the will of the Peace Conference in Poland and elsewhere, is that it does not represent the mind of the Russian people.

"If, on the other hand, the Bolsheviki decline to meet at the Princes' Islands, then their creed will have confessed itself an enemy alike of the liberty of the Russian people and of the people of the world; and, fortified with this confession, the powers in Paris will know how to vindicate both."

The Daily Express sincerely trusts that the Allies are right in their views that final peace in Eastern Europe may be achieved without further bloodshed.

"But," it says; "it would be absolutely premature to indulge in any such hopes of a final settlement. The moral sense of Europe is as much in revolt against Bolshevism's creed of slaughter as ever it was against the Kaiser in the firing and massacre of Louvain. A peace which ignores this moral standpoint would be an offense to the whole civilized world."

Daily News Is Enthusiastic.

The Daily News says:

"Wilson's magnificently phrased resolution raises the whole Russian question to a broader and loftier plane. It is not without significance that the word 'Bolshevik' does not occur in it. There is happily no reason to suppose that this wise and high-minded offer will be rejected by any Russian Government. It affords them all a chance of escape from a future full of menace of more calamity. It relieves them from the threats of foreign interference which have made fiercer the class antagonisms and accentuated the material miseries that have so long tormented the hapless Russian peoples.

"But it is not only Russia that President Wilson has probably saved by this resolution. It is the hope of a League of Nations. Clearly no League of Nations could tolerate forcible invasion of independent countries for purposes of political or social propaganda. That is the sort of thing it exists to prevent. Equally clearly no League of Nations could intervene by force in the domestic affairs of one of its members, or even of a nation outside its constitution, because it disapproved of the form of government in existence there. President Wilson's resolution is the formal abandonment of both these errors. Its adoption is by far the most hopeful thing that has yet come out of the Paris conference."

Calls It Courageous Course.

The Westminster Gazette says that if the plan fails "the Peace Conference will still have the satisfaction of having taken a courageous course and of having done all that was possible to bring peace and order to Russia by the general assent of the Russian people. There will remain other ways of dealing with the Russian situation, though none of them are so promising or are to be embarked upon with any confidence."

The Star says that it applies "the acid test to the Bolshevist Government, and if they reject the invitation they will write themselves down as irreconcilable enemies of liberty and democracy."

The Evening Standard, on the other hand, regards the plan with a good deal of misgiving and considers that in adopting it the Allies have gone to the very extreme of concessions. It thinks the President steers between two logical extremes and thus summarizes the situation:

"Clemenceau wants the Bolsheviki to go to perdition, Lloyd George wants them to go to Paris, and President Wilson to the sea of Marmora." However, it admits that some sacrifice of principle is permissible if the really sane elements of Russia gain a breathing space, while, if the Bolsheviki will not attend the conference, they will have added "another and quite conclusive ground to the many that already exist for vigorous armed action against them on the part of all the allies."

Praised by Manchester Guardian.

LONDON, Jan. 23, (British Wireless Service.)—Discussing the decision of the Peace Conference Supreme Council to invite Russian representatives to the Princes' Islands meeting, The Manchester Guardian says that it is of the best augury. It displays an admirable spirit of compromise among the powers themselves, it adds, and it is "the first act of the great drama of the establishment of a world's peace."

"We hope that there will be a response inspired by the same spirit from the Russian people," says The Westminster Gazette. "Whether that is to be so or not will depend in the main on the Bolsheviki. They can, if they so desire, make all the good-will of the Peace Conference nugatory, or they can make the meeting in the Sea of Marmora the birth of a new Russia. Whatever the answer may be, the Allies will have the satisfaction of having taken a sane and courageous course. If Russia declines the friendly hand that is now held out, there are other resources open to civilization, though none of them holds a tithe of the promise of the experiment that is now made."

PARIS PRESS IS DIVIDED.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The decision of the Supreme Council of the Peace Congress on the Russian question meets with a mixed reception on the part of the commentators in the Paris morning newspapers. The Matin, which carries the news under the caption, "Dramatic Stroke at Peace Conference," says:

"It is a great and bold idea. We shall see if it is practical and fruitful."

On the other hand, the Journal says:

"There is no hiding the fact that the solution adopted has caused a painful impression upon the French. Foreign Minister Pichon expressed public sentiment when he said in his speech of Dec. 29 and his letter of Jan. 5: 'No compromise with the Bolsheviki.'"

The Echo de Paris says:

"Insensate as may be the settlement now proposed, it has at least the merit of ridding us of the still more harmful solution of bringing the Bolsheviki to Paris and giving them the opportunity of repeating on allied territory the Brest-Litovsk propaganda."

The Figaro says:

"No solution of the Russian problem has yet been found, but a broad and fair-minded inquiry is opened by the associated powers under their auspices. It is to be hoped the Bolshevist agents will not take advantage of this temporary respite to continue their propaganda in Europe and hamper the work of peace in the name of their own principles."

The Socialist Humanité says:

"The Social Democrats of the whole world will read President Wilson's proposals with the deepest joy. President Wilson speaks the language which we and the workers of the civilized globe have been waiting for."

DECISION PLEASES GOMPERS.

He Hopes That It Will Restore Russia to Her Place Among Nations.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who was told upon his arrival here last night of measures relative to Russia adopted by the Peace Congress, said:

"I think that it is a very wise decision and hope it will have satisfactory results in restoring peace in Russia and placing that unfortunate country again in comity with the great factors of the civilization of the world."

WILSON HAS MANY CALLERS.

He Receives French Men of Letters, Political Leaders, and Artists.

PARIS, Jan. 23, (Associated Press.)—President Wilson today received Georges Lecompte, the President, and the Abbé Wetterle and General Malleterre, Vice Presidents of the Society of Men of Letters. President Wilson seemed particularly pleased at the courtesy of the French writers in calling on him.

This afternoon a reception was tendered by him at the Murat mansion to about 300 persons—diplomats, politicians, artists, and writers—who were introduced to the President and Mrs. Wilson. Among those who attended the reception were Gustave Ador, President of the Swiss Confederation, with whom President Wilson conferred for a few moments in his studio; Premier Clemenceau, Stephen Pichon, French Foreign Minister; J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, and M. Dubost, President of the Senate. Many women were also present.

A delegation representing the League of the Rights of Man called on President Wilson yesterday afternoon. In a short address to the delegation Mr. Wilson said that it was with genuine satisfaction that the United States came to the help of France," and that he believed that it was true that "the coming of the Americans prevented a catastrophe that might have overwhelmed the world."

Secretary Robert Lansing gave a dinner last evening in honor of John W. Davis, American Ambassador to Great Britain. President Wilson and all the officials attached to the American Peace Mission were present.

The President last night received a deputation of the students of the Sorbonne, or the Departments of Arts and Science of the University of Paris. They presented to him as a souvenir an album bound in old parchment and containing fine photographs of the Rheims Cathedral before the war.

In reply to an address, which was read by a young woman student, Mr. Wilson said he was particularly touched by the gift as a mark of esteem from the students, which, he said, he accepted "as a professor." He remarked that he would tell American students of the "nobility of the sentiments of their French comrades."

It is now definitely settled that a large number of American troops will go to America with President Wilson on the liner George Washington. Mr. Wilson has personally given orders that every available bit of space on the liner be given over to troops, and that the personnel of his party be reduced to the minimum.

1919 PROFITS LEVY HOLDS UP TAX BILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Senate and House conferees on the War Revenue bill failed to reach a final decision today on the war excess profits payable in 1919. The title is being rewritten in the hope of producing a compromise which will be acceptable both to the Senate and House members, and pending its submission there was a discussion of insurance taxes and the inheritance tax title. On the latter, at least, there is a wide difference of opinion among the conferees.

It appears that the conferees will do well if they reach a final decision on all of the problems involved in the bill, including the second class postal rates, by the end of next week. The Senate conferees had hoped for agreement by this time, but Representative Kitchin and his coworkers from the House side have not been so optimistic. One prediction made several days ago was that the bill might not leave the conference in completed form before Feb. 10.

Secretary Glass said today that the Treasury had made all plans for collecting taxes on the understanding that the Revenue bill would be enacted by Feb. 1.

"The delay is making a most serious situation for the Treasury and a feeling of exasperation among business men," the Secretary said. "We cannot administer the law so well when it is so late in being completed, and there is apparent a great deal of irritation on the part of interests which do not know how much to set aside for taxes."

Mr. Glass said the Treasury would proceed with administration of the law without awaiting the signature of the President when it finally was disposed of by Congress.

TURKEY GAVE UP ON EVE OF ATTACK

HEAVY LOSSES IN BALKANS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—A dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Sir George F. Milne on the operations of the British Army in Macedonia from Oct. 1, 1917, to the close of hostilities is published in tonight's London Gazette.

Bulgaria was utterly defeated, and the allied troops were about to occupy Adrianople and march on Constantinople, when news reached the British Army commander that the armistice with Turkey had been concluded. Two British divisions and one French, says General Milne, were ready on the River Maritza on the night of Oct. 30-31 to seize the northern bridges and occupy Adrianople.

The bridge at Ipsala was in his possession, while in the rear the 1st Greek Corps was echeloned between Kavalla and Drama, ready to take part in the general advance on Constantinople.

Turkey's surrender thus took place under conditions parallel to those faced by Germany. As is known from a statement made by Marshal Foch and Sir Douglas Haig, the latter country was only saved from invasion by the armistice of Nov. 11.

Tells of Breaking Bulgar Front.

LONDON, Jan. 23. (Associated Press.)—Lieut. Gen. Milne, in his report on operations in the Balkans, says that he received instructions in July to prepare for his share in the allied offensive in Macedonia.

He was advised that the British were to take the heights west and northwest of Lake Doiran, provided that the initial Franco-Serbian attack from Sokol to Vetrenik was successful. The French and Serbians assaulted on Sept. 14 and gained a brilliant victory.

The British attack began on Sept. 18, the British having been reinforced by French and Greek troops because their numbers were reduced to half strength through climatic diseases. The front between Lake Doiran and the Vardar, General Milne says, baffles description. The ground is rocky and there are steep hillsides and deep ravines. A high ridge, well fortified with guns and machine guns, was in front of the British line.

The attack was led by the 66th Infantry Brigade. The 12th Cheshires, the 9th South Lancashires, and the 8th Shropshires reached the Bulgarian lines, but, after severe fighting, were compelled to fall back with the loss of 65 per cent. of their effectives, including two Colonels, who fell at the head of their battalions.

Meanwhile Greek and Welsh troops attacked a network of hills in front of the ridge and penetrated a mile, despite desperate resistance from machine-gun emplacements blasted out of solid rock. The repulse on the other flank, however, compelled the troops on this sector to fall back. In this attack the 7th South Wales Borderers had left only nineteen unwounded men and one officer out of a battalion.

General Milne says that the Bulgarians were badly shaken, although he had suffered heavy casualties, losing 1,200 prisoners alone.

British and Greek troops attacked again on Sept. 19, but were compelled to fall back once more, although on the centre they managed to make some gains. In this fighting the 12th Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, the 8th Royal Scots Fusiliers, and the 11th Scottish Rifles covered the retirement and suffered severe casualties, including the loss of all their commanding officers killed or wounded.

The allied attack on the Doiran-Vardar front kept the Bulgarians from sending help to the other front, and the Franco-Serbian forces managed to break through.

The Bulgarians then began a retreat all along the line. The first troops to enter Bulgaria were Derbyshire Yeomanry belonging to the British Army.

BEATTY TO BE SEA LORD.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Admiral Sir David Beatty, according to a dispatch to The Westminster Gazette from Rosyth, will soon give up the command of the British Grand Fleet and will come to London as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty.

The present First Sea Lord is Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY'S DEBT

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The total debt of Austria-Hungary last October was 84,000,000,000 crowns, according to a dispatch from Vienna. Austria's debt was 43,000,000,000 crowns.

A commission appointed to investigate the question of German Austria's share of these liabilities, finds that its proportion, assuming that the other States of the former empire pay their share, amounts to 25,000,000,000 crowns.

PORTUGUESE WARSHIPS BOMBARDING OPORTO

LONDON, Jan. 23.—A wireless dispatch from Madrid says that reports from frontier towns are to the effect that Portuguese war vessels are bombarding Oporto, which is still in the control of the monarchists.

The dispatch adds that rumors persist that former King Emanuel is about to land in Portugal.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Contradictory advices on the status of the Monarchist revolution in Portugal were at hand today. A wireless dispatch from Madrid quotes a Vigo telegram as stating that the monarchical movement has assumed a more serious character. On the other hand, Lisbon advices declare that the Government is on the point of quelling the rising.

The official journal of the Lisbon Government has promulgated a decree inflicting heavy fines upon the districts of Oporto, Vizeu, and Braga, where the Monarchists have been in control. These fines vary from $50,000 to $100,000 for every day the districts remain in a state of rebellion.

$1,500,000 PAID FOR FURS.

800,000 Supplementary Lots to be Offered at St. Louis.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 23.—Sales aggregating more than $1,500,000 were made today at the annual Winter fur auction at the International Fur Exchange.

This brings the total sales made since the opening of the auction on Monday up to $3,750,000. Officials of the company say that, as the sale is not yet half over, the original estimate of $8,000,000 will be exceeded. They made this statement after an additional catalogue had been issued containing a description of 800,000 supplementary lots that will be added to the original list.

The sale began today when 187,000 marmots that were held over from Monday were offered for bidding. These were soon disposed of and brought fairly good prices, the total being about $190,000.

Following the marmots, 30,000 red fox furs were placed under the hammer and attracted a large crowd of buyers. The total sales for this lot were $748,000. A few choice lots aided in reaching this figure, some high prices being offered.

A consignment of 4,300 Karagon red fox furs was sold for $13,000. Australian red foxes were somewhat higher, 5,200 of them netting approximately $40,000. About $15,000 was realized by the sale of 2,600 Macedonian red foxes, and about $25,000 for 6,000 Patagonian foxes. The last of the foxes to be placed on the auction block was a lot of 10,200 Argentine, which sold for $15,000.

The 77,500 Australian ringtail opposum furs that were placed on sale added $60,000 to the day's total. These were followed by 43,000 ringtails that brought approximately $85,000.

PRAISES NATIONAL GUARD.

Gen. Heavey Wants It Maintained as Before the War.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Brig. Gen. John W. Heavey, acting Chief of the Militia Bureau, recommended to the House Military Affairs Committee today that a rider be included in the Army Appropriation bill authorizing the Secretary of War to turn over to the National Guard from the surplus supplies of the regular army equipment valued at $135,000,000. He explained that if this equipment were turned over the cost would be reduced to $55,000,000.

General Heavey urged that the National Guard be maintained in the same form as it was before the United States entered the war and that the increases in its strength authorized by the act of June 5, 1916, be carried out.

"The value to the country during the war of the National Guardsmen cannot be overestimated," he said. "At the time men were needed most the National Guard provided a force of 367,000 men and 12,123 officers. They have done magnificent work, comparing most favorably with the forces of any other nation. The efficiency of the officers was proven by the fact that of the entire number only 352 were discharged for inefficiency."

CHINA WANTS TREATY WITH JAPAN REVISED

Says Compacts of 1915 Need Changing as Much as Those of Brest and Bucharest.

HER FREEDOM IS INVOLVED

Also American Doctrine of the Open Door, Peace Conference Is to be Told.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23, (Associated Press.)—Revision of the Chino-Japanese treaties of 1915, signed after the presentation by Japan of her twenty-one demands, will be asked at the Peace Conference by the Chinese delegation, according to an official statement issued here tonight by the Chinese Agency.

"The Chinese people," said the statement, "assert that the Chino-Japanese treaties of 1915 are in principle as much a war settlement demanding revision by the Peace Conference as the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and of Bucharest.

"Like these latter settlements, the Chino-Japanese treaties contain terms and conditions demanded by one of the belligerent powers in order—to quote the opening sentence of Japan's ultimatum (May 7, 1915) under whose duress and coercion China was forced to sign the documents—'to adjust matters to meet the new situation created by the war between Japan and Germany.'

"The parallel between the two sets of war transactions runs in other directions. One more may be cited. Like the acts of Brest-Litovsk and of Bucharest, the Chino-Japanese treaties impose on a State, since associated with America and the Allies against the Central Powers, exactions wholly inconsistent with the free and unfettered development of China as a modern independent nation.

"Further, besides striking at the root of the independence and territorial integrity of China as defined and affirmed in the great series of conventions between the great powers, the Chino-Japanese treaties also violate the American doctrine of the open door in China. And it was for this and other reasons that the American Government followed the conclusion of the treaties with a formal protest, notifying Japan that the United States would not be bound by the provisions of the same."

Commenting on the declaration of Japan's attitude toward China made by Viscount Uchida, the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs, in his address to Parliament last Tuesday, the statement said that whether Viscount Uchida was speaking with "a Wilsonian accent" would be tested by the Japanese attitude toward the demand of China at the Peace Conference.

"The treatment to be accorded by Japan to this Chinese claim," said the statement, "will be in truth the 'acid test' of the anxiety mentioned in Viscount Uchida's speech 'to deal in a spirit of justice and friendliness with all questions which may come up before the Peace Conference affecting Chinese interests.'"

FRENCH HONOR A BRITON.

Sir Geoffrey Butler Guest at Meeting Held Here.

Distinguished Frenchmen united last evening at the Hotel Vanderbilt in honoring Sir Geoffrey Butler and Great Britain, the nation he is representing in this country.

Praise for Sir Geoffrey and his work during his two years' stay in this country was voiced by the speakers of the evening, who included M. Johannet, the toastmaster, General Controller of the French Mission to this country; Marcel Knecht, head of the French Information Bureau in America; H. Goiran, the French Consul; Professor Charles Downer, President of the Alliance Francaise; F. Cunliffe Owen, of the France-America Society; Colonel Dercle, head of the French Medical Mission to the United States; Albert Blum, President of the Association of Alsatians and Lorrainers of America; Lucien Arvad, President of the French Benevolent Society, and Professor Todd, Vice President of the French Institute.

Sir Geoffrey, who is a Fellow of Corpus Christi College and was chief librarian at Cambridge University before the war, thanked the speakers for the praise they gave his country, and said he hoped that the friendship between France and England initiated by the late King Edward would be everlasting.

AMERICA AND JAPAN TO LAY TWO CABLES

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—Two new cables are to be laid between San Francisco and Japan within two years, according to K. Uchida, former Japanese Vice Minister of Communication, who left today for the Orient.

The United States and Japan, Mr. Uchida said, under an initial agreement, will jointly operate and control the cables. He said he believed Yokohama would be the Oriental terminal of one of the cables.

FOR REAL ESTATE RELIEF.

Speakers at Albany Conference Favor an Income Tax.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Relief of real estate of the burden of taxation was urged by speakers today at the annual tax conference of State and local taxing officials and taxpayers under the joint auspices of the State Tax Department and State Tax Association. It was the general belief of the speakers that small property owners, especially were menaced. An income tax was the most accepted means of relieving the situation.

Mark Graves, Director of the Municipal Accounts Bureau of the State Controller's office, estimated that the increased cost of local Government would average 10 to 15 per cent., while the revenue from other than general taxes would be nearly $2,500,000 less owing to the loss of excise receipts. This situation, he said, meant an average increase in taxation of $3.50 on every $1,000 of assessed valuation.

O'DONNELL CALM IN COURT.

Man Who Said He Killed Marie Riddell Is Arraigned.

Patrick O'Donnell, who said he killed Miss Marie Riddell in the Glen Morris district of Richmond Hill, was arraigned in the Jamaica Police Court yesterday, but at the request of District Attorney O'Leary the case was postponed until Saturday. O'Donnell on his first appearance in court was hysterical, tore his clothes, and fought the attendants. He stood quietly yesterday while his case was under consideration.

The Grand Jury heard a number of witnesses yesterday, including the prisoner's wife and employes of the Waterman Fountain Pen Company, who said that O'Donnell was at work when the murder was committed.

The Once-a-Month Club of Morris Park, which is near Glen Morris, yesterday offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer. The reward was raised by subscription.

FARMERS TO BLAME, HE SAYS

Testifying in the milk inquiry before Chief City Magistrate McAdoo yesterday, Irwin E. Jennings, Assistant Secretary of the Metropolitan Trust Company, and up to a few years ago Secretary of the Clover Farms Company, a milk distributing firm, blamed inefficiency on the part of the farmer for a large portion of the present high cost of milk. He said that he had made numerous investigations of the milk problem, the last one in 1917. He told of one man who drove a team of horses twelve miles to a creamery to deliver six quarts of milk. He found many others, he said, who were driving from six to nine miles a day to deliver from ten to twelve quarts of milk. No price, he said, would pay such a farmer for cost of production.

SOLDIERS' HUNGER STRIKE.

Men at East View Hospital Say Food Is Unfit to Eat.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Soldiers who are stationed at the East View Hospital are up in arms over their food. This morning a number of members of the Medical Corps went on hunger strike and refused to eat at mess. They say that the food is absolutely injurious and that little meat is served.

Here is the menu for two days as furnished by them: Tuesday morning, mush, potatoes, coffee and bread. Noon, stew (no meat), macaroni, bread. Night, beans, sour potatoes, tea, or some chemical concoction called tea, no butter. Wednesday morning, cornflakes, sour potatoes, bread. Noon, stew, cabbage, coffee, bread. Night, carrot soup, mashed potatoes, apricots, and bread.

They add that many of the men are laid up with stomach trouble. They say that they will, if necessary, go from house to house and beg food. The East View Hospital now has 500 orderlies and 85 nurses. Nearly 1,000 wounded men are expected there to be treated.

SPARTACAN CHIEFS ASKED OUTSIDE AID

PRINTED IN SWITZERLAND

Manifesto Said That the German Extreme Socialists Alone Could Not End Capitalism.

What was probably the last formal appeal to the outside world for the support of their Bolshevist doctrines sent out by Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg was printed in the Berner Tagwacht of Dec. 26, a copy of which has just reached this city.

This appeal, which was addressed "To the Workers of All Countries!" and was printed in the Swiss Socialist paper just twenty days before Liebknecht and Frau Luxemburg met violent deaths in Berlin, the former at the hands of Government soldiers while attempting to escape from custody, and the latter through lynching by a mob, confirms the cabled reports to the effect that the Spartacan leaders were determined to accept nothing less than the complete program of international Socialism and were ready to go to any lengths to accomplish their aims.

The manifesto was also signed by Frans Mehring, the veteran Socialist politician and historian, and Klara Zetkin, the leader of the German Socialist women for many decades. Both of these leaders broke with the Majority Socialist Party shortly after the outbreak of the world war and carried on an aggressive agitation against the pro-Government Ebert-Scheidemann group. The manifesto reads:

"Proletarians! Men and Women of labor! Comrades!

"The revolution has made its entry into Germany. The masses of the soldiers who for four years were driven to the slaughterhouse for the sake of capitalistic profits; the masses of workers, who for four years were exploited, crushed, and starved, have revolted. That fearful tool of oppression—Prussian militarism, that scourge of humanity—lies broken on the ground. Its most noticeable representatives, and therewith the most noticeable of those guilty of this war, the Kaiser and the Crown Prince, have fled from the country. Workers' and Soldiers' Councils have been formed everywhere.

Ebert Men Called Betrayers.

"Proletarians of all countries, we do not say that in Germany all the power has really been lodged in the hands of the working people, that the complete triumph of the proletarian revolution has already been attained. There still sit in the Government all those Socialists who in August, 1914, abandoned our most precious possession, the International, who for four years betrayed the German working class and at the same time the International.

"But, proletarians of all countries, now the German proletarian himself is speaking to you. We believe we have the right to appear before your forum in his name. From the first day of this war we endeavored to do our international duty by fighting that criminal Government with all our power and branding it as the one really guilty of the war.

"Now at this moment we are justified before history, before the International and before the German proletariat. The masses agree with us enthusiastically, constantly widening circles of the proletariat share the knowledge that the hour has struck for a settlement with capitalist class rule.

"But this great task cannot be accomplished by the German proletariat alone; it can only fight and triumph by appealing to the solidarity of the proletarians of the whole world.

"Comrades of the belligerent countries, we are aware of your situation. We know very well that your Governments, now since they have won the victory, are dazzling the eyes of many strata of the people with the external brilliancy of the triumph. We know that they thus succeed through the success of the murdering in making its cause and aims forgotten.

"But we also know something else. We know that also in your countries the proletariat made the most fearful sacrifices of flesh and blood, that it is weary of the dreadful butchery, that the proletarian is now returning to his home, and is finding want and misery there, while fortunes amounting to billions are heaped up in the hands of a few capitalists. He has recognized, and will continue to recognize, that your Governments, too, have carried on the war for the sake of the big money bags. And he will further perceive that your Governments, when they spoke of 'justice and civilization' and of the 'protection of small nations,' meant the profits of capital just as did ours when it talked about the 'defense of the home'; and that the peace of 'justice' and of the 'League of Nations' amounts to the same base brigandage as the peace of Brest-Litovsk. Here as well as there the same shameless lust for booty, the same desire for oppression, the same determination to exploit to the limit the brutal preponderance of murderous steel.

No Faith in Promises.

"The imperialism of all countries knows no 'understanding,' it knows only one right—capital's profits; it knows only one language—the sword; it knows only one method—violence. And if it is now talking in all countries, in yours as well as ours, about the 'League of Nations,' 'disarmament,' 'rights of small nations,' 'self-determination of the peoples,' it is merely using the customary lying phrases of the rulers for the purpose of lulling to sleep the watchfulness of the proletariat.

"Proletarians of all countries! This must be the last war! We owe that to the 12,000,000 murdered victims, we owe that to our children, we owe that to humanity.

"Europe has been ruined through the infamous international murder. Twelve million bodies cover the grewsome scenes of the imperialistic crime. The flower of youth and the best man power of the peoples have been mowed down. Uncounted productive forces have been annihilated. Humanity is almost ready to bleed to death from the unexampled blood-letting of history. Victors and vanquished stand at the edge of the abyss. Humanity is threatened with the most dreadful famine, a stoppage of the entire mechanism of production, plagues, and degeneration.

"The great criminals of this fearful anarchy, of this chaos let loose—the ruling classes—are not able to control their own creation. The beast of capital that conjured up the hell of the world war is not capable of banishing it again, of restoring real order, of insuring bread and work, peace and civilization, justice and liberty, to tortured humanity.

"What is being prepared by the ruling classes as peace and justice is only a new work of brutal force from which the hydra of oppression, hatred and fresh, bloody wars raises its thousand heads.

"Socialism alone is in a position to complete the great work of permanent peace, to heal the thousand wounds from which humanity is bleeding, to transform the plains of Europe, trampled down by the passage of the apocryphal horseman of war, into blooming gardens, to conjure up ten productive forces for every one destroyed, to awaken all the physical and moral energies of humanity, and to replace hatred and dissension with fraternal solidarity, harmony, and respect for every human being.

"If representatives of the proletarians of all countries stretch out their hands to each other under the banner of Socialism for the purpose of making peace, then peace will be concluded in a few hours. Then there will be no disputed questions about the left bank of the Rhine, Mesopotamia, Egypt, or colonies. Then there will be only one people; the toiling human beings of all races and tongues. Then there will be only one right: the equality of all men. Then there will be only one aim: prosperity and progress for everybody.

"Humanity is facing this alternative: Dissolution and downfall in capitalist anarchy, or regeneration through the social revolution. The hour for decision has struck. If you believe in socialism it is now time to show it by deeds. If you are Socialists, now is the time to act.

"Proletarians of all countries, when we now summon you to a common struggle it is not done for the sake of the German capitalists who, under the label 'German nation,' are trying to escape the consequences of their own crimes; it is being done for our sake as well as for yours. Remember that your victorious capitalists stand ready to suppress in blood our revolution, which they fear as their own. You yourselves have not become any freer through the 'victory,' you have only become still more enslaved. If your ruling classes succeed in throttling the proletarian revolution in Germany, as well as in Russia, then they will turn against you with redoubled violence. Your capitalists hope that victory over us and over revolutionary Russia will give them the power to scourge you with a whip of scorpions and to erect the thousand-year empire of exploitation upon the grave of socialism.

"Therefore the proletariat of Germany is looking toward you in this hour. Germany is pregnant with the social revolution, but socialism can only be realized by the proletariat of the world.

"And therefore we call to you: 'Arise for the struggle! Arise for action! The time for empty manifestos, platonic resolutions, and high-sounding words has gone by! The hour of action has struck for the International!' We ask you to elect Workers' and Soldiers' Councils everywhere that will seize political power and, together with us, will restore peace.

"Not Lloyd George and Poincaré, not Sonnino, Wilson, and Erzberger or Scheidemann, must be allowed to make peace. Peace is to be concluded under the waving banner of the socialist world revolution.

"Proletarians of all countries! We call upon you to complete the work of socialist liberation, to give a human aspect to the disfigured world and to make true those words with which we often greeted each other in the old days and which we sang as we parted: 'And the Internationale shall be the human race!'

PROTEST YIELDING SHIPS.

Hamburg and Bremen Wrought Up Over Agreement with Allies.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The acceptance by the German Armistice Commission of the demand by the Allies for the delivery of the German merchant fleet is causing both indignation and anxiety in Hamburg and Bremen.

A meeting of protest was held at Hamburg on Monday, according to the Berlin Vossische Zeitung. All the trade interests and representatives of the sailors took part in the meeting, which was very largely attended.

The new manager of the Hamburg-American Line, Privy Councilor Cuno, announced the agreement of the armistice authorities regarding the shipping surrender, and the meeting passed a resolution against the action which has been taken. The resolution declared that the interests represented expected that the Government would not ratify the agreement, and that it would make preparations for the reopening of the discussion of the question by the joint commission of German experts and representatives of the Entente.

The shipowners of Bremen have likewise protested to the Government at Berlin against the measure.

The German Armistice Commission has announced that, according to a statement made by Marshal Foch at Treves, sea transport for about 25,000 German soldiers assembled at Nikolayev, Russia, as well as German troops at Haifa, Syria, will be undertaken by the Entente. It is said that only one of the allied powers has not agreed to the plan.

PROTESTS KAISER CONCERT.

Dutch Paper Objects to Proposed Honor—Ex-Ruler a Busy Sawyer.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 23.—The announcement that the local choral union at Amerongen would give a concert Saturday at Amerongen castle in honor of the former German Emperor has provoked a strong protest from the Handelsblad.

The newspaper says that such action is calculated to create difficulties and complications with the Entente powers, who might consider the concert an indication of Dutch sympathy for Herr Hohenzollern.

AMERONGEN, Holland, Jan. 22, (Associated Press.)—Sawing wood continues to be the chief occupation of the former German Emperor, who spends several hours each morning and afternoon within the castle grounds working hard, while several men-servants respectfully hand logs to him and then pile the short sticks in heaps for use later in the furnaces of the castle.

The shortage of coal in Holland compels the burning of wood, plentiful supplies of which are obtainable from the surrounding estate. William Hohenzollern works so well that he is able to furnish the entire consumption of the castle fires. The former Emperor scarcely ever speaks to his attendants while he is at work.

The two moats which encircle the castle are now covered with ice sufficiently thick to bear skaters. The villagers, however, have been given to understand that the accustomed permission to skate in the moats cannot be accorded while the former Emperor is in the castle.

There are various reports in circulation concerning the alleged intention of the former Empress to return to Potsdam. These are based on her expressed desire to end her days at Potsdam, which she regards as her home.

The former Empress, it is said, has no intention of leaving her husband in Holland. Communication between her and her children and grandchildren is fairly frequent by letter and telegram, but no suggestion has arisen as to her joining them in Germany.

For several weeks nothing has been heard from the former Crown Prince, who remains virtually alone in his refuge on the Island of Wieringen.

Several more members of the former Emperor's suite are about to leave for Germany, where, as State servants, they must place themselves at the disposal of the Government or forfeit their right to pensions.

Lieut. Gen. von Estorff, whose wife is an American, will continue to devote himself to the former Emperor. The General has resigned his rank in the German army. At present von Estorff is suffering from a cold as a result of the dampness.

material for propaganda of which the bourgeois made swift and abundant use.

At the same time the pendulum has not swung as far to the right as had been anticipated, and the sweeping success of the German Democratic Party is the surprise of the elections. Having a prospect of holding a position of great importance in the new Parliament, this group comprises former Progressives of the left wing and National Liberals, with hitherto unorganized radical elements, supported by, among others, Prince Max of Baden and Dr. Solf.

As the Democratic Party includes in its ranks the best of the moderate bourgeois, with a good leavening of "intellectuals," its leaders proved their tactical ability by declining, when everything was in the melting pot, to co-operate with the other bourgeois parties in making a united front against the Socialists. In this way they secured support from many electors who would otherwise have voted for the Majority Socialists rather than risk a possible reactionary victory.

Their success is even greater than they themselves expected, and gives to German radicalism an importance in the State it never before possessed. It is estimated that the Majority and Minority Socialists combined have got a mandate of 40 to 50 per cent. of the electors. If, therefore, they are unable to form a majority of the Government, then the Democratic Party, by virtue of its personnel, as well as its members, will really constitute the most influential group in the State and leave the strongest mark on the new Constitution.

Here and there the reactionaries have maintained their hold, but, speaking of the elections generally, they suffered disaster, in some cases of a sensational character. In feudal Mecklenburg, for example, the Conservatives secured only one seat, as compared with the Socialists' three and the Democrats' two. In Baden all the reactionary parties combined have only one representative, while the Socialists won five seats, the Centrists the same number, and the Democrats three.

In Leipsic, where the reactionaries are believed to be exceptionally strong, only one Conservative was elected.

Especially amazing is the success of the Left parties in Württemberg, where the Socialists won no fewer than seven seats and the Democrats four, while the extent of the radical victory is even better indicated by the fact that the Centrists, who were splendidly organized there, managed to get only four out of their seventeen candidates elected.

The old National Liberals of the right wing, better known formerly as Pan-Germans, have suffered more than any of the reactionary parties, some of their strongest citadels having been captured by the Democrats.

Expect Assembly to Legislate.

BERLIN, Jan. 22, (Associated Press.)—The German National Assembly, which will convene at Weimar on Feb. 6, is expected to be in session about two months. The first business before the Assembly will be the selection of a provisional Government, because the present Government considers its existence at an end with the convening of a Constituent Assembly.

The Assembly will then take up the adoption of a Constitution. The present Government, as such, will not present any proposal, and the draft prepared by the Ministry of the Interior will be submitted merely as a preliminary suggestion to form the basis of discussion.

The obligatory task of the Constituent Assembly will be finished with the adoption of a Constitution, but it has the right to make of itself a constituted, instead of a constituting, body, and this will probably be done. In that case the Assembly will be obliged to regulate tax and financial questions by legislation.

The peace question probably will not be considered, as it is not expected that the Germans will be admitted to the Peace Conference before the adjournment of the Assembly.

The question of lodging the 3,000 persons who are expected to attend the convention is a serious one, because Weimar is a small city with limited accommodations. The municipal authorities there are considering the question of billeting the delegates and journalists with private families, if necessary, and in adjacent cities.

Telegraph, telephone, and postal communications will be enlarged and train service will be increased. Work in this direction is already under way.

The Constituent Assemblies of the various German States probably will not convene until after the National Assembly has completed its work.

HAMBURG RIOTS RENEWED.

Spartacide Successes Reported—Radek Back in Berlin.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Dispatches from Hamburg report that there was shooting Tuesday night in the neighborhood of the Central Railway Station, the Town Hall, and on the harbor front by Spartacides, who are reported to have captured two police stations.

A stricter form of martial law has been proclaimed, and all the theatres and restaurants have been ordered closed. The Soldiers' Council has decreed that all arms must be surrendered within forty-eight hours. Those found in possession of weapons at the expiration of that time will be liable to summary court-martial.

Karl Radek, the Russian Bolshevist, who was prominent during the recent disorders in Berlin, and who fled when the Government troops were victorious, is once more in Berlin trying to resume connections with chiefs of the Spartacus element, according to dispatches to Paris newspapers.

Since German troops were summoned to put down the Spartacide uprising in Berlin, the army has been assuming a position of greater importance, according to advices received here. Supreme command of the peace army has been transferred from the People's Commissioners to the Minister of War, who will be responsible to the Government. The transfer was made with the approval of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, which will still be responsible for all social and economic regulations concerning the army.

Officers in future will wear a dark blue stripe on the left sleeve. All other distinctive marks have been abolished. The obligation to salute is reciprocal, but has been abolished in the big cities.

STRIKES IN BERLIN END.

Light Restored and Street Cars Run —Halle Strike Also Settled.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The strike of electrical workers in Berlin, which had caused the closing owing to lack of light of a large proportion of the hotels, restaurants, cafés, and places of amusement, greatly inconveniencing the public, has been ended, Berlin advices announced today.

The strike of the Berlin tramway men has also been called off and the street car service, which had been partially suspended, has been resumed on full schedule.

The Halle Zeitung announces that the railway strike there has been settled. The demands of the strikers were conceded, including one for the dismissal of the official who had incurred their dislike.

The Savings of Soldiers and Sailors

But when a fellow has paid for Liberty Bonds, insurance, cigarettes, stamps and a few other things out of the pay envelope Uncle Sam hands him, you can't exactly blame a fighting man if his capital is mostly good will.

That's why it gives us such genuine pleasure every time a Soldier or Sailor takes advantage of the substantial reductions we have made in our good all-wool Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothes.

WILLIAMS ACCUSES NEWSPAPER CRITIC

SOUGHT AID OF BANKERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, issued a statement tonight in which he declares he has discovered the origin of propaganda which, he says, has been started against him and his office.

Without disclosing names Mr. Williams made public a photographic copy of a memorandum which he says, evidence in his possession shows, was prepared by a newspaper correspondent in Washington.

The memorandum was addressed to a Washington banker. In making it public the Controller withheld the name of this banker. He also withheld the name of the newspaper correspondent, but Norborne T. N. Robinson, correspondent of The Buffalo Evening News, declares he is the man referred to by Mr. Williams. The correspondent issued a statement tonight attacking the Controller.

The statement issued by Controller Williams follows:

"The origin of propaganda recently started against the Controller of the Currency and this office is explained by a document which came into my possession accidentally within the last few weeks, a photograph of which in the interest of decent journalism and fair play I feel it my duty to make public.

"The document is headed 'Memorandum for Mr. ——.' The name, typewritten in the memorandum, but which I prefer not to make public now, is that of an official of a banking institution (not national) which has been under serious criticism by the Controller's office for months past for irregular and unlawful practices.

"Evidence in my possession shows that this memoradum was prepared by a newspaper correspondent of Washington, who was the author of some recent stories sent out from Washington to various newspapers, to the effect that active opposition to the confirmation of a new term for the Controller of the Currency had been developed on the part of both Democratic and Republican Senators, and criticising the Controller's administration, and who probably was the instigator of others along the same line.

Admits Sending Out Stories.

"This correspondent was sent for and came to the Treasury last Monday and was asked whether he had sent out stories criticising the Controller of the Currency. He first denied that he had done so, except to one newspaper in Buffalo, N. Y., of which he said he was the Washington correspondent, but subsequently he admitted that he had furnished the material for the stories to various other newspapers in different parts of the country, including among others the New York Tribune, The Wall Street Journal, papers in Boston, Louisville, &c.

"Although he denied that he had delivered the document mentioned above to the bank official to whom it was addressed, he admitted that he had been in consultation with that official in this connection on a number of occasions and had received his criticisms of this office, and that he had been carrying on negotiations with some one whose name he refused to divulge—but who was evidently the bank official to whom the memoranuum had been addressed—with a view to conducting a campaign to oppose the confirmation of the Controller of the Currency in the event of his renomination. He refused to affirm or deny that he had written the memorandum. His refusal to deny may be taken fairly under the circumstances as confession.

"He said he had not as yet received a nickel for his propaganda work, but subsequently admitted that he had, within the last few weeks, gotten money as a loan from the banker who had been attacking and criticising the Controller of the Currency and to whom his memorandum was addressed.

"He said that his negotiations as to the propaganda were yet on. In response to my question whether he had ever heard any breath of criticism directed against the integrity of my administration, he admitted that he had not.

"He insisted that he had not yet consummated his negotiations for continuing his publicity campaign, although he confessed that he had already given wide circulation to the stories he had written.

"I am a little doubtful as to whether this newspaper scribbler—a discredit to a noble profession—seeking fees to defame a Government official should be dignified with public notice, but I think the people should understand the nature of some of the things appearing in the newspapers so as not to be imposed upon and in order that they may distinguish paid for propaganda for real facts.

Appeal Sent to Banker.

"The following is a copy of the 'memorandum' referred to in the foregoing statement, a photograph of which memorandum, by chance but unfortunately for its author, has come into the possession of the Controller of the Currency:

"'If reappointed and confirmed the present Controller of the Currency will remain in office for five years.

"'What is needed is determination on the part of two or three Republican Senators. If they assume the responsibility the Democrats are not apt to make a serious fight for Williams in the Senate.

"'A publicity campaign should be started at once, but should be run very quietly. Several papers will print stories if the stories are handed to them disguised.

"'Full publicity can come when the names are sent to the Senate and referred to the committee.

"'In the meantime a story here and there would help the Senators along.

"'Get several bankers in on the deal. Do not tell them who is to handle the publicity at the beginning. That is a matter strictly between you and me for the present, because I will want to work quietly at first, since, when I have to come out in the open, I will be sure to make some enemies in high places.

"'Since the fight promises to last only a few weeks and in handling the publicity I will be sure to incur some enmities, the charges will be $250 a week. I am sure I can do some good work for the cause.'"

"Although he withholds names, Mr. Williams refers to me in his statement. It is easy to read between the lines of Mr. Williams's statement the suggestion of intimidation. Mr. Williams the Controller is using his official position to obtain private information which he could not obtain as an individual, and is using that information to further his personal ends. Desiring reappointment he is leaving no stone unturned to help his candidacy.

"The promissory note to which he refers is indorsed by two newspaper men of standing; it is a transaction which no honest man could or would criticise. Between the date on which Mr. Williams' bank examiners photographed the note—unknown to the officers of the bank—and the date when Mr. Williams with 'third degree' methods 'flashed' the photograph on me, the first curtailment had been made. I told Mr. Williams this, but he withholds that fact in his statement.

"With other Americans, I have felt we were at war with autocracy. Woodrow Wilson, to whom Mr. Williams owes his reappointment, is fighting autocracy with all his might. Yet Mr. Williams in an effort to intimidate those who dare criticise him, uses autocratic methods of the sort the deposed William Hohenzollern always indulged in.

"In having my promissory note photographed to use for purposes of intimidation he was not engaged in any duty required of him as a Government official. He acted as an individual, as John Skelton Williams struggling to hold a Government job.

"I did not seek participation in a publicity campaign against Mr. Williams. I have merely known him as an unpopular Government official. His statement tonight must carry to all fair-minded men the conviction of his unfitness for public office. My newspaper associates in Washington at all times have authority to pass on my standing in my profession."

DIVORCE FOR MRS. NIMICK.

After hearing testimony yesterday Supreme Court Justice Pendleton intimated that he would grant a decree of divorce to Mrs. Nellie Pearson Nimick from Alexander K. Nimick, who inherited more than $1,000,000 from his mother, Mrs. Florence N. C. Nimick, when Nimick failed to appear to deny the charges against him and his counsel asked a few questions to make it appear that the defendant desired to protect the reputation of Beatrice Dorothy Arnold, the co-respondent. The defendant's mother died at Bay Shore, L. I., on July 23, 1910, leaving the bulk of her estate to her son because he had adhered to her wishes and refrained from marrying during her lifetime.

He married Miss Pearson in 1911. She left her husband after their last child was born in 1916, because she learned that while she was in the hospital her husband had taken Miss Arnold to their home in Rye. The chief witness for the plaintiff was Catherine Fanning, a maid, who said that when the defendant took the co-respondent home with him he stated that Miss Arnold was a friend of Mrs. Nimick who believed that the latter was at home, and asked the maid to "be nice to her." Nimick and Miss Arnold went away together the next afternoon. Mr. Nimick's former chauffeur testified against him and concerning trips he and Miss Arnold took from the Hotel Marie Antoinette, "where they both seemed to stop frequently." A room clerk at the hotel also testified. Ex-Justice George L. Ingraham appeared for Mrs. Nimick.

INDICT 8 LUMBER CONCERNS

Four Manhattan Companies Among Those Accused Under Elkins Law.

Eight lumber companies were indicted yesterday by the United States Grand Jury in Newark, N. J., for alleged violation of the Elkins law. It is charged that they discriminated against certain customers, and that lumber consigned to private concerns was labeled as Government property to get it through embargo territory.

Four of the indicted firms have headquarters in New York. Those indicted were the National Box and Lumber Company of Newark, the Ditmar Company of 20 Broadway, New York; the Forest Box and Lumber Company of 405 Fourth Street, New York; the Royal Box and Lumber Company, Incorporated, of 41 Wooster Street, New York; the Union Wholesale Lumber Company of Youngstown, Penn.; the Passaic-Bergen Lumber Company of Passaic, N. J., the Also-Parker Lumber Company of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and the Star Box and Lumber Company of 81 Tompkins Street, New York.

The first four in this list pleaded not guilty. The others probably will plead on Monday.

HOTEL MEN TO FIGHT TO RESTORE LIQUOR

PLAN A WIDE CAMPAIGN

Will Seek a Repeal of the Amendment or Attack Its Constitutionality in the Courts.

Men in the hotel and real estate business have organized themselves into the Association Opposed to National Prohibition and have opened an office in Room 302 of the Cambridge Building, at Thirty-third Street and Fifth Avenue. James Woods, Vice President and general manager of the company operating the Hotel Belmont and the Murray Hill Hotel, is the Chairman of the association, and John McK. Bowman, President of the company operating the Biltmore, Commodore, and Ansonia Hotels, is the Treasurer. Frank A. K. Boland of the law firm of Campbell & Boland is the general counsel.

The object of the association is to cause the repeal, if possible, of the ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment, or, failing that, to attack its constitutionality in the courts. The first meeting of the entire association was held at its office yesterday afternoon. Leading hotel men of New York attended the meeting, as well as many real estate men and a representative of the New York Real Estate Board of Trade. After the meeting Mr. Boland said that it had been voted unanimously to send a letter, the text of which had been read to the meeting and approved, to every hotel association in the United States, inclosing copies of a petition of protest against the methods employed in obtaining the ratification of the amendment, with a request that the petitions be circulated among the patrons of every hotel in every State for their signatures. Copies of the petitions are expected will be in the lobbies of the chief New York hotels in a few days.

At the same time that the petitions are being circulated lawyers employed by the association will attack the validity of the ratification by the Legislatures of those States whose constitutions or statutes compel matters like an amendment to the Federal Constitution to be submitted to a referendum of the people before they may be voted on by the Legislatures of those States. Mr. Boland said there were about fifteen States which, in his opinion and in the opinion of lawyers associated with him, had illegally ratified the amendment, because it was not first submitted to a referendum of the people.

Mr. Woods has caused to be sent all over the country, over his signature, a monograph in which the following questions are asked:

What about revenues?
What about confiscation and claims?
What about labor and wages?
The Constitutional issue—is this amendment really before you? Was it lawfully passed by Congress?
Can the whole spirit and purpose of the Constitution be changed without conventions of the people?
Shall an instrument intended to be charter and guarantee of individual liberty be transformed into an instrument of absolutism, tyranny, and oppression?
Shall 4,000 votes in this liberty-loving land arbitrarily control 100,000,000 of people?

Every civic, commercial, political and patriotic organization in every State, Mr. Boland said, had been invited or would be invited to ally itself with the new association and help in the work. What the association desired most, he said, was a man of the type of Theodore Roosevelt to become its President. The office would have been offered to Colonel Roosevelt had he lived, Mr. Boland said, and he was sure that he would have accepted it. Another man of great national prominence, he said, was now being considered.

At a meeting of the Committee of Permanent Organization of the Self-Determination League of Liberty, held at the Hotel Walton, Seventieth Street and Columbus Avenue, last evening, a committee of eleven men and women was appointed to complete the organization. The Chairman of the meeting, R. A. McIntyre of 583 West 177th Street, announced that no person engaged in the liquor business would be eligible for membership. The committee appointed last night was empowered to hire permanent headquarters for the league, and meantime the temporary headquarters will be at the Hotel Walton.

The following protest is being sent by the league to all parts of the country for signatures:

"We, the undersigned citizens and voters of the United States of America, who are not engaged in the liquor business, desire to enter our protest against the arbitrary enactment of the proposed vicious prohibition legislation, which threatens the destruction of our freedom and liberty. Prohibition, in our opinion, spells disunion and disaster. The enforcement of this undemocratic, autocratic measure we believe to be a menace to the peace and welfare of this country.

"The Self-Determination League of Liberty is hereby authorized to affix our names to any memorial having for its object the denunciation of all those who are responsible for this wicked infringement of our rights as free and independent citizens, rights guaranteed to us by the Constitution. We further authorize the use of our names in opposition to any and all candidates for public office throughout the United States who would deny the right of self-determination to the voters of this country, particularly in the Sovereign State of New York.

"This is to be a fight to a finish against every legislator, State and national, who by their votes have betrayed the trust reposed in them by the voters. Sectarianism has no place in our national life and we cannot too strongly condemn those who seek to make this a part of the laws of this country. The Anti-Saloon League we consider a mere catspaw for those interests who seek to impose their will upon the workingmen for reasons best known to themselves, but who are unwilling to abide by the consequences of their own acts where it affects them personally."

Thomas D. Green, President of the Hotel Association of New York, speaking last night at the fortieth annual dinner of the association at the Hotel Biltmore, said in discussing prohibition that the people themselves would "probably turn the tide of bigotry and fanaticism which has cornered the Legislatures."

"It has been suggested that if the country goes 'dry'," said Mr. Green, "there will be plenty to drink. If there is, it will not be in the hotels. It will be peddled around, no doubt by bootleggers, and heaven help the result.

"While I have done all that I could to keep this country 'wet,' it has been very little as compared to what others in this heartrending fight have been and are doing for a cause that we know to be just to the last degree. Don't get it into your heads that this is a deathbed struggle.

"What has happened is doing more good than we could have accomplished; but what we must do now is to take advantage of the altered attitude and drive our point home. We'll put an argument on every menu and in every room in the hotels in this country, and we'll do more. Don't fear, the matter is in good hands."

Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert, another speaker, said that he was in Congress when the prohibition amendment made its appearance. The Legislatures rushed it through, he said, when many minds were bent on winning the war, and Congress itself did not really understand what the amendment would mean to the country.

SAY THEY MUST RAISE ANTHRACITE PRICES

POTTSVILLE, Penn., Jan. 23.—The statement that anthracite coal operators do not create a surplus because such a condition would naturally lower prices was made at the first session today of the subcommittee of the United States Senate Committee on Manufactures, which is inquiring into the high price of coal and the alleged shortage of domestic sizes. Fred M. Chase, Vice President and General Manager of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company and the Coxe Brothers Company, said producers opposed running up a surplus as a matter of business protection.

E. H. Leaming, general manager of three independent collieries in the Scranton field, testified that coal producers must get more for their output or go out of business. He said his companies were operating at a loss. Officers of mining companies were emphatic in denial that there was any attempt to curtail production to keep up prices.

S. D. Dimmick, assistant to the Vice President and general manager of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company, of Scranton, said the profits at some of the collieries were so small that they were considering closing some of them. High prices of labor and materials is the chief cause for the high cost of production, he said.

Charles F. Huber, President and General Manager of the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Company, testified that only about two-thirds of the required employes could be obtained, and said that with a full force the production of coal could be increased 50 per cent. He insisted that the margin of profit was too close to permit of any price cutting. He estimated roughly the profit on a ton of coal at 60 or 65 cents.

WANTS USEFUL MONUMENTS

Labor Leader Suggested "Liberty Halls" Instead of Statues.

George W. Coleman, publicity representative of the Department of Labor, as principal speaker at a meeting to discuss labor conditions, at the public forum of the Church of the Ascension last night urged the building of "Liberty Halls" in each town and city throughout the country instead of monuments of stone or metal to the soldiers who gave their lives in the war.

Mr. Coleman said that the building of these "Liberty Halls" as monuments would be a far more fitting monument to the hero dead, and at the same time would help solve the labor problem by advantageously using the present labor surplus. The speaker declared the building industry is now $3,000,000,000 behind in buildings erected.

Joseph Schlossberg, one of the officers of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, told of the winning of the clothing strike for forty-four hours a week. He asserted that the strike for a shorter working day had been decided upon by the union so that soldiers returning from the war could get their old jobs back without putting any of the other workers out or lowering their wages. These returning soldiers had stood solidly with the union, he declared, to such an extent that the employers wrote Secretary Baker complaining about the presence of soldiers in uniform at strikers' meetings.

Leon Loster, representing the International Hotel Workers, told of the waiters' strike, which has now been in progress for thirteen weeks. "And we asked," he said, "was $15 a week and a ten-hour work day. We wanted to abolish the tipping system. It has been done in Petrograd and in Berlin, and we hope it will some day be done in New York. We stand for that ideal, but the hotel proprietors with hired thugs prevent our picketing, and scores of our members for no offense at all have been sent to jail."

HEALTH BILL INDORSED.

Council of Organizations Favors Action by Congress.

A meeting of the Council of Organizations, representing 400 bodies in New York, met yesterday at the Cosmopolitan Club, 133 East Fortieth Street, and discussed ways to meet the present health emergency. It was the sense of the meeting that it was highly important that matters pertaining to health be brought to the attention of Congress for proper legislative action, especially infant hygiene.

The principal speakers were Representative Jeannette Rankin, Miss Lillian D. Wald, Chairman of the Nurses' Emergency Council; Miss Florence Kelley, Secretary of the National Consumers' League, and Dr. William J. Schieffelin, Chairman of the Citizens' Union.

The speakers approved the Rankin-Robbins bill now before Congress, which is to preserve all the bureaus of industrial hygiene. Miss Rankin said she had drafted the bill after careful consideration and much discussion with those who know the subject. Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Chairman of the council, urged those present to support the measure.

BANK PRESIDENT A SUICIDE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—George Howard, President of the du Pont National Bank, and prominent in fashionable clubs and social circles, was found dead last evening in the basement hallway of the building of that bank, on du Pont Circle.

He had taken his life with a revolver, one bullet having entered his body and a second one having passed through his head. Life had been extinct several hours when the body was discovered by a colored maid.

Mr. Howard, who was 49 years old, is survived by his wife and a son, Henry Howard, 12 years old. He was a native of England and a son of Sir Henry Howard and Lady Howard, his mother being a daughter of one of the founders of the Riggs National Bank. He came to this country when a young man and had resided here for twenty years.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Howard married Mrs. Clifford Perin, who was Miss Mae Claggett before her first marriage. He was treasurer of the National Savings and Trust Company before he became President of the du Pont National Bank, and was identified with other financial institutions in this city. He held membership in the Chevy Chase Club, the Metropolitan Club, the Montgomery Club and the Alibi Club.

An attack of influenza, from which he probably had not fully recovered, was the only reason assigned for the deed.

Mayor Hague Defends Bond Issue.

Testimony was taken at the City Hall in Jersey City yesterday before Charles J. Roe, a Supreme Court Commissioner, to be submitted to the Supreme Court in certiorari proceedings to test the validity of the proposed issue by Jersey City of $2,334,000 of general improvement bonds. John A. O'Brien and other members of the Taxpayers' League who obtained the certiorari writ represented to the court that the proposed issue was to pay for expenses that should have been provided for in the tax budget. Mayor Frank Hague testified that no money raised by the sale of bonds had been used to pay current expenses of the City Hospital, and he declared that the City Hospital is carried on at a cost of $50,000 a year less than under the preceding administration. The hearing will continue next Thursday.

BRITISH MINERS WIN MEAL-TIME DEMAND

ENGINEERS GAIN POINT

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The strike of the 147,000 Yorkshire coal miners who quit work today when the owners refused to meet their demands, was settled late in the day by the Coal Controller, who agreed to concede the twenty minutes "dead time" for meals while the mines are under Government control. The men are to resume work Friday.

At a conference of representatives of the employers and the engineering trade today an agreement was reached by which the men will resume work on the understanding that the conference next week will discuss the grievances of the men. The engineers' agreement includes the engineers, shipbuilders, and affiliated trades, and brings into operation a forty-seven-hour week. Other details will be arranged at the conference.

The National Federation of General Workers, representing nearly 1,000,000 men and women, at a meeting today resolved to demand a forty-hour working week.

Serious strikes and threats of more serious ones in England over disputes which ordinarily would be considered unimportant have led some students of British labor conditions to the belief that the demands are made, not in an effort to better labor conditions, but in an attempt to revolutionize the whole condition of employment. In the shipbuilding union is an active minority which demands a thirty-hour week.

A number of responsible labor leaders have declared that they are not in sympathy with continued trivial demands and they are represented as being supported by the more conservative members.

The Daily Mail, which is usually well-informed on labor questions, says:

"The extremists are a small minority, but are exceedingly active. They are in revolt, not only against capitalism, but also against the union leaders."

HAAG ON PENSIONS BOARD.

Secretary of Estimate Board Appointed by the Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 23.—Governor Smith today appointed Joseph Haag, secretary of the Board of Estimate of New York, a member of the commission to inquire into the subject of retirement pensions and allowances for state and municipal officers and employes. Haag is appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the failure to qualify of Robert W. Allen.

The Governor today also signed Senator Foley's bill which will prohibit sale of liquor to the army in uniform, whether they have been discharged from service or not.

The Governor received a letter today from the League to Enforce Peace requesting that he appoint a legislative committee to attend the sessions of the Atlantic Congress for a League of Nations to be held in New York Feb. 5 and 6. The letter was signed by William Howard Taft, Alton B. Parker, Governor Cooper of Kansas, James W. Gerard, and Myron T. Herrick as a Committee on Legislative Invitations of the League.

A meeting of the Senate Finance Committee has been called for next Tuesday evening to consider the nominations sent to the Senate by the Governor, including that of Charles F. Rattigan for Superintendent of Prisons, Lewis F. Nixon for Superintendent of Public Works, Michael F. Walsh for Tax Commissioner, Miss Frances Perkins for member of the State Industrial Commission, and Henry Renaud for Superintendent of Elections.

FERRY RATES ARE RAISED.

Deficit on Thirty-ninth Street Line Means Increase for Vehicles.

A schedule of increases in vehicle rates on the municipally owned ferry line from Whitehall Street, Manhattan, and Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, which was proposed by John H. Delaney, Commissioner of Plants and Structures, was approved yesterday by the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners, of which the Mayor is Chairman. Commissioner Delaney explained that the rate on the ferry is far below the rates charged on privately owned ferries and that the route is four times as long. He declared that the present rates were inadequate, as there was a deficiency of $178,893 in the operation of the line last year. It was estimated that the new rates would produce $170,000 additional revenue to the city.

Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert was authorized by the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners to lease to the United States Steel Products Company the marginal street area between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, at an annual rental of $10,518.

REFUSE WORKERS' DEMAND.

Lawrence Mill Owners Say Conditions Do Not Justify Concessions.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Jan. 23.—A mass meeting of textile workers in this city will be held at the City Hall Saturday afternoon to consider the situation resulting from the refusal of owners of large mills to grant a demand for a forty-eight-hour week, recently made upon all mills in the city.

The Pacific Mills, employing 10,000 operatives, refused the demands today. Walter E. Parker, agent of the mills, stated that a reduction in hours was not justified by business conditions or the prospects of the immediate future. Tonight John Mercer, agent of the Arlington Mills, said his company took the same stand as the Pacific Mills.

RAILROAD EARNINGS DROP $250,000,000

WAGE INCREASE BIG ITEM

Added $636,000,000 to Operating Expenses—Heavy Decrease in December Traffic.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Railroads in 1918 under Government control and unusual war conditions earned about $713,000,000, or $250,000,000 less than in 1917, $370,000,000 less than in the record year of 1916, and about the same as in 1913.

This became apparent today on the basis of definite reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission of earnings of 195 principal railroads—those having annual operating revenues of more than $1,000,000—for eleven months and unofficial calculation of December earnings, which Railroad Administration reports indicate will be considerably smaller than those of the preceding months. Although subject to slight revision, the figures afforded the first public view of the results of railway operations last year, so far as earnings are concerned.

Receipts from freight, passenger, express and other transportation during the year amounted to approximately $4,-813,000,000, or $802,000,000 more than in the previous year. Operating expenses jumped to about $3,971,000,000, or about $1,139,000,000 more than in the preceding year.

Preliminary reports to the railroad administration indicate that freight traffic fell off in December, with the virtual stopping of grent food shipments destined for Europe and the cessation of the hauling of other war material, while expenses could not be reduced materially. This condition sent the net earnings, or railway operating income, which has been declining steadily since the record month of last July, to probably $25,-000,000 or $30,000,000, officials believe. This may be compared to income of $59,-000,000 in December of 1917, when blizzards and curtailment of traffic sent earnings to what was then considered a very low record.

The outstanding features of the railway earnings situation last year were that freight and passenger rates were increased to yield about $500,000,000 annually, or $450,000,000, in the six months during which they were effective, while wage advances added $630,000,000 to operating expenses. These are the latest estimates of railroad administration accountants, but are not considered final. Wages particularly may prove to amount to more than is now believed.

The Railroad Administration accounts now report that in 1918 the $1,710,-000,000 payroll of the year previous was increased 37 per cent., and that consequently $2,346,000,000 was paid out last year to the 2,000,000 railway employes. Many wage increases were effective for only the latter part of the year, and if these run through the present year, even without other additions which may come from actions on pending applications for more pay, they would make $784,000,000 additional wages. The wage level at the end of 1918 was a little more than 43 per cent. higher than at the beginning of the year, when the Government assumed control.

Prospects for improvement of the earnings situation this year depend mainly on whether business during the readjustment period continues active, and gives a large volume of freight traffic. Indications point to a reduction of traffic, and consequently to reduced earnings, according to the Railroad Administration. Director General Hines has stated that no "considerable" increase is to be given to any rate increase, but he believes no general reductions can be made this year.

These facts bear only an indirect relation to the Government's deficit, estimated at $198,000,000. This represents the difference between the net income received by the railroads and the aggregate, calculated at a little less than $800,000,000, which the Government guarantees the roads for the year.

Neither does this take into consideration the expenditures of about $588,-000,000 last year for capital purposes—to make permanent improvements, and buy cars and locomotives.

TO CALL BURLESON IN WIRE INQUIRY

Will Be Last Witness Before Committee—Koons Fears Labor Troubles for Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Postmaster General Burleson will be the last and only additional witness the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads will hear on the Moon resolution, designed to extend the period of governmental regulation of telegraphs and telephones. The committee decided this evening to ask the Postmaster General to testify next Tuesday morning. Mr. Burleson said he would appear.

All the Republicans and a few of the Democrats among the members who have been attending the hearings are against the plan. There are thirty Democrats on the committee, as opposed to nine Republicans.

John C. Koons, First Assistant Postmaster General, supported the resolution before the committee this afternoon. He asked that a definite time for returning the wire systems to private ownership be inserted in the resolution, which in its present form simply extends the control until Congress orders otherwise.

"This proposed amendment is important," he said, "so that we can arrange proper operation during the time given to us, and so that the owners may know when the systems will be given back to them."

"What about April 1 for the return?" asked Representative Ramseyer of Iowa.

"Too soon," replied Mr. Koons.

"But don't you think it might be done as soon as possible?"

"If the companies could operate the systems as economically as the Government I might answer yes, but labor troubles are impending," was Mr. Koons's answer.

"Do you fear a Bolshevist movement in this country?" Mr. Ramseyer asked.

"I have more confidence in our Government than that," replied Mr. Koons. "There would be nothing like that, but there s no question that labor conditions may be very serious."

He said the Government would be in a better position to handle the labor situation than private companies, and the employes probably would respect the Government more.

Another witness was Sam Small, ex-President of the International Commercial Operators' Association. He said he was for Government ownership of the telegraph lines, but declared that under the present control the system had been a "crime" in its administration.

Protests against extension of control were made by Montana, New Mexico, and Vermont State Commissions.

CHEAPER BUTTER AND EGGS

Prices Drop All Over Country—Meats to Follow, Says Dr. Day.

The price of butter has been dropping steadily in the last three weeks both here and in other parts of the country, due, it was pointed out yesterday, to overproduction for export and the absence of cold weather. Butter has been quoted in the last few days at 57 cents a pound, a drop in three weeks of about 20 cents. The prediction is, Dr. Jonathan C. Day, Commissioner of Foods and Markets, said yesterday, that there will be a corresponding fall in the price of eggs.

"Everything is favoring a drop in the price of butter and fresh eggs," Dr. Day said, "and a similar drop may be expected in meats, though this drop will be more gradual. I am informed that there are many dozens of refrigerator cars sidetracked out in the Jersey meadows containing meat that was to have been shipped abroad. Before the armistice was signed, a shortage in butter and eggs was anticipated, but now the opposite is true.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Butter dropped 5 cents a pound wholesale today. This makes a total fall of 15 cents a pound in less than two weeks. Wholesale trade in butter was described as not merely demoralized but paralyzed. Demand both foreign and domestic was almost at the zero point. Stoppage of Government and foreign buying as a result of cheap supplies abroad, especially from Australian and South America, started the decline. Excessive high prices in the domestic trade did the rest.

Heavy Influenza Toll in Jamaica.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Jan. 23.—Government statistics show an increase of 160 per cent. in deaths from October to December while Spanish influenza was raging. During the last quarter of 1917 there were 3,090 deaths, and during the corresponding period last year there were 13,373 deaths. It is estimated that more than one-third of the population was affected by the epidemic, which is now ended.

WILLIAMS RESIGNS AS HEAD OF B. R. T.

Also Quits Presidency of Affiliated Corporation, Surrendering $50,000 Salary.

WILL TAKE "A LONG REST"

H. W. Taft Succeeds Garrison as Arbiter in Dispute Over Tunnel Wreck Claims.

Colonel Timothy S. Williams, for many years the executive head of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Syetem, has resigned the Presidency of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and the Presidency of the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, two of the three B. R. T. companies now in the hands of a receiver. Of the third company in the receiver's hands, the New York Consolidated Railroad Company, Colonel Williams was only a Director. By giving up the Presidency of the two companies Colonel Williams gives up a salary of $50,000 a year. He will retain, however, the Presidency of five B. R. T. surface car lines, the Presidency of the Bridge Operating Company and of the Transit Development Company, for serving at the head of all of which he receives a salary of $25,000 a year. He gave as the reason for resigning his desire to take a long rest. He has arranged to go away about Feb. 1.

The fact that Colonel Williams had resigned became known yesterday morning when his letter to Receiver Lindley M. Garrison and Mr. Garrison's reply were given out at the B. R. T. Building, 85 Clinton Street. In his letter Colonel Williams wrote:

The receivership of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation automatically severed me from administrative responsibility and duties with reference to those companies, but, as you know, I have been on hand since your appointment as receiver to assist you in every way possible and to relieve you of certain routine duties which you have assigned me. I am much in need of a long rest, and I therefore ask that you will release me from all duties and responsibilities affecting the operations of these two companies. If convenient to you I should like to have this request take effect not later than Jan. 31, for I am planning to go away for a rest at that time.

To this letter, Mr. Garrison made the following reply:

I am just in receipt of your letter of Jan. 22, 1919. You understand, of course, that the appointment of myself as receiver does not automatically or in any other way affect the corporation organization by which I mean that the officers of the corporation elected by the Directors or otherwise are not affected, excepting to the extent that their salaries cease and they no longer have control of the corporate finances or of property, the latter being transferred by the Court's order to the receiver.

Since, on Dec. 31, 1918, when I took possession under the Court's order, you expressed the same sentiment that is contained in your letter of Jan. 22, and since you have remained at my request since that time in order to help me, I have, of course, been looking about for some one to assist me in the operation of the properties and I hope to be able to secure some one and be able to relieve you by the time mentioned in your letter.

I cannot let this opportunity pass without expressing to you my sincere appreciation of the fidelity, ability, and energy with which you have assisted me in the existing complex and difficult situation with which my duties require me to become acquainted.

I thank you most heartily, and I wish you every measure of good health and good fortune.

Before he left the B. R. T. Building Colonel Williams was asked if he had any other reason for resigning than the one given in the letter, and he was asked also where he was going on his vacation. He replied that he thought he would better make no comment on the resignation and he did not care to say anything about his vacation plans. Mr. Garrison was not at the receiver's office yesterday, but it was said there that he would have nothing to add to his letter to Colonel Williams.

Any plans that Colonel Williams may have made for a vacation must be subject to the date fixed for his trial and that of other B. R. T. officials and employes on the charge of manslaughter growing out of the Malbone Street tunnel wreck on Nov. 1. The defendants applied to Supreme Court Justice Callaghan in Brooklyn a few days ago to have the trial held in another county as far distant from Kings County as possible because, the defendants contended, the feeling against the B. R. T. and its officials was so strong in that county that a fair trial there was impossible. Justice Callaghan has the case still under consideration.

Colonel Williams has been connected with what is known now as the B. R. T. system for a few months less than twenty-five years. He was born in Ithaca, N. Y., in 1862. After being graduated from Cornell University in the class of 1884, he came to New York and became a reporter on the old Commercial Advertiser.

Ultimately he left newspaper work to become private secretary to Governor Hill. Governor Flower retained him. When Flower retired from the Governorship and undertook the reorganization of the Long Island Traction Company, out of which grew the B. R. T. system, Williams was made Secretary of the Reorganization Committee. That was in the Spring of 1895. A few months later he was made Secretary and Treasurer of the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company, and when the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company was organized he was made a Director, and Secretary and Treasurer. In 1900, he became Vice President of the B. R. T. and its constituent companies, and, in 1911, he succeeded Edwin W. Winter as President.

To settle the dispute which has arisen between the B. R. T. and the city over the settlement of the claims growing out of the Malbone Street tunnel wreck, a Board of Arbitration was appointed. The B. R. T. wished the city, as its partner in the subway, to pay half the amount of the allowed claims. The city declined to do so. The contract, under the dual subway system, provides that, when a dispute arises between the city and company over items of expenditures, the dispute shall be arbitrated. The original Board consisted of Charles E. Hughes, appointed by Frank H. Hiscock, Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals; Louis Marshall, appointed by the Subway Commission, and Lindley M. Garrison, appointed by the B. R. T. Yesterday Henry W. Taft was appointed to take the place of Mr. Garrison.

Paul A. Schmidt, a lawyer living at 1034 East Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, with an office at 47 Nassau Street, Manhattan, was arraigned before Magistrate McClusky in the Flatbush Police Court yesterday, charged with violating a city ordinance in having ridden on the rear platform of a Brighton Beach elevated train yesterday morning. Schmidt pleaded guilty, saying that at the Boerum Place station a station guard had permitted him and a dozen others to get on the rear platform. The car was so crowded, Schmidt said, that it was impossible for him to get inside. At the Franklin Avenue station a special officer of the railroad company arrested him. The Magistrate said he would investigate the so-called herding of passengers on the rear platforms of elevated trains, and discharged Mr. Schmidt.

CUT OUT PARK'S DEAD TREES

Philip Berolzheimer, Park Commissioner of Manhattan and Richmond, in a statement yesterday said that the Park Department was concentrating all its forces on the removal of a large amount of dead wood which had accumulated in the parks for the last few years.

"Already over 3,000 dead trees have been removed," he said, "but not until a very careful examination had been made of each individual one to ascertain whether the tree was beyond saving. Some of this wood will be distributed, with the consent and approval of Mayor Hylan, to poor people through the Fuel Committee of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense. The dates for distribution will be announced later. There will be stations for distribution at Seventy-seventh Street and Riverside Drive, Ninety-seventh Street and Central Park and Fort Washington Park."

Mr. Berolzheimer announced the establishment of a nursery in Silver Lake Park in Staten Island for the purpose of growing trees, shrubs, and plants to restore the parks.

"For the immediate present," he said, "about eight acres of land, already cleared and prepared, will be planted. By next Fall it is hoped that a considerable supply of perennials will be available with which to rebuild the several herbaceous beds in the parks of the city."

AGITATION AGAINST JEWS.

Hostile Movement Reported from South American Cities.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 23.—A campaign against Jewish residents is in progress in several South American cities. Billboards in Buenos Aires have been covered with the inscription, "Down with the Jews."

The Zionist fraternity yesterday placarded the city with posters "in the name of 150,000 Israelites." These posters declared that the Jews were persecuted by "white guards" in the recent outbreak, and appealed to the people of Argentina and foreign residents for justice "against these unjust persecutions."

Today every poster was covered by another, typographically identical, blaming Russian Jews for the recent outbreak, as well as "the anarchistic outbreak" in 1910, and demanding that the Government "rid the nation of this Jewish pest."

The Zionist fraternity has retained legal advisers and is appealing to the police and Government against the continuation of these persecutions.

There is an anti-Jewish movement also in Montevideo, which has taken the form of opposition to certain Jewish rites, and news dispatches from Chile report an agitation against the Jews there.

CHAUFFEUR FOUND GUILTY.

When Max Katz, a chauffeur, pleaded guilty of assault in causing the death of John Simpson at Forty-eighth Street and Eighth Avenue, Judge McIntyre said in General Sessions yesterday:

"I have determined to make an example of these villainous chauffeurs who recklessly disregard human life. A pedestrian takes chances with his life in crossing a street, and some chauffeurs seem to feel that they are monarchs of all they survey, and that they can kill old and young with impunity. The speeding chauffeurs often insult those who protest against their recklessness. This reckless speeding has resulted in great loss of life, and I am going to put a stop to it, if I can."

Katz will be sentenced for his crime on Jan. 28.

As to the proposed bill, Mr. Swift said that its enactment would cripple the packing industry and add as a consequence to the present cost of foodstuffs. The bill, he asserted, was founded upon a misconception of the industry and the service it renders to the public.

Such legislation is drastic and unprecedented and amounts practically to class legislation," he said.

"After an investigation of over a year," added Mr. Swift, "the Trade Commission is unable to deny that the profits of the packers are so small they could be wiped out without affecting the price of livestock or the price of meat by more than a fraction of a cent a pound. It is difficult to see how this profit could be lower and there is no business that is conducted on such a narrow margin.

"This profit also fluctuates from week to week and often becomes a loss. During twenty-one weeks of the year ending June 30, 1918, for example, Swift & Co. either made no money at all or suffered an actual loss on its beef operations. If there were a combination it would be worthless if it could not prevent losses and if it would not result in more than a bare minimum living profit.

"The only thing that is wrong with the packing business is the public impression that something is wrong. If that impression, which has been created by misstatements and the inflaming of public prejudices, could be remedied, the need for all this legislation would also be remedied.

"As to the 7,000 Swift refrigerator cars which the bill might bring under Government ownership, Mr. Swift said: 'We have only 80 per cent. of our requirements for our business, and they are a losing proposition financially at present.'

The witness said that he would have no objection to Government purchase of the cars if efficient service could be guaranteed.

Discussing the Federal Trade Commission investigation, the witness said:

"Scraps of paper and certain letters from files were taken to maintain their contention, whereas, if we had had an opportunity to explain or introduce evidence we could have shown to any fair-minded person that there is real competition in the business and that no irregular arrangements exist.

"The live stock producer is inclined to think he is underpaid for his product; the consumer is pretty sure to think his meat is costing too high. The packer, a third element, only expects fair play between the two.

"I can well remember when I paid 4 cents a pound for good live cattle and the cattle man was satisfied. Today we are paying from 14 to 18 cents and nobody is satisfied."

The only outside interest Swift & Co. has, the witness said, was in a number of small banks that had to be established near the stock yards to help finance the cattlemen.

HOOVER ANSWERS SENATORS.

Also Tells Farmers He Is Willing to End Pork Agreement.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Herbert C. Hoover, the Food Administrator, made a statement today in reply to criticisms of him in the United States Senate during a recent debate.

"I apparently emerge in a new light as the friend of the Chicago packers," said Mr. Hoover. "At the same time the mail brings a report from Swift & Co. blaming the Food Administration for reducing their profits by $10,000,000 during the last year. I do not imagine that the packers would appreciate a wide circle of such friends.

"I notice also that I committed a crime by holding the October joint conference of farmers and representatives of forty small packers, as well as the big packers, together with representatives of allied Governments for the purpose of settling on a price for exports of pork that would give the American farmer a square deal and a distribution of orders that would protect the small packers.

"We have even tried to secure the continuance of these war arrangements through the armistice period and the opening of other markets, because the American farmer did his duty and produced goods.

"If the American farmer and the small packer now feel that these arrangements are wrong it would be the greatest burden off our shoulders if we could know it quickly. The British Government is particularly anxious to be relieved from these arrangements."

COLVER DEFENDS REPORT.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 23.—William B. Colver, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, discussing the commission's report on the packing industry before the convention of the American National Live Stock Association today, said that the packers devoted themselves to criticism of the commission itself but did not deny the facts contained in the report.

"They criticise the language in which the report was written," he said, "but I failed to see what difference that makes. They can't deny the facts, because they were obtained from their own files. They say we were not fair because we did not let their attorneys in to cross-examine witnesses and look into the papers we had. But those papers were taken from their own files and they had examined them long ago. What they wanted was to find out what papers we had got hold of."

Mr. Colver said that if the commission had treated the packers as defendants it would have been criticised then on the ground that the investigation was unfair because the packers were being prosecuted.

"We did not consider the packers, or any one else, as defendants," he said. "We had no prejudice against them or any one. We merely set out to discover the facts in the food situation, and no one has yet denied that our report does not contain those facts.

"When we began our investigation we submitted questionnaires to the packers and asked them for suggestions. They did not then suggest that they be treated as defendants or that their attorneys be permitted to be present to cross-examine witnesses. On the contrary they took the attitude that they were not concerned in the investigation, as all their business was open and above board."

FOOD RELIEF BILL AGAIN ATTACKED

cable dispatch from Europe, on the strength of which Senators in tumultuous haste fall over each other to announce support of it. There is no need for the President to be at home; he can vote us much better abroad, because it possesses novelty. I will no longer lend my voice or my vote here to being the Good Samaritan of the world.

"Don Quixote is abroad now, the knight errant of the world, largely fighting windmills. It is the toss-up of a coin which one is Sancho Panza, whether it is Colonel House or the other fellow. But it takes money. There's where a modern Don Quixote is a more expensive character than the one of the fifteenth century literature.

"France can take care of herself. A cable came across last week in which it was stated that work was offered Belgians. They have been living on Hoover's charity so long they did not care to work. They declined work because they knew they would be fed anyway."

Surplus Stocks of Foodstuffs.

Senator Calder of New York spoke of the surplus stocks of foodstuffs in the warehouses of America after the armistice was signed as being "far beyond the expectations of any one."

"If things were normal and the fixing of prices were not in the hands of the Government," he said, "the people could buy necessities today at about half the price they are paying. Europe has stopped buying from us because it can buy cheaper elsewhere. Europe can buy Argentina wheat at $1.20 a bushel and Australian wheat at $1.14 a bushel while American wheat is $2.26, the price fixed by the Food Administration. Corn in Chicago sells at $1.23 a bushel, while the price in Argentina is half that. In oats, rye, and other products, too, there is the same variance in price.

"The astonishing information came to me in New York a few days ago that 7,000,000 barrels of flour were in the storehouses and that the oversupply was so alarming that flour merchants were offering to sell at a price lower than that agreed upon with the Food Administration. Hogs are being offered to packers at less than the guaranteed price of $17.50 a hundred pounds, but the packers don't dare to buy at the lower prices because of the arrangement with the Food Administration.

"The Food Administration formed a corporation under the laws of Delaware called the Sugar Equalization Board, and bought up the entire crop of Cuban cane sugar. The board pays the sugar producers 5½ cents a pound in Cuba, making the cost 6.9 cents duty paid and delivered to refiners along the Atlantic coast. The board, instead of selling to the market at 6.9 cents a pound, charges 7.28 cents, making a clear profit of .38 of a cent a pound. If this is kept up the board will make a clear profit of $30,000,000 this year on sugar. This may be regarded as a consumption tax on the people."

Senator Cummins challenged the wisdom of the United States joining Great Britain and other European powers in establishing, as he said, "at least ten new sovereignties surrounding the old German Empire." He would vote against any appropriation, he said, embracing such a scheme.

Opposes "New Nationalism."

"The $100,000,000 appropriation is said to be essential to prevent the spread of Bolshevism and make effective the creation of new nations," said the Iowa Senator. "I do not agree with the President that this nation must do as much for other nations as it does for itself. This new nationalism does not appeal to me.

"There are many things to be done before we assume guardianship over the entire world. I insist that we do not ratify in advance the plan to guarantee the existence and maintenance of these new sovereignties of eastern Europe. There is no objection if Great Britain, France and Italy do that. It is no business of ours. We have one guarantee of that kind now relating to Cuba.

"It will be an evil day when the United States shall bind herself to send her army and navy to the remotest parts of the earth to reduce some nation that has broken her obligations. We must not leave the problem of our own country and take up the controversies of others. The German problem is not involved in this appropriation. If it were I would favor it."

Senator Penrose read into the record a telegram from C. H. Canby, a former President of the Chicago Board of Trade, saying he had it on reliable authority that $20,000,000 of the $100,000,-000 asked for in the Anti-Famine bill had already been spent by Mr. Hoover. He asked Senator Martin, in charge of the bill, to ascertain if this was true.

Senator Jones of Washington presented telegrams from Mayor Hanson and other officials of Seattle denying a statement made recently by Senator Johnson of California, Republican, in opposing the bill, that former soldiers had participated in unemployment riots at Seattle. The telegrams stated, however, that discharged soldiers and sailors were in Seattle without employment. In reply, Senator Johnson said his statement was based solely on newspaper dispatches.

Why First Mortgages Guaranteed by This Company Are the Best Investment for Prudent People.

15

Trustees have had many unpleasant experiences during the last few years, both with high class bonds and with unguaranteed mortgages. The better the quality of the bonds, often the greater the depreciation in price. With the falling off in real estate values the unguaranteed mortgages frequently have had to be foreclosed and the investor has become the owner of the real estate.

Not so the 36,000 trustees, individuals and corporate lenders who have held the guaranteed mortgages of this Company. Not one of them has had to mark down his principal or had to wait for his interest or has had to buy in the real estate at foreclosure sale.

We believe that for a long time to come, and until New York real estate in general takes on a very different aspect, prudent people will decline to take unguaranteed mortgages or to risk buying even high class bonds, but will make such a demand for guaranteed mortgages that we cannot supply their wants.

This means more money brought into the real estate market and better times, we believe, for the real estate owner.

No investor has ever lost a dollar.

FIX 44-HOUR WEEK FOR CLOTHING TRADE

Advisory Board Sends 55,000 Strikers Back to Work—Will Pass on Wages Later.

SUGGESTS FULL INQUIRY

Also Recommends That Machinery Be Provided for Settling Future Disputes.

Louis Marshall, a member of the Advisory Board in the strike of 55,000 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers against the American Men's and Boys' Clothing Manufacturers' Association, announced yesterday that the commission had decided in favor of the union's demands for a forty-four-hour working week, and had advised the workers to return to their places in the shops. About 75,000 men and women are affected by the decision in New York City and vicinity and probably 250,000 workers throughout the country. The strike had been on for three months.

At the request of the union and the manufacturers' association an advisory board, made up of Dr. William Z. Ripley, Administrator of Labor Standards on Army Clothing; Professor Felix Frankfurter, Chairman of the War Labor Policies Board, and Louis Marshall, entered the controversy in an effort to end the strike. The board met yesterday at the Bar Association, the union represented by Sidney Hillman and the manufacturers by Max H. Friedman.

The recommendations of the board follow:

First—The adoption of a forty-four hour week to begin from the date when work shall be resumed. In this connection the hope is earnestly entertained that this precedent be recognized throughout the industry, in view of the desirability of bringing about its proper standardization. It would be regarded as unfortunate if the hours of labor should vary in this industry in the several important centres where it is extensively conducted.

Second—In view of the absence of any reliable data indicating the existing basis of compensation to the employes and the cost of living to which they are now subjected, it is impossible to reach any satisfactory conclusion without first obtaining the result of an inquiry and collation of facts by a skilled investigator. It is therefore recommended that such an investigator be designated by this board, at the expense of both parties to this controversy, to proceed forthwith to make the necessary inquiry and to report the facts as ascertained to the board for further action.

Third. The board recognizes the importance, to employer and employed alike, of the formulation of principals and the establishment of machinery calculated to carry them into effect, which will result in improvement as far as efficiency, discipline and production are concerned. To deal adequately with these problems will likewise require careful study by this board, the assistance and opinions of those who have had experience in dealing with these phases of the problem, and an investigation of the bearings of the various propositions involved upon the industry in general.

Obviously a reasonable time will be required in which to take up this branch of the subject. In the meantime, the only conclusion that the board has reached is that it will be of essential importance for the parties to agree upon the selection of an impartial chairman or adviser to adjudicate upon the various questions that are certain to arise from time to time in the industry. Whatever plan may be ultimately determined upon will necessarily revolve around such a central figure.

With this preliminary report, the board is unanimously of the opinion that the employes should at once return to their posts, and that the employers shall proceed to open their shops for regular operation.

Jan. 22, 1919.

LOUIS MARSHALL,
FELIX FRANKFURTER.

Mr. Marshall said the action of the board was unanimous and that the promptitude with which it was enabled to act was in a large degree due to the reasonable attitude of Messrs. Hillman and Friedman, and the frankness, fairness, and moderation with which they presented their respective contentions.

GARMENT STRIKE GOES ON.

Both Sides Stand Firm on Question of Discharges.

The third day of the garment workers' strike saw little change in the attitude of either side toward the chief point of difference—the right of discharge.

Cheers greeted the announcement of the settlement of the men's and boys' clothing workers' strike in the twenty-two halls where the workers on women's garments were gathered.

"We shall enter into no discussion with the manufacturers' association until they recede from their position regarding the employers' unlimited right to discharge without a board to review cases of unjustifiable discharge," said Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union yesterday. "Nor is the demand by the union that complaints of unjustifiable discharge be reviewed within twenty-four hours arbitrable. There is no reason why complaints should be left to drag along for days and weeks and to become a source of irritation and stoppages."

Mr. Schlesinger added that he expected that more than 20,000 workers would have returned to work under settlements which would probably be made with independent manufacturers within three weeks.

In a statement issued by the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association yesterday afternoon, Morris Weiss, the President said:

"The manufacturers are asked to subscribe to a principle of 'life-tenure of employment' of their workers. At a glance it must be apparent in whose interest and for what purpose this ultimatum is made. A competent, thrifty and orderly worker requires no such form of compulsion to assure her employment. She can always earn her wage. Her services have always been in demand. The columns of the newspapers have been filled with advertisements for such workers.

"The thought that she holds her place only because her employer has no right to dispense with her services is an insult to her and would properly be resented by her. It must be apparent that this ultimatum is given only in the interest of the grossly incompetent worker who, on her merit, is unable to hold her place.

"The union has suggested arbitration. But what is there to arbitrate—the right of the employer to run his factory, to choose his workers, to dispense with the services of incompetent and disorderly employes? The manufacturers have been the victims of a system of arbitration for six years. This arbitration has driven a large number of manufacturers from business."

Y. M. C. A. TO WORK ABROAD.

William Sloane Says Overseas Service Is More Needed Than Ever.

In connection with a report that the Y. M. C. A. intended to discontinue its overseas war work and that this work would be taken over by the American Red Cross, William Sloane, Chairman of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., said last night:

"The rumor is without the slightest foundation. We have no intention of abandoning our work among the American troops and in the armies of our allies. At the time the armistice was siged, the vital necessity for service such as the Y. M. C. A. is giving abroad became more apparent than ever. The work was immediately revised to conform with the exigencies of the situation. At the present moment, the Y. M. C. A. is operating in almost innumerable ways in France, Italy, England, Russia, Mesopotamia, Egypt, and other places, giving such service to the armies and navies of the various countries as the authorities have asked. It has a great mission yet to perform. It certainly does not contemplate discontinuing its war service work and never has."

INFLUENZA DECREASES HERE

Copeland Offers Suggestions to Prevent Epidemic Spreading.

There was a decrease of 98 in the number of cases of influenza reported to the Department of Health in the last 24 hours. The total yesterday was 672. The deaths reported were 78, eight less than the day before.

Dr. R. S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, issued the following suggestions to the public yesterday:

"1.—The person who coughs or sneezes discharges a spray more deadly than bullets or poison gas, unless the mouth and nose are covered by a handkerchief. Spitting in public places and dry sweeping are dangerous and unlawful.

"2.—Glasses and eating utensils which have been used in restaurants and other public places, or even by members of your family, must be sterilized by washing in boiling water to destroy the germs sticking to them. To avoid infection your lips should not touch the mouthpiece of a public telephone.

"3.—The waiter whose fingers handle glasses or eating utensils soiled by use should not touch your bread, the edge of your glass, cup, plate or knife, or the bowl of your spoon.

"4.—The hands of a person who has a running nose, a cold in the head, or influenza are smeared with germs. Therefore if you must shake his hand or handle any article he has touched, avoid touching your lips, nose or eyes until you have carefully washed your hands. Never eat without first washing your hands.

"5.—Remember that the germs of influenza and pneumonia are discharged from the mouth and nose, not only of one whom you recognize as being sick, but often by a person who seems to be healthy.

"6.—To avoid infecting your child do not kiss it near its mouth. It is unsafe to kiss your child before washing your face.

"7.—Do not visit one who has influenza or pneumonia. The sick person should have a separate room and separate eating utensils.

"8.—Those who have colds or influenza risk their lives and the lives of others by going to work or to school.

"9.—Keep yourself fit by avoiding overwork and overeating, worry, fatigue, lack of sleep, and unventilated rooms in the home, shop, factory or place of amusement.

"10.—Make sure that all cases of influenza with which you come in contact are reported to the Department of Health. In this way we can better protect you by enforcing quarantine."

TO HELP SOLDIERS TO JOBS.

National Civic Federation Takes Up Question at Meeting.

Ralph M. Easley, Chairman of the Executive Council of the National Civic Federation, announced yesterday that a special meeting, called by William Jay Schieffelin, Chairman of the Committee on National Defense, was held yesterday afternoon at the Midday Club, at 25 Broad Street.

The purpose of the meeting was to consider the practicability and value of the American Soldiers and Sailors' Protective Association and to consider also the economic questions involved in the present system of demobilization, and the methods of enlisting the co-operation of the United States Employment Service, the War Camp Community Service, and the Red Cross to obtain employment and relief for the discharged soldiers.

A committee was appointed to investigate the administration of the Soldiers and Sailors' Protective Association and a sub-committee was chosen to visit the headquarters of the association and to confer with its heads on its organization and methods.

This sub-committee will report its work to the larger committee at a meeting today at the office of the Civic Federation, 1 Madison Avenue. On the committee are William Jay Schieffelin, Chairman; August Belmont, Otto H. Kahn, Emerson McMillin, Louis B. Schram, Maude Wetmore, John Golden, James Bertram, Percy Straus, Lawrence F. Abbott, and Gertrude Robinson Smith. The last four mentioned names are on the sub-committee. Others who were present were Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., James W. Sullivan, Haley Fiske, and Wheeler P. Bloodgood.

OBJECT TO COPELAND PLAN.

Council of Organizations Oppose Transfer of Dr. Harris's Division.

A resolution protesting against Health Commissioner R. S. Copeland's plan to remove the Division of Industrial Hygiene from the Bureau of Preventable Diseases was passed yesterday at a meeting of the Council of Organizations, comprising, it was said, 500 women's organizations. The meeting was held at the Cosmopolitan Club, 133 East Fortieth Street. The speakers who urged that it would be unjust and inefficient to withdraw the division from the bureau of which Dr. Louis I. Harris is director were William Jay Schieffelin, Pauline Goldmark, Dr. George M. Price and Sadie American. Congresswoman Jeannette Rankin, Lillian Wald, Frances Perkins and Florence Kelley spoke on the Rankin-Robinson bill pending in Washington, as well as on industrial readjustment and the nursing situation.

Miss Goldmark demanded that Commissioner Copeland refrain from in any way "crippling the work that Dr. Harris has done for three years." Mr. Schieffelin thought that if it were true, as Commissioner Copeland suggested, that Dr. Harris was overworked, he ought to have adequate assistance in the Division of Industrial Hygiene so that the work might remain under control of an expert in the field of industrial work.

CONGRESS CONTROL OF LABOR IS URGED

SEES AMERICA FAR BEHIND

Says We Are Only Now Considering Principles Long Conceded in Other Countries.

G. S. Beebe, Minister of Labor and Industry in the New South Wales Government and a labor leader in Australia, who has reached New York after several months in the United States studying the industrial situation and labor problems, yesterday gave his impressions of conditions here and outlined the object of his mission to America and to England, for which country he sails tomorrow. He will report the result of his investigations to the Government of Australia, and it is expected to lay the foundation for an amendment to the Commonwealth's Constitution for labor reforms of a sweeping character.

"I spent two months on the Pacific Coast," he said, "and then proceeded with my inquiry in the Central West, and then in the East. It is my firm belief that you won't get relief from industrial disputes until you take the power of settlement of labor disputes out of the hands of State tribunals and vest it in Congress.

"The first thing that impressed me was the incoherent condition existing in the United States in regard to industrial matters—I mean the lack of some definite policy in dealing with industrial unrest among the workers. Personally, I do not believe that the United States can obtain a proper degree of industrial regulation without recognition of the right of workers to organize. As I see it, America is now debating or discussing first principles of industrialism that other countries have long since conceded. These principles include the standard working day, the living wage, and some method of protection against unemployment, as well as proper protection of child labor. The latter is a weak spot in American industrialism, as I see it."

"It is proposed in Australia to centralize authority in dealing with disputes between employers and workers," said Mr. Beebe, "and to substitute a system of 'compulsory negotiation' for compulsory arbitration by boards and courts. The disputes at the present time are settled mainly by the courts and we want to eliminate the judicial atmosphere. My proposal will be to supplant the present boards of arbitration in Australia and put the settlement of disputes directly into the hands of laymen—employers and workers.

"The weakness in the existing Australian system has been that it discouraged negotiation, and had the effect of encouraging litigation. The tendency should be to make our tribunals more conciliatory. My proposal is to give the workers some say in the conditions governing their employment. I am convinced that a country can be saved from Bolshevism through co-operation of employers and workers."

Recognizes Trade Unionism.

Mr. Beebe's program favors full recognition of trade unionism. In this connection he said that Australian employers had become accustomed to dealing with organized labor, and in fact knew no other kind of workers. "The employers get on pretty well under these conditions," the Minister said, "and the county seems to also, as Australia's productive wealth increased from £175,000,000 in 1910 to £250,000,000 in 1915."

He also favors the vesting of the whole industrial power in the Federal Parliament of Australia on the understanding that existing State agencies are taken over and used in the establishment of a uniform system. Under this plan the Federal Parliament would be called upon to enact unified laws dealing with regulation of factory and shop, industrial safety, a method fixing the basic living wage, workmen's compensation, prescribing the standard day, control of child labor, and kindred subjects.

In order to encourage the settlement of industrial disputes by conference and negotiation instead of litigation, the present arbitration courts and wages boards are to be superseded by a national council of industry, radiating out into State or county councils and operating under the direction of the national body, industrial councils for separate industries or establishments, and shop and mine committees to deal with technical matters peculiar to different establishments.

The administration of the whole system to be vested in the national council, which is given, among others, the following powers: to compel parties to industrial disputes either before or after a strike or a lockout to meet in conference and state the matter in dispute, to make an award binding on the parties whenever any industrial council fails to arrive at an agreement as to the minimum wages and conditions of employment applicable to its industry, and to establish a trade union registry. The national council would also be empowered to create and appoint independent chairmen to industrial councils and shop committees, and establish and maintain labor bureaus and exchanges and generally deal with problems of intermittent employment.

Little Servants of the Home

These little electric servants work better if properly understood. To understand them is not difficult

The electric coffee pot, toaster, grill, chafing dish and iron are so simple that the most efficient method of operation is self evident

The vacuum cleaner and the washing machine—perhaps the two most important of the household group—require slightly more attention, but only that which one of intelligence can readily give

Our Bureau of Home Economics is equipped to show how to best operate all of these appliances. Without obligation to purchase or use, we are glad to explain how they are made and how much time and effort they save—how they add to home efficiency, comfort and convenience

27TH DIVISION TO RETURN AS UNIT

Is Under Orders for Home, but May Not Leave France for Six Weeks.

WILL PARADE IN NEW YORK

Discharged and Sick and Wounded Members to be In Line, in Ambulances Where Necessary.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—With the announcement today that virtually the complete strength of the 27th, (New York National Guard,) Division, had been assigned for early convoy by General Pershing, plans began to take shape here for an adequate reception to this first combat division to return. If it is found practicable to do so, an opportunity will be given to New York City to see the organization on parade at full war strength, with its fighting equipment, its recovered wounded, and its battle trophies before it is demobilized.

Secretary Baker reiterated today his desire that wherever possible either the full strength or substantial portions of the returning combat divisions parade in large cities in the section from which they came.

"For instance," said the Secretary, "the Black Hawk, (86th.) Division, comes largely from Chicago. I am hoping to be able to work out a plan by which a substantial part of that division can parade in Chicago. This division will go to Camp Grant, which is a considerable distance from Chicago, and the train arrangements for getting the whole division to Chicago will be very complicated, and perhaps impossible. One plan may be to have the troops sent through the city first, allowed to detrain, parade, and then entrain again for the camp, thus breaking the railroad journey."

Mr. Baker again expressed a strong wish that the 42d, (Rainbow,) Division, now with the American Army on the Rhine, parade in Washington as representative of the entire country and the whole fighting army.

Whether it will be possible to arrange for a complete divisional parade of the 27th depends on many factors, it was said at the War Department. In any case, however, a substantial portion of the division will be paraded before it disbands. Camp Upton having been selected as the demobilization point for the division with that end in view.

Mr. Baker announced that men of the 27th who had already returned, even those who had been mustered out, would have an opportunity to march with their comrades, the sick and wounded being carried in ambulances or other motor transport.

The units of the 27th assigned for return include both infantry and the artillery brigades, as well as the divisional trains, machine gun battalions, and other organizations. They have an aggregate strength of more than 900 officers and 25,000 men out of a full divisional strength of about 37,500. The men will return with their sidearms, but as yet no artillery has been shipped home from France, and, presumably, none of the motor transport equipment of the trains will accompany the troops. It is possible, however, that horses, guns, and other equipment to give the command a full parade complement will be assembled at Camp Upton for its use.

If the return of the various units of the 27th is spread over a considerable period of time it may be found impossible to hold the first arrivals at Camp Upton until the full strength is assembled. In that event, however, the large units, such as the infantry brigades, would be paraded.

Another suggestion that Secretary Baker is considering has to do with the German guns and other fighting gear captured in battle by the 27th. He may ask General Pershing to arrange for the shipment of these trophies with the division, so that they may be displayed by the troops when the march of triumph through the streets of New York takes place.

There was no official estimate as to when the New York division would actually start, but unofficially it was said that probably five or six weeks would elapse before embarkation began. The records show that at least 200,000 other troops are on General Pershing's priority list ahead of the 27th.

26TH HAD 11,995 CASUALTIES.

1,730 Officers and Men of New England Division Killed.

BOSTON, Jan. 23.—The casualties of the Twenty-sixth Division, New England's National Guard contribution to the overseas forces, were 11,935 men, according to compilations from the War Department reports announced by Governor Coolidge today. The list included 1,730 officers and men killed; 3,624 wounded severely, 2,819 wounded slightly, 3,863 gassed, 283 missing and 136 taken prisoner.

The Yankee division captured 3,148 Germans, including sixty-one officers. Its principal battles, among which were Apremont, Selcheprey, Flirey, Xivray-Harvoisin, Château-Thierry, (second battle of the Marne); St. Mihiel and north of Verdun, extended over a period of nine months from Feb. 5, 1918.

In the drive of the 26th north of Verdun, begun Oct. 18 and ended by the armistice, the figures show that the Yankees pushed the Germans back 5.5 kilometers. The advance at Château-Thierry in seven days was 17.5 kilometers and in its action at St. Mihiel the division drove forward fourteen kilometers in two days.

The statistics show that the division was in service in the front lines about seven months.

Representative William H. Carter, of Needham who returned today from a visit to France, said that "all Europe is wild over the exploits of the men of the Yankee division." He added that the men of the Twenty-sixth were anxious to get home and particularly wanted to parade in Boston under the lead of Major Gen. Edwards, and Colonel Edward Logan, who were transferred from their commands after long service with the division.

PLANS BIG GREETING TO 27TH.

Citizens' Committee Gains Support —Negro Regiment Welcome.

The Citizens' Committee of Welcome, which was organized as a protest against the inclusion of W. R. Hearst as a member of the Mayor's Committee to Welcome Homecoming Troops, announced yesterday that a big welcome would be extended to the veterans of Major Gen. O'Ryan's 27th Division. While the committee was not ready to announce its plans in full, it was said that every agency would be enlisted in an effort to demonstrate to the heroes the city's appreciation of what they had done.

In expectation that the former 15th Infantry, a regiment of colored troops, commanded by Colonel William B. Hayward, would arrive about the same time as the 27th Division, a delegation, composed of negro clergymen, laymen, and members of the Hayward Unit No. 14, Motor Corps Division, National League for Women's Service, yesterday called at the City Hall for permission to organize a separate welcome for the negro infantrymen. Grover A. Whalen, Secretary to the Mayor, informed the visitors that all permits necessary to their welcome would be granted. Part of the plans of the delegation consist of a victory arch at Seventh Avenue and 135th Street, with a parade and a big ball afterward.

Many letters offering to help in the independent welcome of the Citizens' Committee were received yesterday, and among them from the following organizations: General Society Daughters of the Revolution, Daughters of the American Revolution, College Women's Club, York Club, The Readers, Long Island Society, Daughters of the Revolutions; Vivisection Investigation League, and Athenaeum Club.

HONORS 208 AMERICANS.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—Citations for 208 Americans are contained in French Army orders, according to the latest Official Journal. The list includes Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, Major Gen. John A. Lejeune, Brig. Gens. A. J. Bowley and W. C. Nevill, Colonels William S. Mitchell, Hugh G. Myers, Jr., Edward Davis, Hiram I. Bearss, Edward Stone, James Rhea, and Frederick L. Wyatt; Aviators Edward V. Rickenbacher and Douglas Campbell, and Chaplain Thomas G. Speers.

The citation of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt reads:

"An excellent pilot and scout, possessing the highest qualities of courage and devotion to duty. On July 10, 1918, in a combat with five enemy machines he brought down one of his adversaries. He gloriously fell in the course of an aerial combat on July 14, 1918."

TROOPSHIPS HELD NEAR PORT BY FOG

HARBOR SHIPPING TIED UP

Arrangements Made to Dock Transports This Morning and to Welcome Men Back.

Fog tied up shipping in this port yesterday, bringing a fleet of steamships to anchor in the vicinity of Sandy Hook. The Leviathan, with a distinguished passenger list, was unable to get away from her Hoboken pier, and will sail at 11 o'clock today. The steamship Pensacola, laden with relief supplies for the Near East, did not sail and only one transport pushed her nose through the curtain of mist yesterday. She was the Orizaba, from Brest, with troops on board.

The United States hospital ship Mercy, which left St. Nazaire on the 7th with 590 sick and wounded on board, is believed to be out in the fog, and arrangements have been made for her to dock at Pier 45, North River, sometime this morning. The steamship Surinam with 36 officers and 8 men on board was also reported anchored off the port. It is probable that the French liners Chicago and Rochambeau, both due, will be near Sandy Hook this morning.

The steamship Calamares, from Pauillac, Jan. 12, with 38 casual officers, was another of the transport ships reported to be held up by weather conditions. She is to dock at about 8:30 this morning. With her is probably the steamship Gen. Goethals, which sailed from Bordeaux on Jan. 7. She has 245 men of various commands and 36 casual officers on board. The United States cruiser Rochester, with Naval personnel on board and from Brest, was reported last night. She may anchor in the river.

Fog delayed the arrival yesterday of the battleships Louisiana and New Hampshire, which are bringing the 59th Coast Artillery, the old 58th Coast Defense Corps of Brooklyn. Wireless messages received indicated that both warships anchored off the Hook last night.

The transport Orizaba came to anchor off Weehawken early yesterday morning, and it was not until hours later that she was able to lift her anchor and move slowly into the debarkation piers at Hoboken. On board were 2,526 officers and men, of whom 290 were sick or wounded. On board were twelve officers and 549 men of the 52d Ammunition Train, in command of Major C. H. Wallace, whose home is at 7 West Ninety-second Street, and who before the war was an instructor in mechanical engineering at New York University. There were also twelve casual companies on the Orizaba, one made up of seventy New York men and another of New Jersey men. There was also on board a casualty company of marines of the 5th and 6th Regiments of the 2d Division.

The Mayor's Welcoming Committee on the police boat Patrol reached the Orizaba just as the anchor was being weighed and she was beginning to move toward her pier. Mayor Hylan's greetings were "wigwagged" and the men on deck "wigwagged" back some messages in reply. The Street Cleaning Band played "Home, Sweet Home" and other appropriate airs, but this did not satisfy the men. "Give us a fox trot!" they shouted, and the band responded. Then those on the police boat had a glimpse of the men dancing, some together, and some with the nurses. When the vessel got alongside her pier no time was lost in getting the men ashore. The bed cases among the sick had been taken off while the vessel was at anchor.

Glad to Reach "God's Country."

The men had stories of adventure in plenty to tell, but before they told them they usually began by saying how glad they were to get back again to "God's country." One who has had an adventurous career was Private C. W. Merrow of Indianapolis, who has been in the service since 1896. He went to France with the 304th Signal Corps, and saw service on the Verdun and Argonne fronts. Just before he was wounded by a shell at Mount Faucon and put out of the fight, he had a hand-to-hand encounter with a German and he killed him with a knife. Another returned marine was "Happy" Jack Gallagher, who has seen service in the Spanish-American war and the Philippines. He lives at 315 West Sixteenth Sree. He said that he had been "everywhere the marines have been," and a comrade remarked that that was going some. He was gassed twice and was wounded by shrapnel in the leg.

Lieutenant James B. Randall of 258 East Seventy-eighth Street, of the 102d Signal Corps, was gassed while in action at Mount Kemmel. He was in the thick of things at St. Quentin and said that at the latter place the German retreat hit such a pace that they nearly outran the Americans. After several times going over the top Thomas Leddy of the 165th Infantry was wounded at Château-Thierry by shrapnel on Aug. 1. He said that of a company of 250 only 55 came out of the fighting.

A veteran of three wars is Sergt. George Luden of Vancouver, who joined the army when his eight sons went to war. He is 54 years old, and said he just could not stand to stay out when his sons joined the colors. He was offered a commission in the Quartermaster's Department, but the life was not active enough for him, so he offered himself as a private. Being physically fit and young looking they took him and so he went to France with his sons.

"They are still over there," he said. "Believe me, there is going to be some family reunion when we all get home and get together."

Find Stowaway Aboard.

When the Orizaba was one day out from Brest a stowaway came on deck and declared himself. The Captain put him to work and when the vessel arrived he was turned over to the immigration officials to pass upon his right to land. This unlisted passenger gave his name as W. C. Wakleason, and said he had lived at 4 West 104th Street. He said that though born in Austria he was an American citizen. He is 18 years old. Wakleason said that he was in Austria when America entered the war and the military officials scouted around for more men for the army. They came to him, and asked him to enlist, he said, but he refused and as a result he was interned. He was detained for eighteen months and when the armistice was signed he made his way to Rotterdam and from there traveled to Brest.

Some of the New Yorkers aboard, who were all members of the casual company, were: Captain John Muller of 79 West Washington Place, Manhattan; Lieutenant Warren H. Gilman of 126 Colonial Avenue, Forest Hills, L. I.; Lieutenant Henry Godfrey of 103 East Seventy-sixth Street, Manhattan; Lieutenant Julius Noyes of 7 Park Avenue, Manhattan, and Corporal H. J. Colwell of 2,208 Sixty-third Street, Brooklyn; Private John Wallein of 2,515 Woodbine Street, Brooklyn; Don Luddy of 250 East Seventy-eighth Street, Manhattan; Corporal O. St. Clair of 461 Fort Washington Avenue, Manhattan.

Brooklyn will welcome the returning 50th Artillery and the 13th Coast Defense when the battleships Louisiana and New Hampshire come through the fog today. Colonel Clarence W. Smith of the 13th Coast Defense command announced the plans for carrying Brooklynites who desire to welcome the men down the bay. The steamship Highlander will leave the Battery at 8 o'clock and will follow the Patrol with the Mayor's Welcoming Committee down the bay. They will exchange greetings with those on the battleships and will convoy the latter to the Hoboken piers, where the troops will be landed. Relatives will not be allowed on the piers, but they may watch the men come ashore from the deck of the Highlander.

On board the Leviathan, which is held up by the fog, is a notable list of passengers, including William G. Sharp, American Ambassador to France; Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Chief of Embarkation at Washington, and Newcomb Carlton, head of the Western Union Telegraph Company. There are also ten French officers, who have been in the country as instructors at army camps, and eight Polish officers and 600 Poles recruited in this country for service in Poland.

The Leviathan was to have sailed on Jan. 1, but engine trouble prevented the big ship from getting away.

TO WELCOME RICKENBACKER.

Automobile Industry to Honor American Ace.

Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, American Ace of Aces, will be warmly welcomed, when he arrives home on the steamship Adriatic on Saturday or Sunday. The Contest Board of the American Automobile Association announced yesterday that while the Adriatic is docking the whistles of some 2,000 automobile, tire, and accessory manufacturing plants throughout the country will blow their whistles for fifteen minutes in his honor. This is the initial recognition by the automobile soprt and industry to its most successful representative in the war.

The Contest Board, in co-operation with half a score of other automobile bodies, will give a dinner to Captain Rickenbacker at the Waldorf Astoria on Feb. 5. Congressman Ireland, a friend of the Captain, will be the toastmaster and the principal speaker will be Secretary of War Baker. One thousand covers will be laid and more than half of these have already been taken. The arrangements are in charge of Ralph De Palma, the veteran starter of automobile races. He has offices with the Contest Board at 501 Fifth Avenue.

Ohio Opposes Hearst as Welcomer.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 23.—The Ohio Senate today adopted a joint resolution petitioning Federal authorities to have returning American troops landed at some other point than New York, because of the fact that William Randolph Hearst is a member of New York's Reception Committee. The resolution was offered by Senator White of Columbiana County.

Glass to Quit Democratic Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Secretary Glass said today he would resign as Secretary of the Democratic National Committee and probably would be succeeded by W. R. Hollister of Missouri, now Assistant Secretary. Homer S. Cummings, Vice Chairman of the committee, who is expected to become Chairman, conferred today with Mr. Glass.

PLANS BURIAL GROUND FOR OUR MEN IN FRANCE

Bill Introduced in House to Incorporate American Field of Honor Association.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Representative S. D. Fess of Ohio introduced a bill in the House today to incorporate the American Field of Honor Association, consisting of prominent and patriotic people throughout the country, to co-operate in selecting and beautifying an estate in France as a final resting place of all Americans who died in battle abroad. The plan is to have a sort of Arlington Cemetery somewhere in France for the burial of the American heroes.

The incorporators proposed by the bill are:

"There were approximately 30,000 Americans killed in action and about 33,000 died from other causes, according to Representative Fess, who pointed out that men were buried in many cases where they fell. Their burial places are marked with wooden crosses, he said, and the only identification in many cases are the identification tags on their bodies.

"The American Field of Honor Association purposes to secure an estate of about 500 acres and prepare it in place by proper improvement for a burial ground and appropriate memorials," said Representative Fess.

"A suitable building of monumental style of architecture is to be erected at the head of the field to serve as a hall of records and as a chapel. Here will be entered the chart of the field so as to easily locate the grave of any fallen hero. The record of each boy will be entered in the book of records.

"The Government would, of course, secure the ground by the consent of the French Government. It will remove and place the bodies in the Field of Honor. It will also provide for its maintenance and keep a garrison of one or two companies of soldiers to protect this bit of American land in France. If permitted, this proposed Association of the American Field of Honor will provide by popular subscription a fund of $15,000,000 to permanently endow the field, to insure it as a perpetual thing of beauty, to which every American traveling in Europe will wish to go."

Sergt. Harry E. Lynk, Co. G, 106th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Ronssoy on Sept. 29. Capt. Rutherford Ireland, 106th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near St. Souplet. He continued to lead his battalion in attack, although suffering great pain from a wound caused by shell fire. De F. Ireland, brother, 556 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

First Lieut. Walter G. Kleball, 9th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near St. Mihiel, on Sept. 12. The crews of several machine-gun nests were routed, and in one instance he captured a machine-gun crew assisted by only two of his men. Home address, Mrs. James H. Gannon, sister, 680 West End Avenue, New York City.

COMMUNITY COUNCIL IN AFTER-WAR WORK

INCLUDES MANY ACTIVITIES

Returning Soldiers and Sailors and Their Interests to Receive First Consideration.

A comprehensive program of Community Council work during the period of demobilization and readjustment and plans for the organization of permanent Community Councils are contained in a message which is being sent by Grosvenor B. Clarkson, Director of the United States Council of National Defense, to the County and Community Councils of Defense and the units of the Woman's Committee.

The program is suggestive in character only, and Mr. Clarkson says that it should be modified in each county and community as experience indicates to be most desirable. The program includes suggestions on the problem having to do with returned soldiers and sailors, aid in demobilization, children's year, relief, and health.

Regarding the returning soldier and sailor, the following problems are treated: Employment, legal assistance, moral welfare, disabled soldiers, receptions. It is suggested that a "Bureau of Returning Soldiers, Sailors and War Workers," to provide employment, information, and other assistance to these men on their return, be created wherever conditions warrant it. Such a bureau would see that every soldier coming into the community, who has any litigation pending against him under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Rights act, is warned of the importance of immediate action to safeguard his rights. The bureau would also give him free legal advice for the conduct of his litigation. The suggestion is made that the need be placed before the lawyers of the community and then notices posted to notify the soldiers where the lawyers may be found.

The moral welfare of the soldiers, it is suggested, should be guarded by seeing that all regulations are enforced. The Community Council should see to it that no disabled man returning to the community fails to take the special vocational training given by the Federal Board for Vocational Training, it is urged. Some group in the community, the program says, should give an appropriate reception to each soldier or sailor immediately upon his return.

In Americanization work, after pointing out the need for assimilating all foreign-born citizens into true American citizenship, it is suggested that these methods may be used: (1) by providing education in English and in American institutions and ideals; (2) by seeing that all foreign-born citizens are taken into the community activity and life in such a way as not to violate customs and ideals. "See that the Children's Year Program is carried through to completion," the program continues. "Every child up to 6 years of age should have been weighed and measured. Secure the treatment of every defect discovered by providing public health nurses, county child health centres, clinics, &c."

Co-operation with the local health authorities and the conducting of community meetings and community singing are also suggested. A detailed program for an organized community showing how these endeavors may be carried forward is also indicated.

Mr. Clarkson, who was in New York yesterday, said that the forty-eight State Councils of Defense and that of Alaska, and the State divisions of the Woman's Committee of the council, were being asked to take immediate steps to secure legislation to provide for the development of community organization and for permanent State leadership in all organized communities on a wholly nonpartisan and nonsectarian basis.

"The State of New York," said Mr. Clarkson, "has already taken the lead in this matter through Governor Smith's appointment of a Reconstruction Commission, which may very well act as a head-centre for community council activities in the State."

SIGNIFICANT

It is significant that this company has been selected during the past few years to erect some of the greatest buildings of modern times.

The conclusion would seem to be that the bigger the buildings the less disposed are the Owners to take any chances.

Smith, Director, organized last September for the purpose of making a thorough investigation of war charities and similar activities, that W. Frank Persons had been engaged to make a study of the relief situation abroad, Mr. Persons will leave tomorrow for France, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland, and other European countries to carry on his investigations.

The announcement said that Mr. Persons was until recently Director General of Civilian Relief of the American Red Cross and that he is considered peculiarly qualified by training, experience, and ability to make an impartial investigation and estimate of the various American activities in European countries which are soliciting support from the American people.

It is announced that Mr. Persons's inquiry will not include the Red Cross and the seven organizations which participated in the United War Work Campaign, which were the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the National Catholic War Council, (Knights of Columbus,) the Jewish Welfare Board, the Salvation Army, the War Camp Community Service, and the American Library Association.

Mr. Persons, it was explained, goes abroad with the full approval of the War Department, which has co-operated unofficially with the National Investigation Bureau in planning the survey. He will be in close touch with the Hoover Commission, with the American diplomatic officers, and with the relief officials of the respective foreign Governments, it is announced.

Mr. Persons, it was said at the office of the National Investigation Bureau, will endeavor to obtain reliable information as to the need, value, and efficiency of those organizations concerned in his inquiry, and also to make a general survey of the European relief situation with a view to securing, as accurately as possible, information concerning the demands which may reasonably be expected to be made upon the American people for foreign suffering during the next six or eight months."

Each organization will be rated according to the findings of Mr. Persons, and while it is understood that his investigation is to be from the viewpoint of efficiency, and is not to deal with the question of whether or not the money has been honestly expended, yet if in course of the survey any irregularities are discovered the information will be made available to the District Attorney's office in this city, which will also the rating of the individual organizations.

Assistant District Attorney Kilroe, who has charge of the war charity investigation, when recently asked for the result of an investigation of these war charity activities abroad, said that the information obtained from such an investigation, made in the proper manner and with the sanction of the War Department, would be of much value in his work in this country.

Mr. Kilroe knew of the intended investigation by the National Investigation Bureau and said the matter had been discussed with him several times, but that his office was in no way connected with the proposed survey.

District Attorney Swann said:

"I have expressed no opinion on that matter and it is not proper for me to do so, but so far as an investigation by the District Attorney of money that is spent in France, that is out of the question. It is impossible for me to do so. It is out of my jurisdiction. Such matters are regulated by the laws of the country where the money is spent."

Two Benefit Recitals.

Various critical commuters of the daily press had a pesky time yesterday afternoon trying to catch the "Toonerville Trolley"—which meets all the trains—as two celebrated pianists played; Rudolph Gan, the Swiss, at Aeolian Hall, and the Russian Serge Rachmaninoff at Carnegie Hall, and both for worthy benefits; Mr. Gans for the Société Mutuelle des Professeurs du Conservatoire de Paris, Mr. Rachmaninoff for the Society for Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis. Obviously criticism must sit up and behave itself as these fine artists of the keyboard are, because of sweet charity's sake, hors concours. But the Toonerville Trolley? Only this: Rachmaninoff and Ganz had on their programs those magnificent but deadly 32 Variations by Beethoven; magnificent because of Beethoven, deadly because they rightly belong on an educational recital before a pure-throated audience in the outlying districts where they spell rum with a capital R, but are not welcome in this busy cosmopolis of ours. Hence the problem was to avoid the aforesaid variations. How?

Rachmaninoff began his scheme with them, and we gambled on the chance of his sticking to the repetition double-bar—if there be one—as he did at his first recital with the Mozart Variations. Mr. Ganz put them as his fourth number. No escape. And then the Rachmaninoff C sharp minor prelude, commonly referred to in Pittsburh as it, (capitalized.) That figured in Part III., and the Eternal Flapper, who plays at it, as she plays at Sinding and Moszkowski, and the sugary Liszt Chant d'Amour, was happy. But we had to swallow the Variations—and mighty well played they were by Ganz—and just reached Carnegie Hall as Rachmaninoff sounded the sombre opening of the much-abused Prelude. Curiously enough he did not play it in the Pieper style. Very impressive it proved, and the various little accents and changes in rhythm and the personal rubato—why, Apollo be praised; we hardly recognized the piece; itself a clever variation on Hensel. It was Stasoff, said to have died a few weeks ago, who introduced this Prelude here in Mendelssohn Hall, in West Fortieth Street; now no more.

Both Aeolian and Carnegie Halls were fairly filled. The weather was hardly propitious, and the critical commuters sapped sorrow long without their umbrellas.

HEIFETZ SCALES HEIGHTS.

When Mark Twain once thought to climb the Matterhorn, he decided he could get a better idea of the mountain by watching some real climbers through an opera glass. Jascha Heifetz last night scaled the Matterhorn of violinists—scaled and trilled and cadenza'd the Beethoven concerto—and brought back a photograph lacking color of life. Acclaimed "fiddler to the angels," Heifetz may or may not have played Beethoven's work in public before. His own manager thought not. Last year he did it a month earlier, the Brahms.

Last night, in a deluge of rain that warped strings, but left no empty chair in Carnegie Hall's sold-out house in the Philharmonic subscription, Heifetz organ-ized the big Tschaikowsky "Fantastic" Symphony was over, about the time commuters and critics were going home. The young wizard was nervous, which was a human and therefore hopeful sign. There was much tuning and trying of strings as he awaited the violin's entrance, and the first part was cold save for those passages where Beethoven seems to pause to contemplate the work and its maker, and to sing—and sigh—a little over it. There Heifetz also sang, as he did in the lovely Larghetto, while the Rondo was of course a field day for his skill.

In the cadenzas, whether his own or his master, Auer's, was not told, he tossed the whole bag of tricks into the air and watched the dazzling flights come down again like fireworks. It was pretty but it wasn't Beethoven. Heifetz may climb his Matterhorn some day. He has made the start in a spirit of good sportsmanship, and he has nurtured in the fear since he came here. His performance was much applauded. The whole orchestra had had a rising recall after Berlioz's symphony, and the season's longest concert ended near 11 o'clock with more Beethoven, the third "Leonore."

HAVE THE BOLSHEVIKI SURRENDERED?

If there be a special reason, not yet disclosed, for the unexpected agreement by the Allied envoys at Paris to receive representatives of all the Russian factions in conference near Constantinople, it may be surmised that recent disasters and possibly the impending collapse of the Bolsheviki in Russia have put them in a temper to make overtures to the Peace Conference of which the invitations to the Russian groups to send representatives to the conference on Feb. 15 are the result.

A possible consideration in support of this conjecture is to be found in the news of the defeat of the Bolshevist forces in the north, of the revolt of some of their troops, and the intimation that they might even surrender Petrograd. The recent gradual rise in the market quotations of Russian securities lends some slight confirmation to the theory, which is further supported by the statement in Paris dispatches that one of the definite proposals to be made to the Russian representatives will be that an adequate arrangement be made for the payment of Russia's debts. Inasmuch as the repudiation of the foreign debt was one of the chief joys of the Bolsheviki, it cannot be imagined that a reassumption of liability would be asked of them, or assented to if asked. Russia owes hundreds of millions to France; the French Government would scarcely agree to the plan of a conference which might lead to the setting up of a recognized Bolshevist Government, from which she would never recover a kopeck of the vast sums due. Manifestly, there has been some change in the situation in Russia, known to the envoys at Paris, which has made this agreement possible; and it would seem to follow of necessity that the Bolsheviki can have no part in the plans the Allies have in mind for the future of Russia. Otherwise, they could have reached no agreement.

STEPHEN PICHON, the French Foreign Minister, in rejecting LLOYD GEORGE's proposal to receive in conference the representatives of the Russian groups, including the Bolsheviki, said that "the French Government will make no contract with crime." The Bolsheviki, he said, did not represent a democratic government, they could not possibly develop a government, since they were supported "solely by the lowest passions of anarchical expression," and could not claim to be recognized. It must be that there has been some marked change in the prospects and position of the Bolsheviki, for their nature cannot change, they are still criminals, still enemies of society, and the French Government would not assent to any treatment of them which might lead to their possible recognition.

Moreover, the statement, prepared by Mr. WILSON, which sets forth the plan of the conference at Princes' Islands, in its own language supports the conclusion that the Allies are confident that the Bolsheviki will be eliminated, that the Omsk Government, the Archangel group, and the organizations in Southern Russia; as the true representatives of the Russian people, will be able to form a recognizable government. On any other theory the official statement of the Supreme Council at Paris would read like a bitter travesty of Allied intentions. To say that the Allies "recognize the absolute right of the "Russian people to direct their own "affairs without dictation or direction "of any kind from outside"; to say that it is their sole and sincere purpose "to do what they can to bring "Russia peace and an opportunity to "find her way out of her present "troubles," unless it is evident and known that the Bolsheviki are near the end of their rope, would be a proclamation of purpose to abandon the Russian people to destruction. So long as the Bolsheviki were in possession of most of the arms in Russia; so long as by the looting of banks and by the robbing of private individuals and the issuing of floods of "government" money and by the control of foodstuffs, they were able to maintain a Red army made up of peasants and workingmen for whom service in that army was the only alternative to starvation, it would have been impossible for the Russian people to find their way out of their "present troubles," save by death at the hands of the armies controlled by LENINE and TROTZKY. They are a helpless, leaderless mass, sheep at the mercy of the butcher. If the butcher were in a way to continue his trade, the Allies could not leave them to their fate without assuming the guilt of a cruel betrayal, without violating their many and generous pledges of succor.

If it be true that the Bolsheviki have nearly run their race, then the plan adopted by the Allies becomes intelligible, it is promising. Certainly it would have been unnecessary for the Supreme Council to disclaim the intention to "give coun"tenance to any attempt at a coun"ter-revolution." Nobody but the Bolsheviki would have made that charge. But the Bolsheviki themselves are the counter-revolution in Russia, they have robbed the Russians of the fruits of the revolution of March, 1917, for in place of the oppressive rule of the autocrat they have set up the lawless and bloody dominion of a small but prevailing criminal group, prevailing because in the disorganized condition of Russia it controlled men enough and arms enough and money enough to overawe the helpless majority.

The obscurity which now veils the origin and motives of the sudden agreement of the Allied envoys will be cleared up by the treatment their invitation receives in Russia, and ultimately by the character of the Russian representation and of the proceedings at the conference on the island in the Sea of Marmora. The present outlook, however, is hopeful for Russia and for the Allied relations with Russia, because of the very great probability that the overthrow of the Bolshevist power is a foreordained result of the conference.

A COALITION COMMITTEE.

Is the boundless chasm between the Old Guard and the Progressive Republicans of the Senate to be bridged? Seven pontifices have been appointed by Senator LODGE. Three, Mr. CUMMINS, Mr. NORRIS, Mr. LENROOT, are Progressives. Four are "regular, or reactionary, Mr. HALE, Mr. HARDING, Mr. KNOX, Mr. SMOOT. The last, a highly competent Senator, had been regarded as utterly reprobate, if any regular be indeed reprobate utterly, if even for Mr. PENROSE the light does not hold out to burn.

This coalition of regulars and irregulars is to make rules for the reorganization of the committees when the Republicans control the Senate. Is Republican Harmony, with corpulent Chairmanships in her train, about to bless us? Neither Mr. LA FOLLETTE nor Mr. BORAH was at the caucus. Yet the Republicans must have the votes of these absentees and dissenters.

May there be Chairmanships enough to go around, committee assignments comforting to Regular and Irregular alike, and forgiveness even for BOIES PENROSE, for all his Pennsylvanian inheritance of unregenerate politics, an able and a useful Senator when he chooses to be.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

The Victory Loan is the key which is needed to unlock the economic and financial future. The money has been spent and the bills must be paid before the resources can be put at other work. So, too, the Victory bonds must in turn be paid, but Congress cannot lay its taxes until it knows when the bonds will fall due and what interest must be paid meanwhile. Moreover, it is not possible to compartment the Victory Loan and regard it as an independent issue. The market will promptly relate its terms regarding interest and maturity to all outstanding issues. They must be protected in the interest of all concerned, so much does their total exceed the total of the last loan to be issued.

If it were only a question of raising six billions, the rate of interest to be paid might readily be made whatever is necessary to get the funds. But if the rate were made high enough easily to accomplish that purpose, all issues of all securities would be adjusted to make a yield which the market considered a fair equivalent for the increased yield on the new national bonds. As even the Liberty bonds are selling to yield below the rate which any one thinks would attract six billions of new funds at this time, it is clear that their present discount would be increased proportionately to the increased rate on the next and last issue. Four times takers of Liberty bonds have been taught that their subscriptions at par yield to them a loss on principal of about a year's interest within a short time after the lists were closed. That is not the sort of education best fitted to enlarge the list of Victory Loan takers, and it is highly desirable that the terms of issue should be such as to maintain the issue near the original price. That must be par under the present policy of Congress.

The rate to be fixed depends upon the term and the combination of the term with privilege of exemption from taxation. A national obligation to pay interest and not to collect taxes is more valuable in proportion that its term is longer. In fact, the exemption and obligation are so valuable that the Treasury inclines to shorten the term. The combination which is spoken of just now is a term of two to ten years at the Treasury's option and a rate of 4 per cent., with tax exemption. Those are excellent terms considered in connection with previous issues and present market conditions. The price of the present fully exempt issue shows that a higher rate than 3½ is necessary. The discount on the other issues with qualified exemption shows that the higher rate alone is not sufficient, unless made so high as to be depressing to outstanding issues. It also would be costly in tax-exemption cost. On a six-billion-dollar loan the difference between 4 and 5 per cent. is $60,000,000 yearly for the term. The increase of interest might be a little more than balanced by the taxes collected, but it is useless and costly to collect taxes for the sake of disbursing interest. The lower rate with exemption privilege would within a narrow margin of difference compensate the Treasury for the loss of taxes.

The balancing of these considerations is matter of judgment. The future must be considered as well as the present, and foreign conditions as well as domestic. The present alone is the known factor. A good line on foreign conditions is about to be given by the reception of the British loan to refund in this market the maturing 5½ per cent. notes. For a twenty-year term the market has rated the worth of these notes around 104. The premium shows that the rate is too high. Both the British and domestic national loans are in irreproachable credit, but the Victory Loan has certain domestic privileges in regard to rediscount and availability for loans in relation to banking capital, which give it preference enough to justify a lower rate. The Canadian loans have three maturities and all are at a premium, with the larger premium on the longer maturities. The same preference for longer maturities was shown when recent large industrial issues were offered at a lower yield for the longer term.

There is one suggestion yet to be made to unite these conflicting interests. Since the Victory Loan is to be the last, it is an excellent chance to unify all issues. There are too many issues, with too many varieties of rates and privileges, to give anything like a standard quotation for Government credit. The multiplicity and diversity of issues confuse those not familiar with the money market, and tend to give a wrong impression that there are grades of Government credit instead of diversity of terms. The banking condition is now so strong that conditions are favorable for a consolidated issue, with option to all present holders to exchange into it on terms open to all. If the new issue were made in serial form there would be both long and short terms to suit the wants of all takers, either investors or bankers. The Treasury already has expressed itself as favorable to the renewal of lapsed privileges of conversion on the ground of inexperience of the holders. The idea is good in proportion that it is general, not special. Such a consolidated issue also might follow the British example of giving an option of taking a low rate with tax exemption or a higher rate without it. That would allow the takers of the loan to balance these conflicting considerations, each for himself, and on the same terms for all.

THE UNSCRAMBLING OF PRUSSIA.

Comic, if wild, is the rage of most of the non-Socialist press of Berlin at the decision of the Government that the National Assembly be held at Weimar. The capital on the Spree sulks. Why should the fine old town on the Ilm, capital of the Augustan age of German literature, be preferred to the capital of shoddy and militarism? The choice of Weimar is in fact admirable. The place is accessible, pleasant, made for visitors. The Spartacan ruffians haven't the chance there that a vast city, breeding and collecting criminals, would give them. Some moral influences should come from the Goethe-Schiller Monument before the Court Theatre where the Assembly is to meet, from all that peace and dignity of a time when Germany had not become the dupe of materialism.

Some non-Prussian site had to be chosen. The old resentments against the dominance and insolence of Prussia have sprung up stronger since Germany was lured to disaster by Prussia. In the South German States this feeling has long been more than latent. In the provinces added to Prussia by the Congress of Vienna, in Frankfort, Hanover, Hesse-Cassel, Nassau, which she gobbled after the Seven Weeks' War, in Saxony, which TALLEYRAND, by inducing England and Austria to support France, prevented Prussia from gobbling altogether at the Congress of Vienna, the old enmities smolder. Finally, all Germans who really want a democratic government must want the Prussian collar taken off their necks for good.

One can imagine how shrilly the Prussian Junker press, in the provinces as in Berlin, must shriek and ululate at the deprussianization not only of Germany but of Prussia itself. It is not the spurned beauty of Berlin, if beauty it have, that moves such wrath. It is not alone the cockneys of Berlin, bewailing that a provincial capital is preferred to the capital of Kultur, that we hear lamenting. It is East Elbia, grandeedom, all the contemporary Knights of the Sword. Prussia the Great is fallen. The Majority Socialists mean to break into seven or eight States the mighty robber State, by secular thrift and cunning and violence built up on Brandenburg.

TALLEYRAND, demonic-clever as he was, made a titanic error when he consented to compromise the Saxon question and let Prussia have half dismembered Saxony, and the provinces marching with France as "compensation" for the rest. Thus Prussia, hitherto mainly an East, became a Central German State, while Austria, swapping her possessions in the Netherlands for Italian and Dalmatian lands, conveniently headed southeast out of Prussia's way; and Prussia, which had been forcing herself westward since the seventeenth century, and had been halted by NAPOLEON, as eager to force her to the east, forged westward and watched the Rhine. Now the whirligig of Time brings on his revenges. The partitioner of Poland is herself to be partitioned, in a sense Prussia is to be made safe for Germany. One can't blame the Junkers if they see the end of their world and growl like their esteemed hero of eight hundred years ago, ALBERT, the Bear of Brandenburg.

DEGENERATION OF A NOBLE RACE.

Defeat has brought to Germany what her cultural leaders used to tell her people would be the ultimate and deepest infamy, a process of Americanization. In Coblenz the other day German girls were discovered polishing the boots of American soldiers, and in many an honest Rhenish household there were groans of anguish at this degrading enslavement of German womanhood. For German officers, in the days before the war, to push women out of the way as they passed by, for the German paterfamilias to walk before the wife who carries the bundles—these things were right and proper, part of time-honored German culture. But for German girls to polish the boots of the invader—this was outrage inconceivable.

However, it was soon discovered that a thrifty citizen of Coblenz had discovered the American liking for resplendent footwear, and had opened up his own shoe-shining parlor with girl help, (perhaps because he could get them at a lower wage,) so it was not American tyranny at all, but German business. Another imitation of American custom must, of course, have been the high-handed measures adopted to abolish LIEBKNECHT and LUXEMBURG. One of the German comic weeklies only last August got out what might have been called a special lynching number, in which practically all the space was devoted to this American pastime. A full-page illustration showed a scaffold erected in Wall Street, with skyscrapers towering all about, and harsh-faced persons in cowboy costume in the act of lynching a mild-mannered German, while silk-hatted plutocrats and ladies of fashion crowded in to applaud. It was notorious in Germany at that time that hundreds, if not thousands, of Germans had been so treated, and the prevalence of lynch law was deemed the worst of the innumerable abominable traits which German observers found in the American character. If, then, the Germans adopt lynching themselves, it can only be in the pathetic effort to win our friendship and in the firm conviction that less strenuous measures than imitation are of no avail.

One of these weaker measures is chronicled in dispatches from the zone of occupation—the issuance of souvenir watchfobs on which the Stars and Stripes encircle the Iron Cross. This pretty memento does not seem to be having much of a sale. No wonder the Germans are driven to extreme and distasteful methods in order to win our esteem. They have blown up our factories, sunk our ships, drowned our women and children, bombed our hospitals, tried to stir rebellion among our people, lied to our Government, reviled every trait of our character, tried to partition our territory, and finally distributed ornaments on which our most sacred emblem is united with theirs; and still we do not love them. If, after all this, they are driven to swallow their feelings and pretend that they like American customs, their motive for trying to win our favor must be an urgent one indeed.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Power Rarely Exercised. The chief lesson of the theatre tax episode is that it demonstrates how easily any considerable fraction of the voting population can have its way with legislators when the units in that fraction—it need not be a majority—are in reality or appearance all of one mind, and have found, or have had found for them, methods of making themselves articulate. Much more onerous taxes than this one—taxes far less easily defensible—are in, and seem likely to remain in, the pending Revenue bill, and the predestinate payers thereof content themselves with an occasional, entirely ineffectual, growl.

This may be due to the fact that these other taxes are less well understood, or because they will be paid after only a single twinge of pain instead of in small amounts of real money, handed over at more or less frequent intervals by or for everybody who seeks the amusement the stage provides. Another reason may be the comparative unfamiliarity of the tax. It is not one of those of such long standing as to be included with death among the recognised inevitables and unescapables. A tax on a house, now—that is in the order of nature, as it were; nobody hopes to avoid it and therefore nobody seeks to do so, particularly as houses cannot be hidden, which also conduces to resignation. Theatre tickets, on the contrary, have hitherto been "of wild nature," as the lawyers say, and a tax on them attracts immediate and indignant attention, just as did all game laws in days not remote.

His Answer Ended the Controversy. As President of a large and variously powerful union, JAMES MCGUIRE had not a little excuse for believing that he could address the Mayor, if not exactly in the tone of one laying down the law to a black beetle, yet with a sternness and acerbity proportioned to his resentment of what the Mayor had done. At any rate, as that is what Mr. MCGUIRE did when he wrote to the Mayor, asking why members of the police force had been used to run the municipal ferryboats during the harbor strikes, it is evident that Mr. MCGUIRE thought the excuse for sternness and acerbity sufficient.

He had what, to save the time it would require to think up a new phrase, may be called a rude awakening. "Rude" is not quite the right word, but it will do, for there is little doubt that Mr. MCGUIRE, when he read the Mayor's reply to his question, murmured, as do all those rudely awakened, "Where am I?" Well he might, for the Mayor, instead of shrinking and shriveling, as was expected, under an inquiry obviously intended and expected to be a rhetorical substitute for condemnation, returned a note that surely was what the world's people would call some settler. It is worth reprinting, as a model document, worthy to be copied not infrequently by other public officials. It wasn't long and ran thus:

> Answering your peremptory demand to know "why I took the stand I did" in the recent sympathetic strike of certain city employes, who had no grievance of their own as to wages or hours, I can only offer in explanation, but without apology, a certified copy of my oath of office as Mayor of this city.

Questions Hard to Answer. It would be more than interesting to know by the application of just what tests the officials who examined the conscientious objectors at Fort Leavenworth decided that some of these objectors were "sincere" and some were not. We all arrive at belief in similar cases, but that seems hardly enough to decide action when on it depends whether men shall regain their liberty or remain long years in prison.

Really to know sincerity from insincerity requires what is meant by "a searching of hearts"—a task recognized as beyond human ability. On the other hand, what does the sincerity of an objector to the performance of a citizen's first duty have to do with the question whether or not he can be permitted, without punishment, to persist in refusing to perform that duty?

We would not ask about the sincerity of a man who professed to believe in human sacrifice as a part of religious obligation. If he put his belief into practice, we should either put him to death as a murderer or shut him up in an asylum as a madman.

Objection to military service at one's country's call is based on one of two convictions—that war is always wrong or that war is always dangerous. The result is the same in either case—the service is avoided by the objector and made heavier for his neighbors.

This is not to say, of course, that it is necessary or even worth while to support in idleness for many years men who in times of peace may be fairly, or even notably, amiable and estimable. It is only to express wonder as to how the investigators whom Secretary BAKER trusted knew who was sincere and who wasn't and what logical difference it made whether the subjects of investigation were sincere or not.

The Gaelic Language.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial article in Thursday's TIMES repeats the assertion made by a correspondent on the spot that the proceedings of the first Irish Assembly were conducted in a "dead" language. This is a mistake. Irish is the sole language of a quarter of a million people in Ireland. There has never been a time when less than half a million spoke it. And since the Gaelic League started to work for a national revival, the language has been spread through the country, and now all the young, educated people of the Nationalist tradition pride themselves on using it. It may interest your readers to know that Irish has been an obligatory subject in the National University since its foundation.

The editorial in THE TIMES compared the proceedings in the Irish Assembly to what might take place if an Indian Parliament made use of Sanscrit or a German Parliament made use of Old Gothic. There is really no analogy. One would not go into the villages in India or in Germany to learn Sanscrit or Old Gothic. But one would have to go into the villages in Ireland to learn Irish. By the way, one could learn the same language by going into the villages in the Highlands and islands of Scotland.

New York, Jan. 23, 1919.

A Welcome to Breshkovskaya.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you allow me and other old American citizens of Russian origin to extend, through your great journal, our hearty welcome to Catherine Breshkovskaya to this blessed land of liberty, free labor, and fair play? While in Russia, over forty-five years ago, we respected Catherine Breshkovskaya as champion of freedom and victim of the Czarist regime, and now we deeply sympathize with her as the victim of the abominable terrorist misrule, uniting old despotism with mob rule. May free speech of "the Grandmother of Russian revolution" counteract most effectively pernicious Bolshevist propaganda both in this country and in Russia.

PETER J. POPOFF.

Flushing, N. Y., Jan. 23, 1919.

TO THE WOUNDED.

This is our homage when you pass us by;
Not the crude, pitying stare you dread, but this—
Averted eyes, and conquered tears, and pangs
Of helpless love • • • You do not know how brave
We also are, not stretching out our hands,
Maddened with pity, to the stranger faces
That whitely pass us, needing us so much!
Oh, boy with deep bright eyes and crippled foot,
Oh, soldier with the face made old with war,
We promise you, by every wound you bear,
A nation's homage and a nation's help,

RIDDER NEWSPAPER UNDER NEW INQUIRY

ANARCHIST SCHOOLS GROW

Senator Overman Discusses Restricting Immigration to Anglo-Saxons for Ten Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Government has been conducting an investigation into the ownership of the New York Staats-Zeitung, an editorial from which paper was read into the records of the Senate Committee on Propaganda today as being a typical expression of post-armistice pro-German propaganda such as is now being carried on in this country.

The Government's suspicions as to the control of the paper were not established, although evidence was obtained which indicated that in the latter part of 1914 and early in 1915 the German Foreign Office was deeply interested in the fortunes of the paper, and had authorized, if necessary, the expenditure of a large sum of money to refinance it. The Ridder brothers denied that such aid was received.

Evidence also was brought out showing that in most of the larger cities there are now organized Soviets, similar to those in Russia, that anarchists are now conducting schools, and that the radical propaganda which has taken on new life since the signing of the armistice is gaining headway in those parts of the country where there are large foreign-born populations.

Near the close of the afternoon session there was an informal discussion of future immigration laws. It seemed to be the opinion of the committee that stringent laws on this subject should be enacted, Senator Overman, the Chairman of the committee, going so far as to ask whether or not it might be well to restrict immigration into the United States for the next ten years to members of the Anglo-Saxon race. Archibald E. Stevenson, of the Military Intelligence Service, when asked what he thought of such a proposition, replied that in his opinion it would be a good thing.

Mr. Stevenson read the Staats-Zeitung editorial of December 8, which in part, was as follows:

"Hundreds of thousands of our boys are standing now over there in the old homeland, which for nineteen months was enemy country and is that still, but which, as President Wilson promised, will soon be a land of peace again, rich in diligent work, rich in true and good people, • • • as the whole happy life of this blessed region presents a picture to the spectator, it is to be wondered whether his [the American soldier] memory will awaken on what he read of this country [Germany] at home long ago, whether he will feel a slight blush of shame in his cheeks and anger for those who, not from their own knowledge but from doubtful sources, branded a whole great people, 70,000,000, as barbarians, Huns, murderers of children and church robbers. And whether he [the American soldier] will at the same time make a pledge in his heart to combat those lies and rumors when he is back home again, and to tell the truth about those [the Germans] living behind those mountains."

Germans Afraid to Come Here.

The editorial continues with a reference to a great number of Germans who will want to come here after peace is signed, but doubts that they will come because of the treatment that it says has been accorded to their kin in this country. It adds, however, that "it would be good if they would come."

"You say that was published in The Staatz-Zeitung; now I would like to ask you," said Major Humes, "if you have any information regarding the financing of that paper?"

Mr. Stevenson replied that he was in possession of certain information which had developed during the recent investigation of the paper. That investigation, he added, was conducted by Nathaniel R. Elsberg, as a special Deputy Attorney General, appointed for the purpose by the Attorney General of New York, who had acted at the request of the Government at Washington. When Herman Ridder, the father of the present owners of The Staatz-Zeitung, died he left the paper involved, Mr. Stevenson said, to the extent of more than $300,000. The stock of the paper, he said, had been pledged as collateral for various private loans.

Mr. Stevenson said that the only German money which it had been proved was actually transferrd into the treasury of the paper was $15,000 which Dr. Dernburg advanced through Adolph Pavenstedt, the German banker and intimate friend of Bernstorff.

"I may add," said Mr. Stevenson, "that some very interesting testimony was given by George von Skal, the former managing editor of The Staatz-Zeitung, who was subsequently associated with Captain von Papen. Von Skal swore that he had seen cablegrams in von Papen's files which stated that if The Staatz-Zeitung was not assisted out of its then difficulties it might fall into hands unfriendly to the Germans. He then read from the record what von Skal had to say on this subject. The testimony concerned the refinancing of The Staatz-Zeitung in 1915, and communications with Berlin about it.

How Paper Was Financed.

The Staatz-Zeitung, Mr. Stevenson said, was reorganized through the issuance of about $200,000 preferred stock which was underwritten by Chandler & Co., the New York bankers. This was the bank that handled the sales of the first German war bonds sold in this country. A holding company, the witness added, was formed, and the stock put in the hands of voting trustees, the chief of the voting trustees being Adolph Pavenstedt of G. Amsinck & Co.

"The voting trustees," said Mr. Stevenson, "controlled the management, put in the Directors they wanted, and were practically the owners of the paper. Others besides Pavenstedt who were interested in the refinancing of the paper were Fritz Achelis, George Ehret, who, I think, put in $50,000, Henry Heide, William Knauth, Adolph Kuttroff, William H. Mulligan, the estate of Jacob Schwartz, William J. Amend, and Amand Pagenstocher."

In his references to anarchistic propaganda, Mr. Stevenson said that the schools for children which the anarchists were conducting were in most of the principal cities of the country. Leonard D. Abbott of New York he named as the head of the school system, which includes schools for adults as well.

On the subject of Bolshevism, Mr. Stevenson said that it was not generally known that the Bolshevists are now in control of several Mexican States.

ART NOTES.

Exhibitions at the Anderson and American Galleries.

At the Anderson Galleries are three exhibitions of various degrees of interest. Downstairs is a collection of antique objects of art, carvings, textiles, porcelains, sculptures, prints, &c., to be sold by order of A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian. These objects belonged to German dealers and cannot be sold to a German or any one representing a German.

Among the pieces of furniture in the collection is a very remarkable and beautiful walnut cassone, a specimen belonging to the finest period of Italian Renaissance and of unusually noble proportions. Three panels on the front are separated by Renaissance pilasters and framed by borders of inlay. There is a decoration of inlay and gilded pastiglia of great richness, yet the general effect is dignified to the point of austerity. Another notable piece in a very different vein is a French Louis XV. table of rosewood with fine ormolu work. There also is a Louis XVI. set of furniture covered with embroidered silk after the charming designs of Philip Lascelle, incredibly accurate in workmanship and fresh and fair in color.

The stone and wood carvings are for the most part of German origin, two or three of them coming from the famous Spitzer collection. A terra cotta Florentine Madonna of the late fifteenth century is a piece of modeling as lovely as anything that incomparable century has shown in this kind. The purity of the type, the long gracious lines of the drapery and flowing hair, the breadth and simplicity of the treatment make the little piece a source of rare pleasure.

The mezzotints and stipples are of good quality, the Gaugain stipple after Morland's "Louisa" having an especial vivacity of execution and color. One seldom sees a print of this subject in which Louisa's "mild yet steadfast eyes," to quote the stanza inscribed on the margin, are so little obliterated. The sale takes place on the afternoon of Jan. 27, and American citizens will have an opportunity of securing admirable treasures, but the penalties of the law are heavy for any one attempting to purchase for, or resell to, an alien.

Three Collections of Moderns.

The Inglis-Morton-Lawrence collections of modern pictures now on view at the American Art Galleries, although brought together by three different collectors, are astonishingly harmonious and expressive of a rare faculty of discrimination. Mr. Morton's Ryders form a remarkable and beautiful set, ranging from "The Equestrian," a sketch in which J. Alden Weir, Ryder's old friend, figures as the horseman, accompanied by his dog, to the "Pegasus," painted for Charles De Kay in 1885, and including "The Pond" and "Homeward Bound," the former a comparatively conventional arrangement of landscape features, but with a nobility and richness that places it on the plane of the masterpieces, the latter conveying the mystery of evening with the sense of loneliness attaching to figures in a wide landscape.

Mr. Morton's collection also includes pastels by Eugene Higgins, a couple of symbolic compositions by Kenneth Hayes Miller, several landscapes by William S. Robinson, a small Blakelock, a Jerome Myers, a Childe Hassam of special splendor, a very beautiful "Nocturne" by Ernest Lawson showing city streets drenched with rain and peopled by almost indistinguishable figures, and "An Old-Fashioned Circus," also by Lawson, both rich in the romantic spirit yielded by ordinary material at this accomplished painter's command. Other American paintings in the same collection are Twachtman's "My Summer Studio," Jonas Lie's "The Fog," two other Lawsons, one of Frederick C. Frieseke's most inveigling descriptions of feminine frippery, Juliet Thompson's portrait of Mrs. Leslie Carter, and a superb example, from the Cyrus J. Lawrence collection, of Mary Cassatt's wholesome and athletic art, a mother and sturdy child, the red of the mother's bodice flaming magnificently among the muted colors in the neighboring pictures.

Mr. Morton's Foreign Pictures.

Mr. Morton's foreign pictures are fewer in number but equally distinguished. A pleasant Courbet, "The Blacksmith's Shop," a good Renoir, a charming Sisley, a Raffaelli of unusual and superior quality, a young woman standing before her dressing table, her robust yet piquant beauty and the plastic character of the modeling strongly supporting the delicate wreaths of pale color in white draperies and pink flowers; a little Cazin, a pastel by Degas, an artist's model resting on a couch in an attitude of exhaustion, bringing into play the muscular rhythms of which Degas was master to a degree unequaled by any of his contemporaries, and a couple of interesting Ribots.

The Frank R. Lawrence collection also abounds in good American work. "In the Forest," by Alexander Wyant, is in that really great painter's best vein, the sunlight that sifts in through the foliage luring the eye to far horizons, and the fine proportions of the foreground adding to the sense of spaciousness. "Gray Day, Shropshire, England," by Charles Melville Dewey, is one of the prizes of the collection, a landscape in which the structure of line, an architecture as infrangible as it is delicate, is overlaid by lovely modulations of light and shade and color, a picture as varied, firm, moving in its emotional appeal as Nature in her kindest mood and in its basic scheme as the traditional Medean laws. The interest felt by the artist in his foreground has resulted in a marvelously complex portrait of that little patch of moist ground, but its beautiful complexity is fused in a still more beautiful simplicity of effect. The artist has done nothing more interesting as a technical achievement or more enchanting as a poetic interpretation of the natural world.

Other Americans in the Lawrence collection are F. Ballard Williams, H. W. Ranger, David Johnson, Robert C. Minor, Edward Moran, F. W. Kost, W. G. Bunce, C. H. Eaton, C. H. Miller, Julian Rix, Irving R. Wiles, and John J. Enneking.

In the Inglis collection foreign names predominate, but there are two flower subjects by J. Alden Weir of exquisite quality. The French paintings in this collection will enlist attention. There is a Barye landscape with the seal of the "Vente Barye," small handsome panels by Monticelli, Fantin Latour, François Bonvin, Charles Jacque, and drawings by Millet, Puvis de Chavannes, and Daubigny.

The walls are far from crowded, and the pictures, with few exceptions, will threaten the self-control of the most restrained bidder should he happen to fancy the kind of art that is a joy forever.

Moore Collection of Oriental Art.

In the upper galleries is the Rufus E. Moore collection of Oriental art objects, many of the Chinese porcelains equaling the best that have been shown even in this place of hospitality to the finest works of the East. The brilliant example of "sang de boeuf" numbered 1159, for example, is as fiery and deep in color and as elegant in form as the most exacting connoisseur could ask, much finer than anything sold in the open market in recent years. No. 1147, a mirror black vase, as intensely black as a raven's wing and graceful in shape, is another remarkable specimen. The single color group as a whole is impressive, and its dignity is enhanced by the tact shown in the arrangement of the cases. Nothing is easier to spoil than the effect of a miscellaneous collection of objects strong in color and varied in shape. To see each at its best they have to be treated as an artist treats the pigments in his tubes, as material, that is, out of which to make a picture. A very satisfying picture has been made of the Moore collection.

The Sung wares and the handsome pieces of Korean ware will have much to say to the modern collector who has turned in recent years to these less sophisticated products with their more robust forms and graver color. A fourteenth century Korean jar, No. 591, is particularly happy in the color and character of the grapevine decoration, a bold attempt at aubergine that falls short of the tint probably desired, but achieves a high degree of beauty.

SEND SHIP TO HELP SUFFERING SYRIANS

THIRD TO LEAVE THIS PORT

Three Former Ambassadors to Turkey Send Greetings to Expedition.

The steamship Pensacola, the third ship to leave this port with relief supplies for the Near East, will sail today for Beirut, Syria, with 4,000 tons of clothing, food, fuel, machinery, and hospital supplies, being sent by the American Committee for Relief in the Near East.

The committee held a send-off meeting on the Pensacola yesterday. Cleveland A. Dodge, Treasurer of the committee, spoke, as did Albert Lucas, Secretary of the Joint Distribution Committee of the American Fund for Jewish War Sufferers, which contributed $300,000 toward the cost of the cargo of the Pensacola. The Rev. G. Monorian of the Armenian National Union spoke on behalf of his countrymen and the Rev. Dr. Joakin Alexopoulos bade the vessel godspeed in the name of the Greeks of Asia Minor, who will share in the relief supplies. There was a brief talk by the Rev. H. A. Kisbany, representing the Syrians. He presented a bouquet of flowers to Captain Fred Marcus, commander of the ship.

Speaking for the Red Cross, which co-operated in the sending of the steamship, Albert E. Staub, Director of the Atlantic Division, said that the cargo was an expression of love and sympathy of the whole American people toward those suffering in the Near East. In behalf of the committee, Secretary Charles V. Vickery pointed out that the Food Administration had guaranteed additional cargoes of flour and other foods as needed by the committee.

Three former Ambassadors from the United States to Turkey sent greetings to the Pensacola expedition. The message from Oscar S. Straus reads as follows:

> The subject nationalities of the Ottoman Empire, the Syrians, the Armenians, and Jews, have been the greatest martyrs of the war. The humanitarian relief which America has so generously accorded to these suffering people and the relief that is now going forward will ever stand to the great credit of America and save from starvation thousands of unfortunates, who will be best qualified to contribute to the regeneration of the Near East.

Abram I. Elkus sent the following:

> I regret I cannot be with you in person, but I know that you will bring relief to many starving and hungry, and that you will do much to help the poor people of the Near East who are in so much need of assistance.

Henry Morgenthau wrote:

> I greatly regret that I am unable personally to wish the relief expedition in the Near East "godspeed." My heart and wishes are with you.
>
> The condition of the Armenians in Turkey was pitiful when I left in 1916, and since then many have died from starvation and exposure.
>
> The personnel of this expedition will be bringing to the Armenians the first relief and ray of hope that they have had for many years.
> It is my earnest wish that you should be the advance guard of many Americans and shiploads of food to follow.

Ex-army men on board are: Charles F. Weeden, Jr. of Newton Centre, Mass., who was in the Air Service; Gardiner C. Means of Brookline, Mass., who was a second lieutenant in the Aviation corps, stationed at Ellington Field, Cicott, Texas; Donald Burke Perry of Hallowell, Maine, who has just left the Signal Officers' Training School at Camp Vail, N. J.; Thomas W. Farnsworth of Hartford, Conn., a private from Camp Devens, Mass.; Carleton S. Ayer of Boston, Mass., who was a second lieutenant in the Signal Corps; Charles V. Farnham, second lieutenant in the Aviation Section; Joel L. Connolly of Dorchester, Mass., who was a lieutenant in the Medical Corps; Charles Graber of Philadelphia, who was a private; William E. Greenleaf of Fair Haven, Vt., formerly a second lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps; Dr. Manning C. Field of Brooklyn, N. Y., who served in the Medical Corps for fifteen months, and Edward W. Burgess of Plymouth, Mass., and Richard T. Wilson of Watertown, Mass.

BEST STATUES FOR SOLDIERS

That all monuments, medals, &c., to appear as memorials of the valor of American soldiers, sailors, and marines of the great war may be of the highest artistic merit, the American Academy of Arts and Letters has issued a public statement and appeal. William Dean Howells is President of the Academy, Robert Underwood Johnson, Secretary, and William M. Sloane, Treasurer. The statement was adopted unanimously at the recent annual meeting of the organization.

The Academy believes the American men who took part in the great struggle are worthy of the best art of the country, it does not wish to have even in the smallest village what it calls machine-made statues, turned out in numbers. The statement refers to the National Commission of Fine Arts created by act of Congress to advise the President and Congress concerning any matter of art in the District of Columbia, and, as appointed by the President, it has had an admirable effect upon the artistic character of national memorials. Individual States and cities have similar commissions, and the statement appeals to committees everywhere to obtain the best artistic judgment and the most expert advice before undertaking memorials.

The Academy also suggests that where it is proposed to erect monuments abroad conferences should first be held with the artistic authorities of the different countries. More than ordinary business intelligence is required for this work, the statement adds, and there should be on each committee architects, sculptors, and painters as well as business men. The National Institute of Arts and Letters has indorsed these recommendations as well as the Academy.

PLAN A HIGHER AUTO TAX.

All Owners in State May Have to Pay $3 Operator's Fee.

Automobile owners in this State may be required to pay a higher fee for driving their own cars during the coming year in order to help the State meet its estimated deficit of $12,000,000. A new law is being prepared for the Legislature at Albany to increase the operator's license fee, now applicable only to New York City, from $1 to at least $2, and perhaps to $3. The operator's license fee, which is taken out by private owners who drive their cars and is distinct from the regular chauffeur's license, is paid by owners in New York City and those who drive cars into the city more than ten times a year. There are about 106,000 licenses of this sort.

The proposed new law, while enhancing this fee, is also to be applied throughout the State, and as more than 470,000 motor vehicles of all kinds have been registered with the Secretary of State, the wider application of the law would mean that a great majority of the owners of these cars would be required to take out the operator's license, meaning an increase to the State revenue of from $750,000 to more than $1,000,000.

UNITE TO DEVELOP NEW TRADE FLEET

Shipbuilders and Owners Firm for Private Control of Merchant Marine.

BOWLES OPPOSES MOVE

Donald Wants Vessels Used in Small Groups to Promote Efficient Management.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Resolutions favoring the development of an American merchant marine under private enterprise, creating an organization to be known as the National American Merchant Marine Association, were adopted today at the closing session of a general conference of shipbuilders, owners, operators and employes.

R. Goodwyn Rhett of Charleston, S. C., was elected Vice President of the new organization and Winthrop L. Marvin of Boston Secretary. Other officers will be named after further conferences.

Former Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles of the Emergency Fleet Corporation vigorously opposed the permanent organization.

"I feel that it is particularly inappropriate to attempt the organization of any body representing private interests at a time when the nation's interests are at stake," he said. "I have seen the attempts to influence Congress by such associations as this. I know that the only thing that can lead us out of our present difficulties is the organization of a body representing the Government and the people alone."

Matthew Woll, representing the American Federation of Labor, told the conference that representatives of labor were not so much interested in the ownership of ships, "since we find there is little difference between autocratic individual industrial control and autocratic governmental bureaucratic control."

"What we do stand for is a merchant marine, American manned as well as American owned," he said. "I am sure that if you will stand against attempts to enslave again the seamen, and make the seas free for American seamen as well as ships, you can count upon the support of labor."

Commander Charles Belknap of the navy, introduced as the executive in the movement of the navy's merchant ships during the war, said that American vessels had proved their superiority over German. Comparing the records of the Leviathan and the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, he said that the two latter had proved to be the cheapest and fastest as transports.

John A. Donald, Acting Chairman of the Shipping Board, told the conference that he favored individual ownership and operation for the present Government fleet.

"The number of ships is so large, amounting to about 2,700, that I hardly see how the Government can adequately take care of so huge a fleet," Mr. Donald said. "As a manager of ships in the past, I have found that a fleet of five or ten requires all the individual capacity of a managing owner."

Mr. Donald advocated the sale of some of the ships to new and small corporations which would have Government-named Directors. He also urged differential rates on direct commerce moving in and out of American ports on American ships.

The Shipping Committee of the American Manufacturers' Export Association demanded an immediate reduction in the rates fixed by the Shipping Board. It submitted a summary of replies to a questionnaire issued by the export association to its members. These replies, received from almost 200 of the most prominent concerns in the United States, were declared to prove that American exporters were being compelled to pay exorbitant freight rates. The committee laid emphasis on the answers of eighty-five firms which stated that a continuance of present rates would throw their trade to European competitors.

WANTS SHIP ORDERS CUT 1,500,000 TONS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Director General Piez of the Emergency Fleet Corporation outlined a program before the Senate Commerce Committee today for after-war steel shipbuilding in which he urged that the war schedule be shaved down by cancelling 1,500,000 tons of contracts now out. This, he said, would give 13,000,000 tons of shipping to the United States. Thereafter the yearly output of tonnage ought to be 2,000,000 tons, which is about 40 per cent. of the normal capacity of the existing yards.

The 1,500,000 tons of steel shipping, Mr. Piez estimated, could be cancelled with a loss of about $100,000,000. The Director General told of a recent offer from a foreign Government to buy twenty-five of the first fifty ships turned out at Hog Island. These are 7,500-ton steel ships, and the price offered was $225 a ton, or $42,000,000 for the twenty-five vessels. The offer had been submitted by cable to Mr. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board, who is now in France. Opportunity also exists, Mr. Piez said, to dispose of a number of smaller steel vessels that are being built on the great lakes. Contracts on these and other steel vessels, he said, were being cancelled at a loss of $100 a ton. He said the Emergency Fleet Corporation had stopped construction or cancelled contracts upon 132 wooden ships, and had reduced its steel program from 16,000,000 to 15,000,000 tons. He insisted that, to attempt a program of over 13,000,000 tons would be "wasteful."

Mr. Piez gave figures to show that the aggregate of contracts commitments entered into by the Emergency Fleet Corporation for merchant shipping was $3,615,000,000 as against authorizations by Congress of $3,671,000,000. The Shipping Board arranged for 154 steel and wooden yards. Nearly all of the 87 wooden shipyards have been completed, while of the 67 steel yards, 56 have been finished.

The first steel vessel launched at the Hog Island yard, Mr. Piez said, had cost $324 a ton, and gradually this was reduced so that from the twenty-fifth to the fiftieth ship turned out the average was $212 a ton. The first ship cost $2,427,000 and the fiftieth cost $1,348,000. The Fleet Corporation, he said, had delivered 526 vessels of all types in 1918 and launched 287 which were 80 per cent. completed. There are now 391 ships on the ways, about 331.3 per cent. completed.

Mr. Piez told the committee that the concrete ship construction had been reduced from 42 to 14 vessels since the armistice was signed. Concrete ships cost approximately 30 per cent. less than steel ships, he said, and he pronounced them serviceable. The 5,000-ton concrete ship Faith, he said, had come back from a trip to Europe without a leak.

"In pursuance of the foregoing, Postmasters are directed not to pay War Savings Certificates on which the names of the owners have not been entered or have been erased or changed, since, under the regulations, they are not transferable are are payable only to the original owners, except in case of death or disability.

ATTACK MRS. TAYLOR'S WILL

Next of Kin Charge That Restaurant Man's Widow Was Illiterate.

Suit was filed in the Surrogate's Court yesterday to break the will of Mrs. Catherine L. Taylor, who died recently at the age of 90 in a boarding house at 73 West Eighty-third Street, on the ground that the chief legatee, William J. Smith, formerly bookkeeper and captain of the bellboys at the Hotel Longacre, was able to have the will executed in behalf of himself and a number of persons who surrounded Mrs. Taylor in her boarding house, because in addition to her advanced age Mrs. Taylor was almost blind and deaf, and was illiterate. The share of the estate left to Smith is estimated at $75,000. Smith and other legatees named in the will deny that they exercised undue influence on the aged woman.

The contest has been brought by ten or more of the next of kin of Mrs. Taylor, some of whom got only $5 each and others larger sums. The first move in the case was the application yesterday by Mrs. Margaret McMullen, a niece, of 244 East Eighty-sixth Street, one of the five-dollar legatees, to be appointed temporary administratrix pending the trial of the suit. She objects to the issuance of letters of administration to Smith, who is named as one of the executors.

Mrs. McMullen alleges that Smith, who is now 35 years old, was a schoolteacher in Ireland before he came here, and that while he was captain of the bellboys and bookkeeper at the Longacre Hotel he met Mrs. Taylor in 1912. Mrs. Taylor, who took a liking to him Mrs. McMullen says, later began to take his advice as to the management of her property, which included the Cornell apartments, at 116 West Forty-sixth Street, valued at $100,000, from which Mrs. Taylor got an income of $8,000.

Counsel for Mrs. McMullen said yesterday that Mrs. Taylor was the widow of Washington L. Taylor, who made a fortune in the restaurant business and invested in realty, his holdings including the Longacre Hotel, where Smith was employed, and where he met Mrs. Taylor. Smith still lives at the Longacre.

A FLOATING HIPPODROME.

Dillingham Plans to Give Show on Lighter for Returning Soldiers.

A plan to carry amusement to returning soldiers detained at various points in the harbor was evolved yesterday by Charles B. Dillingham, and will be put into immediate practice. A huge lighter will be transformed into a stage and circus ring, to be known as the Floating Hippodrome, and various features of the Hippodrome show will be carried thereon to men at Quarantine and naval landing stations. Among the acts which will be thus shown will be the Hippodrome elephants, the Hanneford family of equestrians, and the Slayman Ali troupe of acrobats and others.

Mark Lawson and George H. Williams, scenic artist and carpenter of the Hippodrome, began yesterday to transform the lighter into a theatre. The barge will meet incoming transports during the mornings, and on Sundays it will be towed to the different stations where troops are being quartered.

TICKET MEN GIVE UP FIGHT.

Some Seek Speculators' Licenses—May Appeal Test Case.

Owners and managers of a number of theatre ticket agencies who have fought the new city ordinance withdrew their contest yesterday and applied for licenses. At the District Attorney's office this action was considered as the direct result of thirty-two arrests of ticket sellers and other employes in the theatrical districts on Wednesday, eleven of whom have been held by the Magistrates' courts for examination next week.

"Louis Marshall, attorney for a group of the agencies, has announced that he will apply for a writ of habeas corpus previous to the hearing of the men under arrest," said Assistant District Attorney E. P. Kilroe. "The defendants may get an appeal to General Sessions, but to reach a final decision it would be necessary to carry the case to the Court of Appeals."

HARRY S. HARKNESS DIES OF INFLUENZA

YACHTSMAN AND AVIATOR

He Sued the Government for $401,250 for Loss of Wakiva II., Said to Have Sunk 3 Submarines.

Harry S. Harkness, only son of the late Lamon V. Harkness, one of the biggest stockholders in the Standard Oil Company, from whom he inherited a large fortune, died last night at his home, 270 Park Avenue, of influenza. He was 38 years old.

Mr. Harkness was President of the Harkness Estates, Inc., and was owner of the Sheepshead Bay Speedway. He was President of the Sheepshead Bay Corporation from its organization until 1916, when he resigned, and on May 2, 1917, he bought the property under a foreclosure sale for $1,300,000.

Mr. Harkness formerly owned the U. S. S. yacht Wakiva II., which was sunk in European waters in May of last year in a collision with a navy cargo carrier. It was said last night that the yacht had sunk three German submarines. In February of last year, Mr. Harkness filed suit in the United States Court of Claims, Washington, for $401,250, which he asserted was the difference between the real and appraised value of his yacht, which was taken over by the Navy Department. The Government appraised the vessel at $265,000, of which amount Mr. Harkness accepted 75 per cent. in part payment and then entered suit for the remaining $401,250, which he claimed he should have been paid. The vessel was appraised four times by the Government officials before the price was fixed.

Mr. Harkness was the holder of many automobile records and was also an amateur aviator of note. In September, 1910, he had a narrow escape from death when his Antoinette monoplane crashed to the ground with him at the Mineola Aviation Field. Mr. Harkness was elected President of the National Speedway Association in 1916. In September of last year, Mr. Harkness, who was then living at the Hotel St. Regis, was sworn in as a Colonel in the Police Reserves, and served on the staff of Special Deputy Police Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker.

Mr. Harkness was twice married. His first wife, Miss Marie M. Marbeck, he married in 1906 and divorced in 1916. INSURANCE MEN MEET.

About 800 managers of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, in the United States and Canada, began their annual meeting at 1 Madison Avenue yesterday. Discussion of 1918 business revealed that nearly 90,000 Metropolitan policy holders had died since Sept. 1 of influenza. In the first two weeks of January 7,444 deaths were reported. This called for the payment of claims of about $18,000,000.

There was some discussion of Government insurance of soldiers and sailors, and the attitude of the company was set forth by Vice President Haley Fiske:

"You should advise soldiers and sailors to keep up their insurance," he told the managers. "The cost of this insurance is less than would be furnished by any private company, since the Government plans a considerable part of the actual cost shall be paid out of the general revenue. That is a good reason for its continuance by the insured. You will not allow your agents to try to 'twist' Government insurance into Metropolitan policies. The Government is fulfilling a duty to the soldiers and sailors in continuing their insurance to them at net cost."

Summarizing the business of 1918, Mr. Fiske said that notwithstanding the war and the influenza, the insurance written had been greater than ever placed by any other company in a year, the total being $882,340,609, of which $464,000,000 was ordinary and $419,000,000 industrial.

At the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company yesterday John R. Hegeman, President, said that the company paid insurance amounting to $882,340,609 in 1918. Of this amount $463,000,000 was in ordinary policies and $419,000,000 was in industrial policies. The assets of the company increased by $71,429,182 to $775,454,698 in the year and the surplus was $28,988,141.

The total insurance in force, he said, was $4,500,000,000, while the premium income amounted to $154,000,000. Approximately 90,000 holders of the company's policies died following attacks of influenza from Sept. 1, 1918, to Jan. 20, 1919.

ACCUSED OF BOND THEFT.

Schoenberg Arrested in Street After $10,000 Worth Disappeared.

Pending an investigation into the disappearance of $10,000 worth of B. R. T. bonds lost on their way from a brokerage firm to the Bank of Commerce at 31 Nassau Street, the police yesterday arrested Albert Schoenberg, who said he was a striking garment worker and lived at 903 Prospect Park, Brooklyn. Policeman Kimmone was standing at Pine and Nassau Streets when a man asked him to place Schoenberg under arrest. Almost immediately, Norman Peck, messenger for the brokerage firm of R. Barnett, 7 Wall Street, came up and accused Schoenberg of being the man who took the bonds.

The man who asked for the arrest is said to have been an elevator man in the Bank of Commerce, and he gave the policeman a $1,000 bond which he said Schoenberg had dropped. Peck said the bonds were taken from his pocket, and he did not know they were gone until he started to deliver them. While being taken to the Old Slip Station Schoenberg broke away, and the policeman fired a shot before he was caught by citizens. No bonds were found in Schoenberg's possession, and he denied having taken them.

BEGIN SONATA RECITALS.

Harold Bauer and Jacques Thibaud Play from Beethoven.

Beethoven at his intimate best, as well as his Parisian politest, was heard in a first sonata recital by Harold Bauer and Jacques Thibaud, which drew a musical audience last evening at Aeolian Hall. All the master's sonatas for pianoforte and violin, which, like the symphonies, number nine, were to be performed, as last year, in three evenings, of which the later events will be March 4 and 31.

There was some difficulty in starting, the weather made listeners late and strings unresponsive, but the sonata in M major, Op. 12, soon put the two players and their audience in harmony, and the later G major, Op. 96, and C minor, Op. 30, were equally enjoyed.

SHOWS ICE STOCK ADVANCE.

Controller Odell Tells How Dealers Evade Contract Prices.

The cross-examination of Benjamin B. Odell, Ice Controller, was concluded yesterday before Chief City Magistrate McAdoo in the case wherein the charge was made by Odell that the Washington Heights Ice Corporation was producing ice without a license. Adjournment was taken until Jan. 31.

The Ice Controller was cross-examined by Max D. Steuer, counsel for the ice corporation. "Governor," asked Mr. Steuer, "since you became Ice Controller the stock of the Knickerbocker Ice Company and Burns Brothers has gone up considerably in its value, doubled in fact, hasn't it?"

"I saw it in the papers. I don't follow the stock market. I learned my lesson many years ago," replied the Controller.

Mr. Steuer then produced thirty-two ice contracts for wholesalers. The first three which he read proved to have been made since the Ice Controller took office and were for $3 a ton, instead of $4.40, the price which the Ice Controller had set. Mr. Steuer sought to prove that under these contracts wholesalers or "loaders" who held the $3 contracts resold ice to other loaders who did not have the contracts, while the Washington Heights Ice Corporation, the independent firm, was compelled to maintain its $4.40 price under order of the Controller.

"As a result of this condition did not many dealers undersell the rate you had established for the family trade, namely, fifty cents per hundred, by selling at thirty cents per hundred?" asked Mr. Steuer.

"I received such complaints," the Controller replied, going on to explain that there was no possible way of avoiding this condition, as ice dealers keep no books and do only cash business with the manufacturing plants.

An Investment Opportunity of Unusual Merit

THE finest eating apples produced in America are grown in the famous apple orchards of Washington and Oregon. This surpassing fruit brings the highest prices, not only in the markets of the United States but also in South America and Europe, to which markets thousands of car-loads were exported every year prior to the war. An apple orchard in bearing in the Northwest is a veritable bonanza and thousands of prosperous people throughout this section are living in luxury through having invested their money in this thriving and immensely profitable industry

A Thriving Young Orchard with a Certain Future

Due to the disturbed conditions brought about by the war, the owners of one of the most promising young apple orchards in the Northwest are compelled to seek outside capital to finance their venture. This orchard consists of about 450 acres of prime land, all of which acreage is in apples of the most popular eating varieties. The trees are just coming into bearing and under an ordinary yield their crop should run next year between fifty and sixty thousand boxes, with a yield in 1920 of approximately one hundred thousand boxes. The last crop of this orchard was sold at an average price of $1.38 per box f. o. b. cars at orchard.

Two Ways to Invest

One hundred thousand dollars is required for the maintenance and improvement of the orchard. This investment can be made in one of two ways:—

(1) As a straight investment of $100,000 to be secured by a first mortgage. A liberal return will be made by the owners for this money and your investment is amply protected.

(2) A stock interest in the company amounting to $70,000, the residue to be furnished by the present owners. The investor will receive first preferred stock, together with a liberal bonus of common stock which will practically secure him control of the company.

Safety and Good Profits

This is a real proposition, in that it is based on a staple commercial product that will pay liberal profits for a long period with a low cost of upkeep. We would emphasize the fact that this orchard is right up to date in every respect and the trees are in prime condition. Authorities declare that it is one of the most promising young orchards in the finest apple-growing section of the Northwest. Address—G. C. Sherman.

GIANTS WILL TRAIN ON COLLEGE CAMPUS

GAINESVILLE IS THE PLACE

New York Club Grasps Opportunity to Give Players Mental as Well as Physical Recreation.

The Giants should be the brainiest club in baseball next season. Manager McGraw has decided to train his club at the University of Florida, at Gainesville, which is only about three hours' ride from Jacksonville. The Mayor of Gainesville, Gordon B. Tison, and the President of the university, A. A. Murphee, extended an invitation to the Giants which was so flattering that they could not refuse it.

A few weeks' sojourn in the shadows of the classic college halls should have just the effect on some members of the Giants that McGraw has sought for many years. A development of brain power, along with the baseball practice, may give the Giants a decided advantage just beneath their caps in the pennant race next Summer.

At Marlin, Texas, where the Giants used to train, the only mental recreation the players enjoyed consisted of the movies and the learned treatises of the sporting pages. Imagine the joy of the players when they find that they may spend their idle hours in the lecture hall, drinking deeply at the fountain of knowledge, or among the musty volumes in the college library.

Picture Heinie Zimmerman sitting out 'neath the shade of the sheltering palms, deep in the study of the famous race at Marathon. Also, picture Larry Doyle lost in the alluring pages of a volume on "Mind Over Matter." Then, perhaps, also, Rube Benton will have a chance to revive his memories of higher mathematics, so that when the season starts he will be more certain than ever before, when he has two strikes and three balls on the batter. Benny Kauff, perhaps, will have a chance to take up a short course in oratory. Benny's oratory possesses possibilities, but it has always lacked the polish and endurance which will come with college forensic training. Manager McGraw and his first lieutenant, Pat Moran, will have a chance to get more familiar with the battle strategy of Napoleon Bonaparte.

Here is Mayor Tison's invitation to Manager McGraw:

"It gives me pleasure to have such an excellent excuse to write a man that I have always admired. As Chief Executive of the City of Gainesville, I take great pride in extending to you an invitation to do your Spring training in our beautiful little city. We have a population of about 10,000, modern municipal improvements, excellent water—just water—good hotel, and what I believe you will call a good practice field.

"We are anxious to have you train here and will be glad if you will look Gainesville over carefully before you select any other place in Florida. I believe we can satisfy you, in fact please you from every angle.

"Yours respectfully,

"GORDON B. TISON, Mayor."

Following is the invitation of President Murphree of the University of Florida:

"I am glad to join a number of our citizens, including the Mayor of Gainesville, in an invitation to you and your organization to spend the training months in Gainesville. The University of Florida will offer you, free of charge, the use of a very excellent baseball diamond and your men access to the shower baths.

"Our climate is equal to the best in Florida during the training season. We have, as a rule, very little rain and the days are good. We should be very happy if you should decide to spend your training season at the University of Florida.

Yours very truly,

"A. A. MURPHREE, President."

Just as soon as Manager McGraw accepted these offers he lost no time in getting ready for the most scholarly trip his club has ever taken. The Giants will leave New York on the evening of Thursday, March 20, and will get to Gainesville March 22. Practice will commence the next day. Secretary John B. Foster said yesterday that the club had about thirty-five players under reserve and several of these will be traded or sold to other clubs before the Giants return to the North.

Manager McGraw has an old friend in Gainesville who will be glad to see him. He is Charley Harris, once a member of the old Baltimore Orioles. Charley is now the village grocer in Gainesville and a prominent citizen. The Giants' manager was once in Gainesville—way back in 1901—and he thinks that it will be an ideal place to train, especially because the college atmosphere will give his men the additional mental stimulant. The name of the hotel where the Giants will stop is the White House.

DODGERS PICK FLORIDA.

Manager Robinson Will Take Team to Jacksonville.

Manager Wilbert Robinson of the Dodgers decided yesterday to take the Brooklyn Club to Jacksonville to train. The Ebbets Field troupe will be neighbors of the Yankees. There are two baseball parks in Jacksonville and the clubs will play several exhibition games. With the Giants at Gainesville, a few hours distance, it is expected that other practice games will be arranged with McGraw's team.

The Brooklyn squad will go south about March 20 and will be ready to start training on March 23. If all of Brooklyn's players are out of the service by that time the Dodger leader will have a big squad from which to pick his team. It is expected that the Daubert case will be settled then, and that Brooklyn will have traded him for an infielder, probably Bill Kopf, of Cincinnati.

LOYOLA WINS AT HOCKEY.

Keresey Scores All the Goals Against Horace Mann Seven.

Excellent stick work by Keresey, playing centre, gave the Loyola School hockey seven a victory yesterday over the Horace Mann School septet, in their annual game, played at the Brooklyn Ice Palace. The score was 4 to 0. Keresey scored all four of the victorious team's goals. Two of them came in the first period on long, difficult shots from the centre of the rink. In the second period Keresey registered two more goals on passs from Stoneham, right wing. Stoneham is the son of the new President of the New York Giants.

The line-up:

M'KAY GIVES YALE VICTORY AT SQUASH

Defeats Vanderpoel of Princeton in Spectacular Match—Harvard Defeats Columbia.

Harvard	2	1	.667
Yale	2	1	.667
Columbia	1	2	.333
Princeton-Squash	1	2	.333

Donald McKay of the Yale Club defeated W. H. Vanderpoel of the Princeton-Squash Club yesterday in the most spectacular match produced to date in the Metropolitan team squash tennis championship tournament. The scores were 6—15, 15—11, and 18—17. The games were played on the courts of the Yale Club. McKay's success gave his team a victory by 3 matches to 2.

Splendid rallies just when the outlook appeared unfavorable for him gave McKay the match. Both players furnished their usual hard-driving game, effectiveness being shared alternately. The third game developed the hardest playing, and in the end it was a miss by Vanderpoel on an attempted return of a cross-court shot which gave Yale Club's team its victory.

This game started with Vanderpoel showing strongly. The Princeton-Squash Club player quickly piled up a lead of 9 to 1. Here McKay rallied, and with a smashing attack jumped to the lead when the score was at 13 to 12. Vanderpoel furnished a rally of his own at this stage and brought the game to 18 all.

The contestants then agreed on five sets, and McKay started as if he would take the match then and there. He advanced to a 4-love score before Vanderpoel struck his pace. Subsequently Vanderpoel brought the match to 4 all, and then came McKay's winning cross-court shot, which flew past Vanderpoel as the latter sought to return it.

McKay failed to attain his true form in the opening game. Vanderpoel, on the other hand, played well throughout and scored a comparatively easy victory at 15—6. In the second game the Yale Club player recovered himself and evened the count by taking the game 15—11.

While the Yale-Princeton-Squash Club teams were struggling for supremacy on the Eli courts, Harvard Club's quintet was accomplishing the downfall of the Columbia Club on the Crimson courts. The result was 3 matches to 2 in favor of the Harvard team. A surprise was sprung in this match when R. L. Streibeigh of the Blue and White team was defeated by A. Lockett, a Crimson player, in straight games. The scores were 15—12 and 15—9.

J. Burden's excellent use of the racquet in the final game gave the Harvard players victory. Burden opposed I. H. Cornell of the Columbia Club, who was defeated after three bitterly contested games by scores of 6—15, 15—7, and 15—12. The Blue and White player made his greatest display of form in the closing game. Burden started well and maintained the lead until the score reached 14—8. Then Cornell rallied and played brilliantly for a time. His rally ended, however, after he had collected four points.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 23.—Charles Taft, son of ex-President Taft, who recently returned from France, has been engaged to coach Yale's basket ball quintet.

S. G. A. MEETS TONIGHT.

All of Present Officers Have Been Named for Re-election.

The annual meeting of the United States Golf Association at the Waldorf tonight promises to be somewhat different from the last session held in this city at the Astor two years ago. On that occasion an unsuccessful endeavor was made to restore Francis Ouimet to amateur status. Tonight's gathering will not exactly be a cut-and-dried affair, although the election of officers named by the Nominating Committee is a matter of course. All of the officials have been renamed to succeed themselves, Frederick S. Wheeler of Apawamis being the President.

Delegates from clubs all over the country are expected to put in an appearance, including Silas H. Strawn of Chicago, Frank L. Woodward of Denver, and Howard W. Perrin of Philadelphia, all former chief executives. Daniel Chauncey of this city, President in 1907 and 1908, will be on hand. The occasion will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of the U. S. G. A. Delegates will be called to order at 8:30, and after all the business has been transacted a collation will be served.

COLGATE TROUNCES PRATT.

Hamilton Collegians Beat Brooklyn Five by Score of 38 to 19.

Colgate College's basket ball quintet scored a convincing victory over the Pratt Institute five last night in a game held on the Pratt court in Brooklyn by the score of 38 to 19. The Hamilton, N. Y., collegians outclassed their Brooklyn rivals throughout and led in scoring from the start. Colgate's players showed a fast passing game and team work, which puzzled the Pratt team. The first half ended with Colgate leading by 16 to 8, and in the second half this margin was maintained.

Anderson and Cottrell were the leaders in practically all of Colgate's offensive plays. Both scored heavily for the Hamilton team. Cottrell got four field goals and Anderson caged five from the floor and one foul.

The lineup:

Colgate. (38.)	Position.	Pratt. (19.)
Cottrell	R.F.	Roth

PIGEONS HAVE DAY AT POULTRY SHOW

New Rochelle Homer, with 1,000-Mile-Flight Record, Is Blue Ribbon Winner.

A blue chequered homer pigeon, which last Fall made a flight of over 1,000 miles from Florida to its home loft in New Rochelle, was awarded the blue ribbon among the male birds with records of 1,000 miles at the Poultry Show at Madison Square Garden yesterday. This record-holding homer is owned by Oscar W. Opsann of New Rochelle. The winning 1,000-mile record hen was entered by C. Mentz of Newark. This blue homer made a flight of 1,100 miles from the West last Summer.

There was a more impressive entry of homers at this year's show than ever before, and the classes were judged yesterday by W. White, Jr., who was selected by the American Federation of Homer Clubs. The concourses, or clubs, which were represented were Manhattan, Stamford, Bronx, Brooklyn, Newark, Yonkers, and New Rochelle. Manhattan and New Rochelle were tied in the judging classes with four firsts each, but New Rochelle won on points because of the victory of Mr. Opsann's record homer. Newark won three first places, Brooklyn three, Stamford three, Bronx two, and Yonkers one.

The bird which furnishes America's favorite holiday dish, the turkey, held the attention of the judges. Wendover Farm, of Bernardsville, N. J., won the first prize among the bronze turkeys. The winner among the male birds was a thirty-pound beauty of brilliant plumage, while the blue ribbons in the ben, cockrell, and pullet classes went to the entries of the Bird Brothers of Meyersdale, Penn.

The miscellaneous breeds were judged yesterday, and in the exhibits were birds of new shades and markings. The four miscellaneous classes, which includes new types which have not yet been recognized as standard varieties, attracted considerable attention. In these new classes the winners were Red Houdans, a bird never before exhibited at a poultry show here. They were bred at Forrestgates Farms.

There have been numerous inquiries regarding how to begin keeping poultry at the information booths of the Government Poultry Exhibit, which is in charge of Chief Poultrymen Harry M. Lamon and M. Orr. There were so many crowding about the booth that a line had to be formed, and 200 people were standing on it the greater part of the afternoon awaiting their turn to ask the questions or collect the Government literature given out regarding poultry raising.

STEADYING PRICES OF BONDS

Treasury Still Buying Limited Quantities of Liberty Issues.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Treasury is continuing to use its Liberty bond purchasing fund, but is not buying bonds on the market "in any great quantities," it was said today after a conference between Secretary Glass and Eugene Meyer, Jr., who as Director of the War Finance Corporation supervises the purchases for the Treasury.

By buying up even a small proportion of bonds thrown on the market, the Treasury hopes to keep the market price nearer par.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Price movements in stocks yesterday stood in fairly sharp contrast with the course of quotations in the cotton market, a break of $10 a bale in cotton future contracts reflecting apparently considerable disturbance of sentiment among spinners as well as speculative operations for the decline. Railroad stocks continued to make progress forward and securities as a whole gave a good account of themselves, excepting local traction bonds. Interborough Rapid Transit notes on the Curb and Brooklyn Rapid Transit 7 per cent. paper on the Stock Exchange broke down 4 points and drew renewed attention to the street railway situation. It could hardly be said that the stock market denoted a marked change of speculative opinion toward the constructive side of quotations, for neither the gains nor the volume of business was large enough for that. The observations of Chairman Kruttschnitt of the Southern Pacific before the Senate Committee gave holders of railroad securities considerable concrete information about an active railroad man's ideas of practical and effective operations of the carriers and tended to equalize a great deal of conjecture over the problem which had been aroused earlier in the week. As railroad operating and financial experts give their views in the hearing, it is to be expected that the public will acquire a better grasp on plans for the future and in this lies encouragement for an early expression of opinion, which should assist Congress in its work.

The credit situation promises to grow more interesting as the time grows near for the next Government loan. It seemed to be more than coincident that the Money Committee of the banks held a long session yesterday at the time when announcement was made of a new offering of Treasury certificates of indebtedness in anticipation of the loan. In the announcement, banks were tacitly urged to make their subscriptions as large as possible, for the reason that Government expenditures were running at an extraordinarily high rate. The outlay in December for maintaining the troops abroad, for demobilization purposes and for liquidating war contracts was in excess of $2,000,000,000 and so far this month this rate has been closely approximated. The urgent call upon the banks hardly presages any relief from current bank credit conditions and in responsible banking quarters the prediction is made that little new financing of large calibre can be put through before the loan campaign begins. From this indications point toward efforts to renew some maturing corporate obligations which fall due in the near future and the War Finance Corporation is likely to be called upon to supply assistance for one or two railroad maturities. In view of the outlook it would not be surprising if closer scrutiny of stock market loans were made from now on than has been the case even in recent months of radical restrictions.

The Bank of England's weekly statement showed a decrease of $1,280,000 in gold holdings, the first decline since the middle of last July. A decline of $3,300,000 in note circulation occurred at the same time, however, and this worked to increase slightly the proportion of reserves to liabilities, which now stands at 19.32 per cent. The British Government has evidently found the method of raising funds through a continuous offering of bonds entirely satisfactory, as evidenced in the announcement of a new issue to be opened on Feb. 1.

BRITISH ISSUE NEW BONDS.

Differ from Other Series in Lack of Conversion Privilege.

Sir Hardman Lever, representative of the British Treasury in this country, announced yesterday that a new series of "National War Bonds" would be opened for subscription by the British public on Feb. 1. The new bonds will not carry any right of conversion into past or future war loans and the issue of seven-year bonds will be discontinued. The new securities will be 5 per cent. bonds, subject to income tax, running from five to ten years, and 4 per cent. bonds of ten years maturity with income tax compounded. As in the case of the last series the issue price of the 5 per cent. bonds will be par, and of the 4 per cent. bonds 101½. The five-year 5 per cent. bonds will be redeemed at 102, the ten-year issue at 105, and the 4 per cent. bonds at par.

The chief feature differentiating the forthcoming issue from past offerings of the same character lies in the lack of a conversion privilege. Since the British authorities began continuous sales of war bonds in October, 1917, more than $5,000,000,000 has been raised.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

French 5½ Per Cents.

Now that the conversion of the United Kingdom notes has been accomplished, interest in the financial district attaches to the disposition of the French 5½ per cents. which fall due on April 1. In some quarters there is belief that some underwriting may be done here. Bankers conversant with the situation point out that as these notes are payable in New York in dollars, or at Paris at the rate of 5.75 francs to the dollar, the exchange arbitrage precludes the possibility of an operation similar to that of the United Kingdom notes. A considerable number of these notes, it is understood, have been forwarded to Paris already, and it is expected that most of the issue will be presented there. At present the arbitrage point is figured at about 105, so that for those having facilities the present price offers a small profit.

No Big Financing.

It is understood that no big private financing operations will be undertaken until the next Government loan has been disposed of, and as the offering of this issue will not be made for two months it is believed that Wall Street and the other financial centres will be very quiet until May. There are several deals which will have to be undertaken, however, among them being the Baltimore & Ohio matter, which is under discussion at the present time. This will have to be arranged by the first of the month.

Cotton's Weakness.

The cotton market experienced one of its wild days, with fluctuations extending over a range of close to 200 points. The March option broke 196 points; May lost 191 points; August, on the new crop, suffered a decline of 195 points. One had to go as far ahead as October to find a "moderate" decline, relatively speaking, which in this case was 120 points.

Russian Bonds Strong.

Reports that the Allied Peace Conference is to try to harmonize the several factions in Russian politics, gave the Broad Street Curb courage to buy the Russian "externals," and both the 5½s, and the 6½s were strong, the former going to 57 and the latter to 61. The 6½ per cents. fall due next June 10, and as the interest has been promptly paid on each due date, there are many who believe the bonds will be cashed at that time.

Iron Exports Held Up.

Iron men report that export of their product is being held back pending action by the United States Shipping Board on the question of cutting ocean freight rates to a level where offerings may be made in foreign markets which will be at actual competitive figures. There have been some tonnages shipped where the demand had been for immediate delivery regardless of price, but this have been in the minority. The trade is reported to be in a splendid position to sell iron just as soon as the freight rates are cut so that foreign market prices may be scaled.

Awaiting Controller's Approval.

It was reported in the financial district yesterday that new financing by the Southern Railway was crystalizing, but that any offering of new notes to take up the $25,000,000 issue which matures March 1 must receive the approval of Controller of the Currency. This approval, it is undrstood, will probably be forthcoming in the near future. In fact, it is was said yesterday that a number of banking institutions had been sounded in regard to participating in a syndicate for the purchase of the issue from the company and that the response had been gratifying.

Loan to Mexico Improbable.

It was the opinion among bankers yesterday that there was little probability of the Mexican Government being able to arrange a loan here. According to report, Rafael Nieto, Under Secretary of Finance in Mexico, who is on his way to this country, will endeavor to negotiate a substantial loan for the use of the Carranza Administration. Bankers who have heretofore been prominent in international transactions, point to the unsettled conditions in the Southern Republic as an obstacle to any Mexican loan. It is one of the odd features of the situation that the Mexican representative is coming here to seek a loan from the very bankers who have now allied themselves with the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, an organization which is firmly opposed to procedures recently undertaken by the Carranza Government.

Bethlehem Dividend Unchanged.

Once again Wall Street predictions have gone awry with regard to dividends. It was rumored for some time that there would be a reduction in the case of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation common shares, but the Directors yesterday declared a quarterly dividend at the yearly rate of 10 per cent. This was made up of a 1¼ per cent. regular dividend and 1¼ extra. This is the first time that the word regular has been used in connection with a dividend by this company and actually places the stock on a 5 per cent. regular basis.

Copper Men Going Abroad.

C. F. Kelley, President of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company; Walter Douglas, President of the Phelps-Dodge Company; R. L. Agassiz, President of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company, and Joseph R. Clendenin, Vice President of the American Smelting and Refining Company will leave for Europe on Saturday as a committee representing the Copper Export Association. They will be accompanied by S. R. Guggenheim, a director of the American Smelting and Refining Company, and Stephen Birch, President of the Kennecott Copper Corporation. The purpose, it is said, is to perfect plans of extension for the Copper Export Association.

Magneto Company Financed.

The first financing of a concern taken over by the Alien Property Custodian has been completed with the sale of 60,000 shares of the stock of the American Bosch Magneto Corporation to American holders. Hornblower & Weeks announce that the entire amount of stock was sold at $65 a share.

BARS INCOME TAX ON STOCK DIVIDENDS

Judge Mayer Rules They Do Not Bring In Anything with Which to Pay Tax.

CASE FOR SUPREME COURT

Collector Eisner Says the Decision Was Expected by Treasury Department.

Federal Judge Mayer yesterday dismissed the demurrer interposed by the Government to the suit of Mrs. Myrtle Harkness Macomber for the recovery of $1,342 paid by her under protest on a stock dividend of $19,577 by the Standard Oil Company of California which was charged against her as income. The dismissal of the demurrer was in fact a verdict for Mrs. Macomber, and the suit, instituted as a case to test the constitutionality of the amendment of 1916 to the income tax law, will be carried to the United States Supreme Court.

The income tax law of 1913 did not expressly refer to stock dividends, and suits instituted to recover taxes on them were successful. But the amendment of 1916 said that stock dividends should be considered as income, and it was under this amendment that the taxes were assessed and collected. One of the suits cited in the brief of Charles E. Hughes and George Welwood Murray, counsel for Mrs. Macomber, was that of Towne against Eisner, the defendant being the Collector of Internal Revenue, and was under the 1913 law.

The United States Supreme Court, in finding for the plaintiff, said that the stock dividend was capital and that "a stock dividend really takes nothing from the property of the corporation, and adds nothing to the interests of the shareholders. Its property is not diminished and their interests are not increased. The proportional interest of each shareholder remains the same. The only change is in the evidence which represents that interest, the shares and the original shares representing the same proportional interest that the original shares represented before the issue of the new ones."

In his decision Judge Mayer stated that he saw no difference between the Macomber case and the Towne case "in which the United States Supreme Court unanimously held that stock dividends were not income." Mr. Murray, commenting on the case after the argument, stated that the issue was to determine whether Congress had the power to say that white was black and black white, and that the insertion of the words "stock dividends" in the law did not in any degree affect the fact that stock dividends were not income. If the decision of Judge Mayer is upheld it will mean that all money collected by the Government since March 1, 1916, as income taxes on stock dividends by authority of the amended law will have to be returned. Previous to Jan. 1, 1916, Mrs. Macomber owned 2,200 shares of the stock of the Standard Oil Company of California. On that date she received an additional 1,100 shares, and the tax assessed on this new stock was at the rate of 18.07 per cent. of $110,000, the par value of the new shares.

During the argument in court there were present United States District Attorney Caffey, his assistant, Vincent H. Rothwell, who presented the argument for the Government. Mr. Hughes, in his argument, contended that the imposition of the tax on the new shares was a violation of those sections of the Constitution requiring that direct taxes be apportioned to the population and that it was not included within the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment permitting the taxation of incomes without apportionment. He said that Mark Eisner, the collector for the Government, had interpreted the term "cash value" as "par value," and that the figure was an arbitrary one was shown by the relative value of the stock before and after the distribution of the shares as dividend. It was contended that the stock dividends were not income within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment. Concluding his argument, Mr. Hughes said:

"It is not necessary to show what happened when the Standard Oil Company of California declared its stock dividends; it is merely sufficient to show that plaintiff has not received anything with which to pay the tax."

He also pointed out that the plaintiff was no richer through the receipt of the extra shares and that she had not realized any gain. If dividends should be paid on the new shares, then the amount received would be subject to the tax, but until that happened, he stated, she was immune from taxation under the income tax law. It was not the intention, he said, of Congress to tax a change in ownership.

"The decision in the Macomber case was expected by the Treasury Department," said Mark Eisner, Collector of Internal Revenue, last night, "and the assessment of taxes on stock dividends was continued only because of the mandatory provisions of the act of September 8, 1916. The effect of the decision upon the pending revenue bill will be felt at once. The bill now provides that surplus unnecessarily accumulated by corporations shall be taxed against the individual stockholders at surtax rates the same as if they were members of a partnership. Under the decision in the Macomber case these corporations can declare stock dividends and thus employ that surplus without rendering their stockholders liable to the high rates of taxation, and a few years hence when rates are lower they may reduce their capital stock and pay out their surplus as cash dividends to the stockholders in exchange for their stock.

"Partially to anticipate this it will be necessary for Congress to restore in a modified form the undisturbed surplus tax which was contained in the old law, so that corporations which distribute stock dividends will be taxed upon the surplus which they transferred to their capital stock account, or at least so much thereof as was earned in the taxable year. That is to say, Congress may declare that earnings transferred to capital stock account shall be taxed at a higher rate than other earnings of a corporation."

CITIES SERVICE EARNINGS.

Dividends Larger This Year and Outlook Brighter for Next.

The report of Cities Service Company earnings for the year ending Dec. 31, 1918, shows a gross income of $22,280,067, an increase of $3,027,574 over the preceding twelve months, while net income after the deduction of expenses, interest on debentures, and other interest charges is $21,486,002, an increase of more than $2,500,000 over the 1917 figures. This was equal to 5.32 times the preferred dividend, while the percentage earned on the common stock increased to 61.87 from 60.73 per cent. in the preceding year.

The dividends on the preferred stock during the year were $4,034,275, which, compared with $3,712,695 in 1917, and left a balance for 1918 available for dividends on the common stock, reserves, and surplus of $17,451,728, compared with $15,179,707 for the year before. The results reported were after reserves that are believed to be ample had been charged from the profits of all subsidiary companies for the payment of Federal taxes and other prior charges.

The earnings statement reviewed the twelve months ended with December the chief factors in the country's peace last and said that the volume of crude oil production was increased by the producing subsidiaries, while the refining subsidiaries made good records. The Empire Pipe Line Company, which is the company's chief transporting subsidiary, became the second largest carrier of crude oil in the United States so far as quantity was concerned, being exceeded only by the Prairie Pipe Line Company in the twelve-month period.

The utility subsidiaries of the company were reported to have ended the year in much better position and with a brighter outlook as the result of rate increases granted which enabled higher operating expenses to be absorbed. Storms, the influenza epidemic, and other disturbing elements were met in the course of the year, militating against the perfect operation of the oil subsidiary concerns, but the total 1918 production of the Empire Gas and Fuel Company exceeded 15,000,000 barrels of oil, which was an increase of more than 2,000,000 barrels over the 1917 figures.

TREASURY CALLS FOR MONEY

The Treasury Department informed the banks yesterday that Government expenditures were still running at an extraordinarily heavy rate and a large oversubscription of a new issue of Treasury certificates of indebtedness was necessary. Fortnightly issue of certificates will be dated Jan. 30, and will mature July 1, according to an announcement made by the Federal Reserve Bank. The paper will bear 4½ per cent. interest and will be accepted for installment payments on the next loan.

"The quota for this issue has been placed at $500,000,000," said the bank's statement, "but the Treasury Department calls attention to the fact that this figure is a minimum and is not the maximum amount desired."

The Government's outlay in December was in excess of $2,000,000,000, and is said to be continuing at this rate, although signs are not wanting that the pressure is gradually easing. The matter of financing the Government's immediate requirements was understood to be the subject of a lengthy session of the Money Committee of the banks of the Federal Reserve Bank yesterday afternoon. The meeting was attended by Albert Strauss, member of the Federal Reserve Board, who is scheduled to sail for France on Saturday in the capacity of a financial adviser to the American delegation at the Peace Conference.

BETHLEHEM STEEL HAD A RECORD YEAR

$448,000,000 Gross Business in 1918, Compared with $10,000,000 in 1905.

DROP IN THE NET EARNINGS

Profit Was 3.5 Per Cent. Last Year, Whereas in 1917 It Was 9.14 Per Cent.

The Board of Directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation yesterday declared the full year dividends on the 7 per cent. and 8 per cent. preferred stocks and a regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the A and B common shares, together with an extra dividend of 1¾ per cent. This makes the dividend on the common at the rate of 10 per cent. a year the same as has prevailed in the past, although this is the first time that there has been a differentiation in the dividend as to regular and extra. The dividends on the preferred stocks are payable quarterly, on April 1, July 1, Oct. 1, of this year, and Jan. 2, 1920, to holders of record of March 12, June 16, Sept. 15, and Dec. 16. The dividend on the A and B common shares is payable April 1 to holders of record of March 12.

In order that a comprehensive report of conditions might be made, the books of the company were theoretically closed. The gross business for 1918 is estimated to have been $448,000,000. This compares with a gross business of about $10,000,000 in 1905, the first year in which the corporation operated. The earnings of last year prior to the depreciation and similar charges, including taxation, amounted to $52,000,000. The net earnings, after deductions for depreciation and amortization due to the abnormal conditions resulting from the war, amounted to about $16,000,000, equivalent to 21 per cent. on the common stock of the company after the payment of dividends on the two preferred stocks. The net earnings represent a profit of about 3.5 per cent. on the gross shipments of the year, practically all of which went to the United States and its allies. In 1917 the gross sales of the Bethlehem Corporation amounted to $298,929,530, and the total net earnings were $58,979,360. The net income for that year was $27,320,735, this representing a profit on gross sales of about 9.14 per cent., as compared with 3.5 per cent. last year. The gross sales of 1918 are the highest ever recorded in the history of the company.

In commenting on the company's affairs Eugene G. Grace, the President, said that the company was sending men to every part of the world to investigate shipping conditions and called attention to the fact that shipbuilding was one of activities. First hand reports on conditions, he said, were more desirable than mere hearsay. With regard to the plans for turning the company's war plants to peace lines he held that nothing definite had been worked out as yet, but that a number of objectives were under consideration, among them the manufacture of agricultural implements and machinery. When asked concerning the recently so-called report that Charles M. Schwab had said industry was facing a period of depression, Mr. Grace said that he believed Mr. Schwab intended the use of the word depression to mean depression only in the immediate future, and added that every one knew that Mr. Schwab was always an optimist when viewing the future in its large sense.

"During the year," said Mr. Grace, "there was expended for extensions to plant, $27,866,000, leaving $20,000,000 to be expended during the year 1919 to complete the corporation's construction program. This expenditure is mainly for the completion of the commercial steel plant at Sparrows Point, Md., which will result in making productive new and additional steel capacity, representing an investment of $50,000,000. This will give to the Bethlehem Steel Corporation an annual capacity for steel output of more than 3,000,000 tons with finishing plants of sufficient capacity to convert this entire tonnage into commercial products, thus completing our provision for the great reduction in Government orders and the practical cessation of the manufacture of munitions.

"The present uncertainty as to the policy of the Government regarding cancellation of some of our contracts makes it impossible to state accurately the amount of unfilled orders on the books as of Jan. 1, 1919. After deducting orders definitely canceled by the Government and making liberal allowances for others we have any reason to expect will be canceled, there will remain unfilled orders of from $300,000,000 to $350,000,000. Included in these unfilled orders is a large amount of shipbuilding work for both the Navy Department and Emergency Fleet Corporation. While the returns on shipbuilding contracts are but a small percentage on the cost, the large volume of this business should insure substantial aggregate earnings for the coming year and afford an element of stability to the operations of the corporation independent of the business conditions in the general steel trade.

"It is our opinion that for the immediate future there will be no large buying movement in the steel market. The whole country must stop and take an account of stock, so to speak, and start anew putting our whole economic structure on a normal peace-time basis. We should then see again a period of unusual prosperity supported by an era of construction.

"The finances of the corporation are in good condition. Funds for plant improvements were provided by the note issue of last Summer, and all other requirements for the present year, including maturities of existing obligations, are provided for. During the period of the European war, Bethlehem shipped to our Government and its allies:

Forgings for guns, (shipped for assembling in other plants and arsenals, largely in France,) 85,027,197 pounds, equivalent in finished guns to about	11,000
Finished gun carriages, limbers, and other vehicles	7,582
Finished naval gun mounts	599
Complete field gun ammunition, rounds	16,477,876
Projectiles for ammunition	1,710,579
Air flask forgings for torpedoes, pounds	9,817,311
Armor plate, pounds	40,400,533

"This represents, as we are reliably informed, about the following percentages of the entire output of the country during the period of the war: Finished guns, 60 per cent.; gun forgings, 65 per cent.; complete ammunition, 40 per cent.

Work for Governments.

"At the close of the war our shipments of gun forgings to the French, (who were finishing and assembling guns for our army,) were sufficient for about 900 guns per month, and our shipments of ammunition to foreign Governments reached 1,000,000 rounds per month. Meanwhile the shipbuilding plants have been busily engaged on work for the navy and for the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Since the United States Government's declaration of war, we have delivered an aggregate of 625,000 deadweight tons of merchant shipping, representing about 22 per cent. of the output of the entire country during this period.

"During the past year the corporation has delivered to the navy, in addition to sixteen submarines, twenty-six torpedo boat destroyers, more than one-half of the deliveries by all of the shipbuilding plants of the country, and has launched and fitted out for early delivery thirty-six additional destroyers."

Appropriate resolutions were adopted by the Board of Directors on the death of George F. Sheldon, who, from the formation of the company, was a member of the board.

COTTON PRICES DROP TO NEW LOW RECORD

Decline Due More to Paucity of Demand Than to Selling.

JANUARY DOWN 100 POINTS

The cotton market continued its downward course in yesterday's session and, at the low levels for the day, several options stood at the lowest prices seen this season. The break, while rather extensive, was not as sensational as its extent would appear to indicate and was apparently caused more by an abnormal paucity of demand than by any alarmingly aggressive selling. This paucity of demand was, in fact, the real feature of the day, and the only reason quotations were not marked down further seemed to be the unwillingness of sellers to take less for their contracts. In other words, there was no noticeable support, even at the low levels.

Liverpool prices were somewhat disappointing, and while our market did fairly well at the start, there was a decidedly weak undertone which promised ill for values. It did not take long for this promise to materialize, and by the middle of the morning the decline was in full swing. Prices at that time for January were down 100 points or more and selling was very general. A good deal of supply came from Liverpool, where labor uncertainties are becoming acute, while local ring traders sold on the supposition that textile troubles would soon become uncomfortably oppressive. The export movement, which at the moment shows improvement over recent reports, is still highly uncertain. All in all, the trade finds much of a bearish character and very little of a bullish.

In a report issued yesterday, the Census Bureau placed the amount of cotton ginned from the 1918 crop to Jan. 16, at 11,051,845 bales, figuring round as half bales. Last year to the same date the ginnings were 10,570,783 bales, and in the year before they were 11,187,712 bales. This was regarded as bearish, as the National Ginners Association estimates showed only 10,900,000 bales.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Industrials were steady and the rails strong in the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final prices were below the high levels of the session, and, in some instances, the reaction of the late afternoon made for slight losses. Good buying orders around midday made for general advancement, and the list recorded best values in the early afternoon. Trading was moderately active, but speculative interest was centred chiefly in a small group of stocks.

SAYS M'ADOO VETOED EXPERTS' FINDINGS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—It was in spite of the advice of his experts that William G. McAdoo as Director General of Railroads insisted upon the standardization of locomotives, Julius Kruttschnitt, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today. Railway executives, testifying at the hearing on the bill to extend the time of Government control over the roads to five years, have criticised this policy of the former Director General and insisted that almost every railroad needed its peculiar type of engine.

Mr. Kruttschnitt said he understood all the members of the committee appointed by Mr. McAdoo to consider the matter reported against standardization. Samuel Vauclain, Vice President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, was Chairman of the committee, and only a short time previous, Mr. Kruttschnitt testified, Al B. Johnson, President of the company, had said the idea was not practicable.

"I understood that the committee members had no discretion in the premises," said the witness, adding that he believed the experts could do nothing except go ahead with the standardization.

Reduction of operating expenses through elimination of unnecessary trains and other methods was discussed by Mr. Kruttschnitt. He said that anything that reduced operating cost would defer the time when the roads would have to apply for higher rates.

"That's an implication," Senator Cummins commented, "that all the railroads could be owned by one corporation, or by the United States."

"Common ownership, either private or Government, would eliminate every incentive to provide increased service," Mr. Kruttschnitt replied.

The witness explained that the railroad executives recommended pooling of traffic, so that, under the supervision of some public authority, business percentage between terminal points could be assigned on a basis of past performances.

"Under properly supervised pooling arrangements there would be an incentive to improvement to the end that the carriers, with a small amount of business, would receive a larger allowance at the next revision of the arrangement," he said.

Returning to the matter of new equipment furnished by the Railroad Administration, Mr. Kruttschnitt said that, although for the five years preceding Federal control, his road had plenty of equipment, and received $1,250,000 profit in renting cars to other lines, the Administration not only diverted tonnage and thus produced a surplus of equipment, but allotted to the Southern Pacific 4,000 cars of a type it could not economically use. The cars had not been built, the witness said.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

EGGS.—7,733 cases. While arrivals continue lighter than heretofore, the weather conditions in producing sections are favorable, advices indicate an increase in collections in some sections, limits are being removed from accumulations in store, and the offerings are sufficient to force prices to a still lower level, the decline amounting to about 2c. a dozen on the leading grades of Western and Southern eggs. Storage eggs quiet; most of the distributing trade have abandoned their use, and some lots offered on the open market find few takers, with prices ruling in buyers' favor. White eggs more plenty, but they are still in pretty good demand, and prices were sustained. Some lots of Californias are coming in, however, some of which are not as yet fairly on the market. These may weaken the situation later. TO THE HOLDERS OF

American Writing Paper Company

First Mortgage Sinking Fund 5% Gold Bonds

Due July 1, 1919

Over $8,800,000 or 80% of the $11,000,000 Bonds have been deposited under the Deposit Agreement dated October 10, 1918.

The Committee again calls attention to the fact that the proposed new issue of first mortgage bonds must be taken by the present bondholders, as the Company has found it impossible to effect an underwriting of the issue. Therefore, unless the plan become operative—and it can only be operative if deposits are made—it must fail and the bondholders will be faced with the uncertainty as to what the situation will be on July 1, 1919, when the present bonds mature.

The success of the plan is of such vital importance to the present bondholders that the Committee has extended the time for deposit of bonds. Deposits will be received by the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston, Central Union Trust Company of New York, or Springfield Safe Deposit & Trust Company of Springfield, Mass., until the close of business on Thursday, February 20, 1919. No charge of any kind will be made to bondholders who deposit their bonds on or before said date. Deposited bonds must have the July 1, 1919, coupon attached. Negotiable Certificates of Deposit, listed on the New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, will be delivered by the Depositaries.

If the plan is declared operative, one of the immediate advantages to depositing bondholders will be the receipt of interest on July 1, 1919, at the rate of 7% against 5% on the present bonds, i. e. $35 instead of $25.

Copies of the Refunding Plan and of the Deposit Agreement may be obtained from either of the depositaries or from the Secretary of the Committee.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT COMPANY

A Receiver of all the property of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company having been appointed by the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, the undersigned have, at the request of the holders of a large amount of the company's stock, consented to act as a committee for the protection of the interests of all stockholders who shall become parties to an agreement dated January 2, 1919, copies of which may be obtained from the Depositary, the Sub-Depositary, or the Secretary of the Committee.

This crisis in the affairs of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company demands, in the judgment of the Committee, prompt and concerted action on the part of the stockholders in order to secure their proper protection, and in order that the representation of the stockholders shall carry the greatest possible weight.

Stockholders are, therefore, requested to deposit their certificates of stock with MERCANTILE TRUST & DEPOSIT COMPANY, DEPOSITARY, 115 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, or with PEOPLE'S TRUST COMPANY, Sub-Depositary, 181 MONTAGUE STREET, Brooklyn, in return for which the Depositary will issue negotiable certificates of deposit. Application will be made to list the certificates of deposit on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Committee has limited to March 3, 1919, at 3 o'clock P. M. the period during which deposits of stock may be made, after which no deposits will be received except under such conditions and penalties as the Committee may impose.

The assignment on the back of all deposited stock certificates must be executed in blank, dated, properly witnessed, and have the requisite stock transfer tax stamps attached thereto. In order to protect the Committee against unauthorized transfers, the endorsement must be guaranteed by a member of the New York Stock Exchange, or by a bank or trust company in the City of New York, or by a bank or trust company having a correspondent in that city.

Copies of a circular letter addressed by the Committee to the stockholders may be obtained from the Depositary, the Sub-Depositary, or the Secretary of the Committee.

Dated January 22, 1919.

MR. BLANK, who was referred to us by one of our clients, needed $25,000 before the close of business the next day. A payment due from a large corporation engaged in Government work in Philadelphia was held up because of delay in locating the goods shipped them.
We at once sent one of our accountants to the neighboring city to adjust the difficulty, and within a few minutes after receiving a message that the goods had been located, Mr. Blank had our check for $25,000. If prompt service interests you, confer with us.

Good Out-of-Town Orders.

Manufacturers of high-grade misses' and juniors' suits and coats selling to the retail trade are receiving some very substantial orders from the salesmen in various sections of the country. In the local trade there is very little activity, and buying is not expected to start until next month. Other firms which are selling lower-priced lines to the jobbing trade claim that business in the South is good, but on the Pacific Coast and in the East it is rather slow.

Meshbags in Good Demand.

Owing to the low stocks of ladies' gold and silver mesh bags in the retail jewelry stores throughout the country, the makers are receiving some big filling-in orders. The past season was one of the best ever experienced by firms in this line, and the present indications are that this year will be equally as good. It was said yesterday morning that the road business is exceptionally good, and the only difficulty at present is the question of filling the orders on hand.

More Soft Collars Being Sold.

Orders that are now being received by manufacturers of men's collars show that there is more of a sale for soft collars. According to one of the firms in this line, the sale of these goods a short time ago was on a basis of about one to two in favor of the stiff linen collars. At present, however, it is about equally divided. From investigations made by some of the makers it was found that the haberdashers who display a complete line of goods are selling more than those who show just a few styles.

For Women's Neckwear.

All the smart outing materials which are to be worn by the women this coming Summer are being made up by the neckwear manufacturers into their wares. Among the most popular of these are the new rough sport silks. These handsome goods, which retail at between $7 and $8 a yard, are made into waistcoat effects with rather broad turn-over collar, the V or a little square at the front filled in with an entre deux of insertion and lace. Outing stocks with tie, and the ties alone, are made of the same material.

Cretonnes Moving Slowly.

Although there is more of a demand for cretonnes in the ocal trade at present, out-of-town buyers are rather skeptical regarding the market conditions, and are therefore buying very conservatively. One of the local firms said yesterday that even job lots are moving very slowly at reduced prices. Other firms say that advance orders have been taken for delivery during the next month, but for the most part the buying is rather light. The export business, however, is very good, especially to Australia and South America.

Gray Goods Prices Weaken.

Yesterday's break in the cotton market was reflected in the transactions in gray goods, which showed further recessions. The dealings reported were fairly large, but the market closed weak with an inclination on the part of first hands to shade prices. What constructions were sold were for delivery within the next three or four weeks. In print-cloths sales were made of 39-inch goods of 72-76s at 14 cents, and of 68-72s at 12 cents. In 38½-inch fabrics 64-60s went at 10 cents, and 60-48s at 9 cents. In sheetings sales were reported of 36-inch 5.50s at 9¼ cents. There were also sales of pocketings, fine goods and twills at from one to two cents below the quotations.

Japanese Bronze Cats.

The cat is an animal which has always been given more or less mystic qualities, and it has been supposed to bring good luck or bad luck, as has happened to be the opinion in different generations and among different people. Tomil, a sculptor of note, of Kobe, Japan, has designed a sphinxlike cat from a composite of different felines, the wild and the domestic. This is cast in large size, and is one of the most decorative pieces of imported modern Japanese bronze. The same cat in a small size is used for book ends. The latter wholesale for about $10, and the large ones at $200.

Raw Silk Summary.

In the Yokohama raw silk market Sinshiu No. 1 has declined to 1,450 yen, according to cables received by H. L. Gwalter & Co., but a fair business developed at the lower level, sales on Tuesday aggregating 800 bales. Reelers are reported as not anxious to go on at these prices, which mean a big loss to them on their production cost, and any renewal of demand is likely to be followed by a quick recovery of values. Stocks are estimated at about 32,000 bales. Direct cable communication with Canton and Shanghai is still interrupted but the market at the former is reported dull, while that at the latter is quiet but steady. The Italian market remains lifeless. Locally, the transactions are limited to the most pressing needs of the mills, pending the adjustment of labor troubles.

Where Cheap Fans Go.

Modern improvements and modern amusements have knocked the inexpensive paper fan business into something quite different from what it started, the fan importers say. In places of public amusement, parlor cars, and even the homes, the electric fan and other methods are used for cooling the atmosphere, and the individual fan is not needed. In these days, too, women are much more out of doors automobiling, playing golf, and doing other things where a fan would be a ludicrous accessory. Large quantities of fans are still sold, but north of the Mason and Dixon line they go to hotels and big spectacular shows, where they are used for souvenirs. They are sold by the crate, come in pretty designs, each in five different colors, and wholesale at from something over a cent to 5 cents apiece. There is nothing distinctly new brought out in them, and they vary slightly in style from year to year. South of Mason and Dixon's line there is a larger sale for individual use. Expensive fans are strong in ostrich feathers in decided colors, and cost from $75 to $150.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A desk set was presented to Charles L. Bernheimer, retiring President of the Converters' Association, at a dinner on Wednesday evening at the Plaza Hotel. Julius Siegbert, the newly-elected President, acted as toastmaster.

Joseph Lehmann, who has just been discharged from the army after foreign service with the rank of Captain, has become traveling representative of the Adwerth Manufacturing Corporation, 90 Franklin Street.

Manufacturers of house dresses, who recently formed an association to promote sales, voted yesterday unanimously to discontinue their project and affiliate with the Associated Dress Industries of America. This gives the latter body fifty additional members.

EXPORTS DROP A LITTLE.

But Statistics for 1918 Show Advance in Imports Over 1917.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—America's exports during the year 1918 amounted to $6,150,000,000, or $83,000,000 below the total for the preceding year and more than double the value of imports. The import total was $3,031,000,000, compared with $2,952,000,000 in 1917.

Heavy exports in December brought the total well beyond early estimates. During December, the first full month after the signing of the armistice, exports reached a total of $566,000,000, an increase over the $522,000,000 recorded for November, although not up to the high mark of $600,000,000 for December, 1917.

Imports for December were low, being $211,000,000 against $251,000,000 for November and $228,000,000 for December of the previous year.

Imports as well as exports of gold continued to decrease, the imports amounting to $62,000,000 in 1918, against $582,000,000 in 1917, and the exports to $41,000,000 and $372,000,000 in the same years.

Imports of silver increased from $[illegible],000,000 in the calendar year 1917 to $[illegible],000,000 in 1918. The exports of silver during December, 1918, amounted to $[illegible],000,000, a larger amount than in any month during the last three years. For the calendar year exports of silver amounted to $253,000,000 in 1918, against $84,000,000 in 1917.

Modern Chinese Porcelains.

A large demand for modern Chinese porcelains began the year previous to the war. This has continued partially because there has not been an opportunity to obtain modern porcelains of other countries, but largely because the modern reproductions of the old Chinese porcelain are beautiful, both in color and design, and are comparatively inexpensive. The present demand for the solid colors has come in with the increased use of Colonial furniture, and since reproductions of old chintzes for draperies have taken the place of solid tone velours. With the latter the five-tone porcelains in landscape, flower and figure designs were popular, and the hawthorne blues and whites. Solid colors, deep tones, or green coral, turquoise or orange go better with figure hangings and covers. The modern porcelains reproduce the old shades and colors.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Pressure is low and falling over the Middle Atlantic States and the St. Lawrence Valley, and an extensive area of low barometer covers the Northwest and has its centre over Alberta, Canada. During the last 24 hours there were rains in practically every State east of the Mississippi River and in the Pacific States, except Southern California. In all other parts of the country the weather remained fair.

A storm off the Virginia Capes is moving rapidly north-northeastward and increasing rapidly in intensity.

There will be rains and snows, followed by clearing weather, Friday and fair weather Saturday in New York and New England. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi the weather will be fair Friday and Saturday, except that snow is probable Saturday in the upper lake region.

Temperature will be lower Friday throughout the Atlantic States, and it will rise Friday night in the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the upper lake region.

Winds for Friday and Saturday along the North Atlantic Coast will be strong east, shifting to west, probably reaching gale force, rain and snow; Middle Atlantic Coast, strong west winds, probably of gale force, rain, followed by clearing; South Atlantic Coast, fresh west, fair.

FORECAST TODAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York—Snow or rain in the interior, and rain followed by clearing on the coast Friday, colder Friday; Saturday fair.

Southern New England—Rain, followed by clearing and colder Friday, Saturday probably fair.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Partly cloudy and colder Friday, Saturday fair.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 44; for the corresponding date last year it was 20; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 30.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 43, at 8 P. M. it was 47. Maximum temperature 48 degrees at 10 P. M.; minimum 41 degrees at 1:30 A. M. Humidity 88 per cent. at 8 A. M., 94 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.15 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 29.67 inches.

Public recognition of a magazine policy that is right

Over 1,500,000 copies monthly

ONLY one magazine in the entire woman's magazine field has from the very beginning based its policy on the recognition of women's widening interests—Pictorial Review.

Years ago, Pictorial Review sensed the direction in which women were advancing, responded instantly, was at hand to champion and encourage.

The American woman herself, has answered how right this was! Pictorial Review's price has now been 20 cents a copy for eight months. Yet today its circulation is greater than at any time in its history. This growth has established its leadership among American women's magazines.

Sometimes the claims made by publishers are, by necessity, a matter of opinion. It is especially significant, therefore, that Pictorial Review's development to leadership is based upon provable fact.

The figures below, which are statements of net paid circulation made to the Audit Bureau of Circulation by the Publishers represented, tell their own story.

Pictorial Review	1,156,923	1,265,529	1,373,727	1,418,433	261,510 gain
Ladies' Home Journal . . .	1,614,128	1,602,790	1,643,058	1,590,828	23,300 loss
Woman's Home Companion	1,184,606	1,089,323	1,051,848	1,001,410	183,196 loss

If you will study the above table you will see the great change which has come in the circulations of the publications mentioned from January 1917 to June 1918 (which are the last figures furnished by these publications to the A. B. C.).

You will see that Pictorial Review leads the Woman's Home Companion by over 400,000 copies per month. That it leads The Delineator by over 600,000 copies per month.

As to the Ladies' Home Journal—in January of 1917 the total net paid circulation of the Journal was 457,205 copies greater than that of Pictorial Review. By June of 1918 it was only 172,395 copies greater.

LOOKING into the figures further, however, this interesting and very significant fact comes to light.

The difference in the circulations of Pictorial Review and the Ladies' Home Journal in the UNITED STATES PROPER is shown to be less than 3½ per cent.

For the June 1918 issue, Pictorial Review's net paid circulation in the United States was 1,390,765 copies.

The last itemized statement furnished by the Ladies' Home Journal to the A. B. C. is for the May 1918 issue. This showed a total net paid circulation of 1,477,577 in the United States, which is only 86,812 copies more U. S. A. circulation than Pictorial Review had in its June 1918 issue.

As the June issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, according to their own statement, had a sale of 41,323 copies less than they had in May, it is very apparent that if the June issues of both magazines were compared, the difference in the two circulations for the United States proper, would figure proportionately as 49,398.

For eight months now, Pictorial Review's price has been 20 cents a copy, and yet today its circulation is greater than ever before in its history. The Ladies' Home Journal sells for 15 cents a copy.

ANOTHER condition which will be of interest to advertisers is the SUBSCRIPTION CIRCULATION tendencies shown by these various magazines.

The figures given are for the circulation in the United States only. The issues indicated for 1918 are the last ones on which itemized statements of circulation have been furnished to the A. B. C. by the publishers represented.

U. S. Subscription circulation as reported by the publishers to the A. B. C. for the issues indicated

For 1917 the figures quoted are for issues which most closely correspond in the A. B. C. reports to those furnished by the publishers for 1918

PICTORIAL REVIEW
LADIES' HOME JOURNAL
June 1917, 756,246	May 1918 issue, 743,858	Loss, 12,388
WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION
March 1917, 862,660	September 1918 issue, 742,273	Loss, 120,387
DELINEATOR
June 1917, 805,145	June 1918 issue, 672,740	Loss, 132,405

While the foregoing tables will give Advertisers a better understanding as to the changed conditions in the position of the various women's magazines, there is still one other factor that is even more gratifying to its publishers than any of the others:—

During its entire history, Pictorial Review has always gone ahead—in circulation, advertising lineage, and advertising revenue. Even during the war period, in spite of the fact that every Government rule for conservation of paper was fulfilled, Pictorial Review's circulation kept consistently on an upward trend.

With this as a foundation, we are justified in promising, to advertisers and advertising agents, much greater things in the future from Pictorial Review than it has shown even in the past.

AMERICA'S GREATEST WOMAN'S MAGAZINE

Since the above statement was prepared, the Ladies' Home Journal announces an increase of 160,172 copies in net sale over the June 1918 issue. The sale of Pictorial Review is now over 180,000 copies greater than in its June 1918 issue, and this despite the fact that the 20 cent price has been in effect since the July 1918 number. The Ladies' Home Journal sells for 15 cents a copy.

HINES ASKS NEW $750,000,000 FUND TO FINANCE ROADS

Estimates 1918 and 1919 Needs at That Sum, Beside Former Revolving Fund.

PART OF IT TO BE REPAID.

$368,193,096 to be Advanced in Covering the Cost of Improvements.

$196,000,000 LOSS MADE UP

Director Says Amount Fixed Will Be Required Regardless of Congressional Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Walker D. Hines, the new Director General of Railroads, today submitted to Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, a supplementary estimate for an appropriation by Congress of $750,000,000, to be immediately available, to enable the Railroad Administration to finance the Federal railroad situation until the end of 1919.

This appropriation is sought from Congress in excess of the $500,000,000 which was granted in the Railroad Control act, and which was called the revolving fund.

The Railroad Administration has not yet confirmed the statement that preliminary estimates indicated that there would be a deficit of $250,000,000 in the operation of railroads, mainly due to the wage increases in 1919, but the official announcement that another revolving fund of $750,000,000 was wanted from Congress was sufficient confirmation of the accuracy of the forecast that the original $500,000,000 revolving fund was about to vanish.

Director General Hines, in his letter to Secretary Glass, shows that it will take $881,806,904 for the Railroad Administration to settle its accounts for 1918. After applying the original appropriation of $500,000,000 made by Congress in the revolving fund toward this settlement, there will still be needed $381,806,904. From the appropriation of $750,000,000 asked Mr. Hines proposes to meet the requirement of $381,806,904, which will leave a balance of $368,193,096 toward meeting the capital expenditures for 1919.

Alternative to Rate Increase.

In a Washington dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES, printed last Monday morning, the statement was made that "the cost of Federal operation of the railroads, mainly as a result of higher wages, has reached the point where it may be necessary" for the Director General "to seek a further rise in freight rates to meet the great increase." On Monday afternoon Mr. Hines issued a statement in which he denied that the Railroad Administration was "giving any consideration to any increase in the present basis of rates."

It was pointed out in the Washington dispatch to THE TIMES, printed on Monday, that if three of the five ways of meeting the deficit were not adopted—these three being reduction of wages, operating economies, and increased volume of traffic—there were two remaining methods. These alternatives were to raise freight and passenger rates or ask Congress to make a large direct appropriation. The action taken by the Director General shows that instead of meeting the 1919 deficit out of higher rates, the alternative of a direct appropriation has been adopted.

It was pointed out that the request for an appropriation of $750,000,000 additional for Federal railroad financing was made on the day when the Senate passed the bill calling for an appropriation of $100,000,000 for feeding famished peoples in Europe, and at a time when the Senate Conference Committee was considering a bill under which the Government hopes to be able to obtain $6,000,000,000 of revenue from higher taxes, and only a few weeks before the Treasury Department launches its campaign for the Victory Loan of $5,000,000,000 or $6,000,000,000 more.

Text of Hines Letter.

Mr. Hines's letter to Secretary Glass reads:

Jan. 24, 1919.

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

I have the honor to submit herewith a supplementary estimate in the sum of $750,000,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended, and to be added to and considered a part of the "revolving fund" provided for in Section 6 of the act approved March 21, 1918 entitled, "An Act to Provide for the Operation of Transportation Systems While Under Federal Control, for the Just Compensation of Their Owners and for Other Purposes."

This additional sum would be expended in the same manner and for the same purpose and under the same conditions as the amount appropriated in the above-mentioned section.

When the Railroad Administration shall have settled its accounts for the year 1918, the result will be substantially as follows:

1. The Railroad Administration had, cash on hand at the end of the calendar year, 1918, $247,100,000.

This represents approximately the working cash capital partly in the central treasury at Washington, but principally in the hands of the Federal Treasurers of the Railroad Administration throughout the country. This represents much less than one

Berlin Says Germans Will Man Relief Ships

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 23.—The Berlin Zeitung am Mittag publishes the following:

"The Entente's provisional plan for supplying foodstuffs to Germany is on the basis of the delivery of 200,000 tons of wheat and 70,000 tons of fat. With regard to the question of the Entente's and Germany's mercantile marine, the only thing so far discussed at Treves is the placing of Germany's whole tonnage at the disposal of the Interallied General Commission for Provisioning. The German ships remain German property and will be manned by German crews so far as this is not made impossible by Bolshevist movements among the men."

MONEY-BORROWING BAN NOW LIFTED

Restrictions in Local Market Removed, Also on Money Lent on Stocks.

EXCHANGE TO GET REPORTS

Members Will Record Their Borrowings Until the Next Liberty Loan Closes.

At a meeting of the Sub-Committee on Money of the local Liberty Loan Committee, held at the Federal Reserve Bank yesterday afternoon, it was decided to remove the restrictions which have been in force on the money borrowings for stock market purposes for some months past. It was also decided to terminate the $200,000,000 "money pool," notice to which effect will reach the members of the pool this morning.

The Stock Exchange authorities are requested to continue to receive from members the daily reports of their borrowings until after the next Liberty Loan is placed.

"Last December when the arrangement whereby the New York banks have been furnishing funds to stabilize rates on loans on Stock Exchange collateral was about to expire," said a statement issued by the committee, "the committee inquired whether the Treasury Department wished an extension of the arrangement then in force, and were requested by it to continue their operations in aid of the Government's financial requirements.

"Acting in accordance with the wish of the Treasury, thus expressed, the Sub-Committee on Money arranged with the New York banks to continue the arrangement then existing until after the next Government loan, and with the authorities of the Stock Exchange to continue exercising control of the loan account to prevent its expansion in the aggregate.

"This week, however, the officials of the Stock Exchange, in a written communication to the Money Committee, having stated that the conditions have so changed that 'there is now nothing to indicate the probability of a speculative movement which would absorb large amounts of money,' the sub-committee on Money at its meeting today gave full consideration to this statement and after consultation with and the approval of the Treasury Department reached the following conclusions:

1.—That control by the Stock Exchange Committee may for the present be suspended.

2.—That the Stock Exchange authorities be requested to continue to receive from members of the Exchange daily reports of their borrowings until after the next Liberty Loan is placed.

3.—That the definite arrangements made with a large group of New York banks to furnish funds for Stock Exchange loans, if and as required, should now be terminated.

"The Money Committee desires to acknowledge and record its appreciation of the hearty co-operation which the members of the Stock Exchange and the New York banks have given it during the past months, and feels confident that should it hereafter become necessary, in the interest of Government financing, to re-establish the control of money for Stock Exchange loans and for the stabilization of money rates, the Stock Exchange authorities and the New York banks will again unite, with a patriotic purpose, to lend full support to the Treasury Department."

Stock Exchange men have been more or less restless and have insisted that the general financial and political situation is now such as to make unnecessary the very strict supervision which the committee has maintained.

However, it was said yesterday by bankers that the stock market will not be allowed to "run wild." There will still be supervision of loans which, while not the work of a special committee, will, nevertheless, be effective in checking any disposition toward widespread public speculation in securities. The individual institutions will continue to limit the amounts they will be willing to offer in the collateral demand market, and it is understood that some of them have been gradually reducing the loans of this character, and will continue to curtail offerings, giving preference to commercial demands, rather than allowing the stock market to absorb additional sums.

In Stock Exchange circles there is a belief that the most satisfactory control of the loan situation is through the automatic operations of the rate of interest. There has been no end of complaint over the system now abandoned, which, it was contended, did not operate equitably and was not economic. In fact, Stock Exchange authorities have maintained consistently that the best regulation was through the operation of a free market, with the rate of interest governing borrowings, and warning the Street of changes in the loan situation.

The Money Committee came into being in the early part of September, 1917, as a sub-committee of the New York Liberty Loan Committee. It consisted of Benjamin Strong, Chairman; Gates W. McGarrah, Vice Chairman; Frank A. Vanderlip, James S. Alexander, Jackson Reynolds, Albert H. Wiggin, James N. Wallace, Walter E. Frew and Charles H. Sabin. It was designed to supervise stock market borrowings so as to prevent an overspeculation in securities during the war period. Virtually all the banks and trust companies in the metropolitan district were requested to furnish the committee with data on the volume of call loans and the amount of balances of out-of-town institutions.

The Money Pool, formed as an adjunct to the Money Committee, represented a sum reported at approximately $200,000,000. This money was subscribed by the local banks and trust companies and was loaned in the open market at times when conditions demanded heroic action. During the last Liberty Loan campaign an amount said to be in the neighborhood of $50,000,000 was loaned. At another time, it was reported that as much as $90,000,000 had been advanced in the market by the Money Pool.

Seymour L. Cromwell Cables to Paris, Refusing to Believe the Report.

BORDEAUX, Jan. 24.—Misses Gladys and Dorothea Cromwell, sisters, of New York leaped from the rail of the French steamer La Lorraine as the steamer was in the Garonne River bound for New York today. Both were drowned. The bodies have not been recovered.

Both the young women belonged to the American Red Cross and were returning home. A letter found in their stateroom and addressed to the commanding officer of their Red Cross unit informed him of their intention "to end it all."

The Misses Cromwell are said to have belonged to a prominent New York family. They had spent much time at the front and friends said they had complained of being tired physically and mentally.

The steamer was opposite the Christopher Light when the young women leaped into the sea.

The Cromwell sisters were twins, 22 years old. They had been in the service of the Red Cross since February, 1918, most of the time at Chalons-sur-Marne, where they were engaged in canteen work. For several months they were within range of the Germans guns and in the midst of constant airplane raids.

When the canteen closed the sisters entered the evacuation hospitals, where they continued work under high pressure. Miss Barnett, the immediate superior officer of the Misses Cromwell, told The Associated Press that they were the best liked and the most devoted workers she had. Miss Barnett believes that the reaction from the long strain and high nervous tension under bombardments caused the young women to become despondent. They appeared to be cheerful and happy when they left Paris, she said.

[There is apparently an error in the date of the above dispatch or in the name of the ship. La Lorraine was reported as sailing from Bordeaux on Jan. 19.]

Brother Doubts the Report.

The dispatch from Bordeaux telling that the Misses Cromwell had committed suicide caused a shock in social circles yesterday. The young women were members of one of the prominent New York families, and have been active in social life since they made their début on Dec. 4, 1916.

Seymour L. Cromwell, their brother, who is a banker and broker with offices at 36 Broad Street, said last night at his residence, 169 East Seventy-fourth Street, that he did not believe the report, and that the evidence was not sufficient to confirm it. He said that he

Britain Would Leave Colonies for Consideration of League

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Reuter's Paris correspondent says that he has been given to understand that Great Britain is willing to relegate such problems as Mesopotamia, Palestine, and the German colonies to a League of Nations, as soon as that body is formed, in order to avoid wasting the time of the Peace Conference.

Thus, says the correspondent, it is apparent that Great Britain is not desirous of making any demands for territory incompatible with the principles of a League of Nations.

LISTS AMERICANS AS PACIFISTS

Senate Committee Puts Sixty-two Well-Known Men and Women Into Record.

ELIMINATED SOME NAMES.

Roster Furnished by Military Intelligence Service Included More Than 100.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—There was placed today in the record of the Senate Committee which is investigating German propoganda the names of sixty-two men and women who have been recorded as active in movements which did not help the United States when the country was fighting the Central Powers. The original list contained more than 100 names, and about 50 per cent. of them were eliminated as a result of an executive session of the committee.

The various organizations named include the most prominent of the so-called pacifist and radical movements in this country. The names now in the Senate records are those of clergymen, professors, lawyers, writers, Socialists, labor leaders, architects, an I. W. W. agitator, and one former publisher of a New York newspaper.

The list was originally submitted by Archibald E. Stevenson of the Military Intelligence Service, who brought to the attention of the committee that there was such a list in existence when testifying regarding Bolshevist, socialistic, and other radical movements in the United States. Mr. Stevenson called it a "Who's Who in Pacifism and Radicalism," and Senator Nelson of Minnesota asked that it be made a Federal record.

A large number of universities and colleges are represented in the list, among them Columbia University, Barnard College, the College of the City of New York, Cornell University, Harvard, Princeton, Leland Stanford, Jr., University, University of Pennsylvania, Wellesley College, Tufts College, Swarthmore, Haverford College, University of Chicago, and the Universities of California and Texas. New York City is largely represented.

Ames Plachot Named.

The list got into the record as the result of a few questions that were asked Mr. Stevenson by Senator King of Utah. Mr. Stevenson had been testifying regarding the war activities of the various pacifist and radical organizations, a large number of them having actively engaged, he said, in opposing the enforcement of the military laws of this country. He had named Amos Pinchot as one of the men who had been active in some of these organizations.

"If Mr. Pinchot tried to obstruct the draft law, I do not see why he should not be prosecuted the same as other people," Senator King remarked. "Have

All Enlisted Men Allowed to Stay in Army Until They Find Civilian Employment

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—To solve the problem of unemployed discharged soldiers, the War Department has ordered that no man be discharged from the army against his desire until such time as he can obtain employment in civil life.

It was announced today that orders had been telegraphed to all department and division commanders, at Secretary Baker's direction, to retain all men who desired to remain temporarily in the service without prejudice to their subsequent discharge to take employment. The order follows:

"All commanding officers will take steps to insure that every enlisted man in their command understands thoroughly that the War Department does not desire to discharge any soldier who cannot secure civil employment. It will be made clear to every soldier that where he would normally be discharged under orders for demobilization, he may remain temporarily in the military service at his own written request until such time as he can secure employment. The fact that he requests to remain in the army temporarily does not in any way operate to compel him to remain in the army for a long period of time against his will. Any man who would normally have been discharged if he had not expressed his desire in writing to remain in the service, may thereafter be discharged from the service at his own request whenever he thinks he may secure employment. All such men as are retained temporarily under the above authority will be attached to the most convenient unit and where their services will be most useful."

In connection with this policy, adopted after orders were issued last week for demobilization of the combat divisions in the United States, it was said that action to prevent a large proportion of these men from facing unemployment was taken not only to protect the soldier individually but because of its effect upon employment conditions throughout the country.

Another aspect of the new policy is that the families of married soldiers will continue to draw their allotments from the Government during this temporary service. For the time being, at least, the War Department will have ample work to keep the men busy in handling demobilization of other troops and in storing war material and in similar tasks.

Representative Garland of Pennsylvania, Republican, who has just returned from overseas, where he spent Christmas at Coblens with American soldiers, introduced a resolution today demanding "the return of the soldiers by every transportation facility that can be made available" and for the immediate discharge on arrival in this country of drafted men and members of the National Guard.

"Something ought to be done," Mr. Garland said. "The men don't have any idea when they will get back and have been told they will be there a year or longer. There is nothing around them but rain and mud and tombstones and ruin. There are plenty of French and British there to police the country. The privates think that the officers getting big pay want to keep them there."

Representative Garrett of Tennessee, Democrat, replied that Secretary Baker had but a short time before told the Rules Committee that the return of the men had received more attention than any other problem before the War Department and that all vessels that could be obtained were devoted to the service.

BOSTON, Jan. 24.—Governor Coolidge will send the Legislature next week a bill authorizing an appropriation of $10,000 to aid and find employment for returned and returning soldiers, sailors, and marines.

ALLIES ASKED TO PERMIT ENLISTMENT OF VOLUNTEER ARMY TO SAVE RUSSIA; COUNCIL HALTS TERRITORY SEIZURES

ALL CLAIMANTS WARNED

Must Not Employ Force to Gain Possession of Disputed Areas.

COLONIES ARE DISCUSSED

Officials of Canada, South Africa, and Australia Tell Allied Leaders Their Views.

MAY CUT OCCUPATION FORCE

Committee Named by Foch Will Consider How Large an Army Is Needed.

PARIS, Jan. 24, (Associated Press.)—A series of international events of the highest order took form today at meetings of the council of the great powers and the military commanders on all the fronts. These may be summed up as follows:

First—Issuance of a solemn warning that taking of territory by force would seriously prejudice the claims of those who used such means and set up sovereignty by coercion. This declaration was framed by President Wilson.

Second.—Appointment of a commission, including the British Minister of War, Winston Churchill; Marshal Foch, General Diaz, and General Bliss to carry forward early demobilization and establish proportionate allied and associated forces on the western front.

Third—Discussion of territorial claims on conquered German colonies, with hearings of interest to Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, on German East Africa and the German islands of the Pacific.

Fourth—Approval of the striking of a medal for all troops taking part in the war.

Fifth—Authorization to M. Pichon, French Foreign Secretary, to draft instructions for the joint mission which is about to proceed to Poland.

These matters embrace some of the most difficult questions before the Peace Conference, and with the projected action tomorrow on the League of Nations, indemnities, punishments, labor, and international highways, much progress is being made toward clearing the slate of the large subjects before the conference.

Warning Has Wide Scope.

While the solemn warning with regard to the gaining of territory by force specified no countries, it covered broadly the warring elements in the Ukraine and those around Vilna and Lemberg; also in the Causasus, where the new Georgian Republic is fighting the new Armenian Republic; also the Serbian inroads on Montenegro, as well as territorial occupation along the Eastern Adriatic, in Thrace and in Poland.

Some of these situations have already brought protests and other protests are expected, so that the great powers decided to enunciate the principle that possession by force would place a cloud on the title.

The sentiment of the Council was strongly for demobilization with the least possible delay. There is reason to believe that the commission will carry out the plans for the return of American troops homeward as rapidly as transportation permits, and that there will be no increase in the American quota of troops in the occupied regions.

While the hearing on the German colonies was confined to the British dominions, Japan was represented on the Council and expects to be heard in due time concerning some of the German Pacific groups and Kiao-Chau.

The second plenary session of the Peace Conference at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon will have the League of Nations as its foremost topic. This will be followed by the four questions: Labor, indemnities, punishments, and highways.

David Lloyd George, the British Premier, will make the opening presentation of a plan for a League of Nations in a brief speech dealing largely with principles and leaving the details for the commission.

What part President Wilson will take in tomorrow's session has not been definitely announced.

The Supreme Council first met today as the Supreme War Council. Not only were there present President Wilson and the Premiers and Foreign Ministers, but also Marshal Foch, Field Marshal Haig, General Pershing, General Diaz, and the Generals of the Versailles War Council, including

British League Plan Is Founded on Agreement To Maintain the Territorial Integrity of States

PARIS, Jan. 24, (Associated Press.)—The British plan for a League of Nations, which has just been completed, can now be outlined in concrete form to the people of the United States for the first time.

The main feature of the league provided for in the plan will be the establishment of machinery for handling international disputes. This will be based on an agreement among the members of the league not to interfere with the territorial integrity of States or to permit others to interfere with them.

The rendering of assistance and guidance to new and undeveloped States to maintain freedom of transit and just commercial relations between the members of the league are some of the principal aims to be supervised by the league.

In this connection it is held that all international bodies now existing, and any which may be created, must be brought together in some central place, which will be the capital of the league, and work in close co-operation with the league if the effort to promote international co-operation is to be successful.

The British plan provides for a general conference of the delegates of all nations that are members of the league and for a smaller International Executive Council for the transaction of ordinary business.

A permanent secretariat for the league would be presided over by a man of authority and experience in European affairs sitting at the capital of the league with all necessary diplomatic immunities. Periodic meetings of the league's delegates are provided for.

The plan excludes some States, like Germany, from the league for the present, on the ground of untrustworthiness, but it holds that this exclusion should not be prolonged unnecessarily. Every civilized State with a settled government will be invited to join the league. Provisions for separate representation for India and the British dominions is provided for.

Disputes for settlement are divided into two classes, justiciable and nonjusticiable, and each State will be the final judge as to whether a dispute is justiciable or not.

The establishment of a permanent Court of International Justice for the settlement of justiciable disputes is proposed, and until it is created a Court of Arbitration is suggested. Either a council or a conference of the league is thought to be the proper organ for the consideration of nonjusticiable quarrels.

The plan maintains that in either case all that ought to be attempted at present is to see that there shall be a deliberate public discussion and that international public opinion and not formal coercive machinery shall be appealed to. It is held that the world is not yet ready for such machinery.

The plan looks to cancellation of treaties incompatible with the tenets of the league and calls for a provision regarding publicity of treaties.

The question of disarmament is held to be difficult, although more or less complete disarmament is considered necessary to peace. It is suggested that there might be some step toward the abolition of conscription. The plan would prohibit any nation, having forces or armament sufficient for the purpose, to indicate an intention of employing them aggressively.

FIRST STEP TODAY TOWARD LEAGUE

MAY OFFER RESOLUTIONS

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—Tomorrow's plenary meeting of the Peace Conference which is to be devoted in part to considering the question of the formation of a League of Nations is likely to be a disappointment to those who expect concrete results or even nothing more than some definite guidance as to the attitude of the great powers concerning the league scheme.

All the evidence at hand goes to show that the powers are not ready to disclose their matured views as to a working plan for making the league a practical organization.

It was expected that the British would present a definite program for the league at the session but this understanding lacks confirmation.

The League of Nations proposals will be brought before the Conference through half a dozen resolutions offered by Lloyd George, which it was supposed would embody a set formula for an international society designed to prevent a recurrence of wars. All those concerned were disinclined to discuss the character of these resolutions, but the inference was drawn from the little that was said that they will be general in scope, stating principles for the foundation of a league and not containing a detailed plan of organization and procedure.

Nor will Lloyd George deliver a considered address backing any hard and fast suggestions. He has decided and has not announced to representatives of other nations that he will reserve his remarks, leaving to the smaller nationalities a chance to express their views on the principles which they believe, should be recognized in any arrangement intended to save them from aggression, such as the Teutonic powers inflicted on Serbia and Belgium.

LITHUANIANS TAKE 6,500 BOLSHEVIKI

BANDITS LOOT PETROGRAD

All Parties in Russia Opposed to Bolsheviki Rallying to Kolchak Government.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—Lithuanian troops have inflicted a defeat upon the Bolsheviki near Kossedary, about midway between Kovno and Vilna, according to reports from Kovno received today.

The casualties of the Bolsheviki were heavy and they are reported to have lost 6,500 men in prisoners.

The Lithuanians are said to be advancing toward Vilna. Their losses are declared to have been slight.

Delegations of Poles from Lithuania and White Russia, including representatives from the cities of Vilna and Warsaw, have arrived in Paris. They will defend the interests of the Polish populations in Lithuania and White Russia and wish to obtain, first of all, assurance that a Bolshevist invasion of those regions will be prevented HELSINGFORS, Finland, Jan. 24.—Petrograd is being left to the mercy of gangs of robbers formed of escaped criminals, who are dividing the town into districts for looting purposes, according to the newspaper Russky Listok.

It reiterates the report that the Bolsheviki are making hurried preparations for the evacuation of Petrograd, with the intention of moving either to Moscow or Nijni-Novgorod. The greater proportion of the persons now interned in Petrograd will be executed, it is predicted, and their women and children left to shift for themselves.

All the valuables in private houses, bank vaults and museums will be removed from the city.

SAZONOFF MAKES APPEAL

ASKS FOR NO FINANCIAL AID

Confident That Anti-Bolshevists Could Float a Loan for the Undertaking.

SPOKESMAN OF 40,000,000

Ex-Minister's Plan Contemplates Raising of Troops in Various European Countries.

PARIS, Jan. 24. — Sergius Sazonoff, representing the Governments of Omsk and Ekaterinodar, today made a plea that anti-Bolshevist Russians be allowed to raise a volunteer army in other European countries for the restoration of order in Russia.

"There is only one possible way of settling the Russian question," he said. "It is not suggested by any Russian who might be accused of partiality, but by such unbiased men as M. Noulens (former French Ambassador to Russia), and M. Scavenius (Danish Minister to Russia), both of whom were interrogated by the Conference and pronounced themselves in favor of military intervention.

"We know that the powers do not wish to make a new campaign into Russia. We go so far as to admit the justice of the reasons guiding the powers in this attitude, but it is being universally recognized that there is only one remedy for overcoming Bolshevism and preventing its spread outside Russia, namely, to crush it by force. We ask to be allowed to use force.

"We strongly urge an expedition of volunteers; but, in order not to involve the responsibility of the powers we do not insist on such expedition being organized by the powers themselves, asking only authorization to raise the volunteers ourselves and to be allowed to enlist them in different European countries, which is not a novelty, having been done in many wars."

M. Sazonoff cited as examples of this the Peninsular war, the Garibaldi campaigns, the Boer war, the war in the Balkans, and other conflicts.

"Why should we not also be allowed to raise a volunteer army," M. Sazonoff added, "for one of the most sacred causes the world has ever known—that of freeing our country from a band of malefactors who in some unfortunate parts of Russia by force of arms are setting at naught all principles of rights and personal freedom?

"We do not even ask from the powers any financial assistance, as the Governments already constituted, to which I represent two of over 40,000,000 people, will float a loan which undoubtedly will be well received, as every one knows the immense resources of Russia, which, with its huge population, soon will regain its position as one of the principal factors in the world's activity."

Russian Reply May Be Delayed.

It seems doubtful whether replies to the inquiries addressed by the Supreme Council to the various Russian factions will be received in time for Saturday's session of the full Peace Conference.

In fact, it develops that the Russians now in Paris asserting that they represent the anti-Bolsheviki may not be competent to pass upon the question themselves. They have credentials conveying unknown powers. The Council is disposed to accept these credentials as sufficient in the event that the Russians now here participate in the meeting on the Princes Islands; otherwise, it is said, it will be necessary to await the decisions of the home Governments of the various factions in Russia.

Recognition of Russia's pre-war national debt to France by the Lenine-Trotzky Government will be one of the first subjects discussed at Princes Islands should the Bolshevist leaders accept the invitation of the Peace Conference to meet them.

While Russia is a debtor to all the Allies except Italy, there is a feeling in French official circles that the French debt should receive priority as it was contracted much earlier during the time of peace—while the English and American claims date back only to the war period. Russian bonds are widely scattered throughout

France, and there are more than 2,000,000 holders, among them many workingmen, small proprietors, and tradesmen, whose savings of a whole lifetime are invested.

President Wilson's plan for dealing with the Russian problem includes the "unconditional recognition of the revolution" by the representatives of the associated powers, according to Le Petit Parisien, which declares its information comes from "an especially authorized source." Of this recognition its informant says:

"This must be construed as implying recognition of all the consequences of the Russian revolution as far as the former Government of the Czar is concerned, but in no wise as approval of the Bolshevist policies."

Maklakof Favors the Conference.

The press continues to display the keenest interest in the Russian problem. Although Sergius Sazonoff, the former Foreign Minister, and Prince Lvoff, the former Premier, declare they are firmly decided to have nothing whatever to do with the Bolsheviki, Le Matin says that numerous Russians at present in Paris, notably Vasili Maklakof, the last accredited Ambassador, are of the opinion that the anti-Bolshevist Governments should not give up the advantage of a hearing before the Allies, no matter how reluctant they may be to meet the Bolsheviki.

The Russian Social Revolutionary Party approves without reserve President Wilson's proposal, according to the delegate of that party now in Paris. A document to this effect, signed by the delegate, is published today in the Socialist newspaper L'Humanité.

Most of the newspapers continue to combat the decision of the conference for a meeting of the representatives of all the Russian Governments, characterizing the policy thus decided upon as unsound.

Wilson Planning "Vigorous Action"?

Both the Petit Journal and the Petit Parisien point to the danger in which the Bolsheviki are reported to stand of losing Petrograd. They say that the Bolshevist defeat at Narva ought to be regarded by the Soviet Government as a serious warning. The time will come, these newspapers predict, when the prolonged parleying will be succeeded by vigorous action, and the Petit Parisien asserts that President Wilson is even now preparing the ground for the action he has in view. The Petit Journal predicts that unless Premier Lenine handles the situation carefully he will meet with a catastrophe in a very brief time.

Milukoff Against Meeting Reds.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Paul N. Milukoff, former Foreign Minister of Russia, who is in London, expressed surprise when told today that the Allies had invited the Bolsheviki of Russia to a conference. He said:

"The Bolsheviki are in no wise representative of the Russian people. They are robbers and cutthroats; mad dogs who wish to bite others so that all may be mad."

He said the only way to settle the Russian problem was to overthrow the Bolshevist rule there, which, he said, was simply terrorism and "hateful to the majority of Russians." He also said that if the Allies would supply guns and munitions patriotic Russians would overthrow "Bolshevist tyranny."

FRENCH ORGANIZATION TO FIGHT WILSON PLAN

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—The criticisms in the French press of the action of the peace plenipotentiaries in offering to send envoys to deal with the Bolsheviki have been followed by a more definite movement of opposition, which is directed against President Wilson. The fact that he fathered the Russian compromise has brought upon him the wrath of the Franco-Slav Society, and steps have been taken intended to embarrass him in the United States. This organization opposes Bolshevism, and it may be added that it does not approve of the League of Nations.

According to my information, the society at a recent meeting considered a plan for bringing together the French opponents of Bolshevism and the elements in America which are making cause of complaint over the President's activities in connection with the conditions in Russia.

At the meeting of the Franco-Slav Society addresses were delivered by M. Franklin-Bouillon and Andre Cheradame, the latter widely known as a publicist. It is evidently the belief of the Franco-Slav group that a union can be effected with the American opponents of Wilson's policies, particularly the Republican Senators, and a propaganda undertaken in the United States which will cause the curtailment of the President's activities in behalf of Russia.

With the statement concerning the efforts of the Franco-Slav Society is coupled a report that its members are endeavoring to persuade the Peace Conference that Wilson should be considered not as President but as a party leader whose views are out of harmony with those of many of his own countrymen.

The President has decided to devote one day, Jan. 27, to an inspection of the devastated regions. He has been reluctant to do so until the most important work of the conference was finished, but the pressure upon him to change his mind has been too great for him to resist. I am told that one argument advanced was that the French people would misunderstand his attitude if he did not see with his own eyes the devastation wrought by the enemy.

LONDON VIEWS VARY ON TRUCE WITH REDS

Morning Post Says It Presupposes "More Than Christian Meekness."

MUCH FAVORABLE COMMENT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Morning Post, commenting on the decision of the Paris Conference to meet delegations of all the Russian Governments, including the Bolsheviki, says:

"We hope the Russian Bolsheviki will be duly grateful to the Peace Conference. It is true they have not been invited to Paris. That would have been too much. But they have been invited to the Sea of Marmora, where the Allies propose to leave their cards upon them. The moral distinction between inviting a shady person to your house and meeting by appointment at a seaside resort has always been recognized by the civilized West—and France is fain to accept the lofty standards of her Allies.

"Our friends in Russia will also be gratified. The Bolsheviki could not sit down to table with us. That would be both a crime and a scandal. But with them—why, with them it is a different matter. The Bolsheviki have robbed them, have murdered their fathers and brothers, or have paid Chinese coolies to murder them, and have committed unspeakable outrages upon their wives and daughters. The Bolsheviki have murdered their Czar, and, indeed, their whole royal family. The Bolsheviki have robbed them, dispossessed them, treated them in a manner so foul and so cruel that even to read of it makes the blood run cold.

"No longer ago than Jan. 2, they shot in cold blood 750 Russian officers who were returning to their homes from prison camps in Germany.

"And now the Allies—their allies—ask them to meet these Bolsheviki and sit around the table with them and come to a happy arrangement. It is marvelous to consider what the friends of the Allies have been asked to do and to suffer since the great war began. But this, perhaps, is the greatest marvel of all. It is to exercise much more than Christian meekness—such forgiveness unto seven hundred and seventy times seven—that if it done the Sea of Marmora will thenceforth rank with the Sea of Galilee."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"Bolshevism itself means, and can mean nothing but, anarchy, however it may disguise its real spirit and essence by means of a proclamation of class war and the supremacy of the proletariat. To have any dealings with criminals of this kind, guilty of such acts, constitutes a grave lapse from the high moral maxims which have throughout guided us during the war, and from a practical point of view, it is also an extremely bad policy. Encouragement is the one thing which is likely to foster the growth of Bolshevism, and if the proposals of the conference do not involve a certain tacit acceptance and encouragement of the forces of Lenine and Trotzky, we really do not know what they do mean."

All for the Best, Says The Times.

LONDON, Jan. 24, (British Wireless Service.)—The Times, discussing the allied invitation to Russia, says that on the whole the agreement of the Conference concerning Russia has been better received by the world at large than in Paris, and that even those who might be disposed to criticise it must recognize that the decision was unanimously reached by so imposing a cabinet of nations that it is practically impregnable. The chief objections to the proposals, The Times adds, are concerned with its practicability. No one, it says, can guarantee the success of the proposed meeting, or even that the meeting will ever take place.

The newspaper argues that even if the meeting does not occur, or if it takes place and no definite decision is reached, "we shall, in either case, be in a better position to arrive at a decision than we now are, for in either case we shall have made it impossible for the Bolsheviki in Russia or their sympathizers outside to keep on any more.

"They will have revealed themselves as enemies of the human race, and whatever steps the Conference may find it desirable to take in order to vindicate its authority can be taken without misgiving and with the assurance that it has popular sympathy behind it. On the other hand, if the Bolsheviki attend the Marmora meeting and behave reasonably the gain will be still greater. We shall have made the peace of Europe secure without further fighting. We shall have laid the foundation of future friendships between the real mind of Russia and the aspirations of the Entente peoples, and we shall have dug the grave of Bolshevism."

The Times concludes by saying that it hopes the plan will work, but that if it does not, and other means become necessary, "our hands will have been strengthened by the failure."

"In the meantime," it says, "it is important that we should put ourselves in a position to assert the will of the conference at once in case the present scheme breaks down."

The Daily Chronicle's diplomatic correspondent says it is generally considered in diplomatic circles that the Peace Conference was moved to make the remarkable experiment by the magnitude of the problem, and that there was virtually no other course open.

"Reflects War-Weariness."

"The sense of the conference," this correspondent says, "was against any resumption of the sword. In this it reflects general war weariness. * * * Russia has fallen under Bolshevism because of lack of the common necessaries of life. Supply those necessaries, and Bolshevism will fail. That is the theory, and it is good sense. Those who best know Russia rejoice that an effort is being made to stem the tide of anarchy. The fact remains that the vast majority of the inhabitants—probably some 86 per cent.—are peasants, dependent upon tilling the soil. Indifferent to persons, as to forms of government, they demand a cessation of disorder and a resumption of normal conditions. To them the proposition of the Allies will come as a hope of better things."

The Manchester Guardian, which warmly supports the proposal, says Bolshevist Russia is in desperate need, first of peace, and second of trade.

"She needs thousands of things," says this newspaper, "which she cannot herself supply, and to obtain these and freedom from the external menace and the drain which it implies on her scant resources; there can be little doubt that she would be ready to make great concessions. * * * She needs foreign assistance—foreign capital. Her finances are in utter disorder, and she is on the verge of bankruptcy. She can escape only by foreign intercourse and aid. Who can say what salutary results might not flow from her return to the ordinary relations of a great State?"

The Daily News says the suggestion that the proposal involved recognition of the Bolsheviki will not bear examination. The Westminster Gazette declares that to Europe as a whole it will be a great gain if the Marmora Conference assembles, "for then we may hope to secure through it the peace of the world."

"The reasons that favor the experiment," The Gazette continues, "immensely outweigh all that can be said against making it. Chief of these reasons is that a mission to the Sea of Marmora would be a practical trial of those ideals in the domain of government with which the name of President Wilson is associated. The effort is being made to get at the end of the Russian situation in the only way possible at the present time and to base the decisions of the Paris Conference upon the clear expression of the will of the people concerned. We are glad to think that on this point the American and English delegates are absolutely at one, and that the views that are receiving the unanimous approval of the Conference are as much those of Lloyd George as of President Wilson. Our hope is that the mission will not fail, but if it does the Conference will have the satisfaction of knowing that it has attempted a settlement as creditable to its head as to its heart."

Dr. E. J. Dillon, the foreign political expert of The Telegraph, writing from Paris, says the Prince's Islands plan caused consternation in Russian circles in Paris and adds that he is authorized to declare that the Governments of Omsk, Archangel, Crimea, and Yekaterinodar will absolutely refuse to send representatives to the conference.

SENATORS CONDEMN DEALINGS WITH REDS

King and Myers, Democrats, Support Sherman's Denunciation of New Russian Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Recognition of the Bolsheviki as a constituent part of the turbulent Russian situation, and the proposal by the Paris Conference to treat with the Reds at Princes Islands, in the Sea of Marmora, brought scathing comment in the Senate today.

Two Democratic Senators, King of Utah and Myers of Montana, joined with a Republican, Senator Sherman of Illinois, in deploring the fact that the Peace Commissioners had recognized the existence of the Bolsheviki. The President was responsible for any yielding on the part of the French representatives, Senator Sherman asserted.

"I cannot reconcile myself," he told the Senate, "directly or indirectly to the recognition of the present Bolshevist body in Russia. The Bolshevist Government is admitted to be a godless Government as well as a violent one. They are only a little in advance of the Socialists of this country. There is no thorough Socialist who admits any religious obligations.

"The local council of Petrograd has decreed that all married women between 18 and 45 years of age shall be provided with husbands selected by the council. Their children are not to be allowed to remain with their parents, but will be taken over as wards of the State. The parents are to have no more concern with them than the sire and the dam of the beasts of the field after their young have been born."

"Such a Government as that," interrupted Senator King, "is an enemy to all forms of law or order or progress or civilization, and that is the kind of Government we are giving some recognition to at this time at the Paris Peace Conference. The decrees the Senator from Illinois has spoken of are to be expected of a Government founded upon atheism and denunciation of God.

"I believe it to be the sovereign duty of every American to resist relations that may be sought. Great honor is due to the French for refusing to assist the Bolshevist representatives. If they have unhappily yielded, it was because of pressure begun by the Chief Executive of this country."

"I am greatly surprised and disappointed," he continued, "that the Powers in conference at Paris had considered entering into negotiations with these people or recognize them in any way whatever.

"The Bolsheviki are murderers, thieves, assassins, rapists, and criminals of the worst type. They indorse all practices known to criminality and have invented new forms of crime. They are the worst criminals the world has ever known; worse even than the Germans. They have abolished God; they declared war on all churches and religion.

"They have decreed free love. They have decreed that hereafter all women of Russia should be kept for the common use of all men, and that all children shall be raised by the State like a lot of pigs or cattle. No child in the future is to know who his father is. Such doctrines are absolutely shocking. I am greatly disappointed that the Powers have decided to deal with the Bolsheviki."

CABLES PROTEST TO WILSON.

The Rev. George Albert Simons, superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Russia, and pastor of the American Church in Petrograd since 1907, yesterday cabled the following message to President Wilson in Paris:

"Recently left Russia, where I spent eleven years. Know Bolshevism to be avowedly anti-Ally, anti-humanitarian, anti-Christian, anti-Russian. Consider it greatest menace to world peace, world democracy, civilization, and sanctity of home. Therefore, most earnestly hope Peace Conference will not pollute itself by recognizing Russia's greatest foe. Christian America and Christian Russia can fitly express their sentiment in this crisal hour by quoting Second Corinthians, vi., 14-18."

FIRST STEP TODAY TOWARD LEAGUE

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

would be mainly important as a notice to the world that the League of Nations proposals were now formally before it and subject to continued discussion until disposed of. It is the privileged business of the Conference, and under the agreement reached shall have precedence over everything that pertains to the making of peace.

It would seem that as the originator, as it were, of the league idea the United States would have the preference in bringing the question formally before the Conference. The fact that the British are to do so has deep significance, however.

There is reason to believe that President Wilson and the American delegation preferred this method of procedure. In the first place, it was a marked compliment to the British delegation, and in the second it showed to all the world that Great Britain and America stood together in furthering this most ambitious scheme to end hostilities between nations.

No more striking instance of the unity with which the British and American delegates are working can be afforded than by the desire of Wilson to have the Prime Minister of Great Britain launch the craft for which the American Government has been assiduously laying the ways.

It does not need supernatural powers to understand that the President's visit to England in Christmas week and his subsequent private conferences in Paris with Lloyd George and Balfour are bearing fruit.

As stated in one of my prior dispatches those close to the British delegation are saying that Lloyd George has come to have a great liking for Wilson personally, and is particularly impressed with his sense of fairness and courtesy as well as directness. This cordial relationship between these two men is all the more interesting to those who had been hearing predictions that as soon as President and Prime Minister got down to business a clash was bound to come.

FRENCH SKEPTICAL OF RUSSIAN PLAN

Yielded to British and Americans for the Sake of Preserving Harmony.

ENGLAND THE PRIME MOVER

"America Was Umpire," It Is Said, Rather Than Participant in Conflict of Wills.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—There are several sufficiently accurate ways of characterizing the agreement of America and the allied powers to receive representatives of all the Russian groups, including the Bolsheviki, at the Princes' Islands conference. It is called here in Paris a diplomatic defeat of France by America. It is also called, more precisely and exactly, a diplomatic defeat of France by England, with America acting as umpire.

But a better way, perhaps, is to speak of it as a compromise of all the powers concerned to arrive at a harmonious settlement of the first serious difference that has actually come to a head since the formal opening of the conference. It is better to look at it in that way, because, after all, this is a peace conference; and to speak of "defeat" and "victory" implies that there has been fighting. And fighting among themselves is distinctly what the delegates do not want, especially in these days of preliminaries. For, big as the Russian question may be in itself, much greater issues are to come, which will call for even greater concessions or compromises than that which France has just made in consenting to this conference after that emphatic Pichon note declaring that under no circumstances would France deal with the Bolsheviki as requested by Lloyd George.

Incidentally, this might be called the third case in which France has yielded to America for the sake of harmony. First there was her consenting to bring the League of Nations matter into the first part of the conference instead of leaving it to the last. Then came the readjustment as to the representation of small nations, and now the unbelievable has actually happened in the Russian question.

"The main thing to keep in mind," said a French statesman to me today, "is that the union of the Allies and America has been preserved unimpaired by this decision itself. There is no question but what France was diametrically opposed to England and America. They have yielded something; so have we.

"It has been something like the process of the conversations between Washington and Berlin last October. You will remember the great uncertainty in France at the time about the wisdom of President Wilson's action. We wanted to keep on fighting, but yielded; and the results have been satisfactory.

"No doubt the present situation will work out, too. But we do not think it will work out the way the advocates of the Prinkipo conference hope. It is hardly likely that all the anti-Bolshevist Governments in Russia will consent to participate in the conference with Anarchists. Perhaps none of them will. So we may find ourselves conferring only with the Bolsheviki, who are eager to come. What will happen in that case has apparently not yet been worked out. But it is not probable under these conditions that the fighting in Russia would cease, whereas such a cessation of hostilities is an essential requirement on which we have declared the Prinkipo conference must be based. I think it is a foregone conclusion that Admiral Kolchak's Government in Siberia will take no part in the conference with the Bolsheviki; but, on the other hand, the Admiral probably would not go on with his military operations without the support of the allied troops in his region.

"The trouble is that in Western Europe, England, and America, we do not yet appreciate Bolshevism as they do in Russia. To us it is serious enough, but still an incidental thing, which some of us seem to think we can settle without force by a sort of sideshow Peace Conference run in connection with the big affair in Paris. But to Russians themselves, Bolshevism must be the one and only question till it is eradicated, and they think there is only one way to eradicate it.

"However, America and England have our support now. If their way fails, we shall have their support later on. Valuable time may be wasted, but it will be worth something if all the civilized nation are eventually convinced that the Bolsheviki cannot be trusted. In the meantime, it is to the credit of France that she has established a precedent of compromise for the sake of harmony among the Allies.

"It is not a defeat of France by America. The issue is not so sharply drawn there anyway, as between France and England. America was the umpire. Italy and Japan hardly figured in the matter. Lloyd George asked that the Peace Conference receive the Bolsheviki in Paris. Pichon refused. President Wilson suggested, as a middle course, that a commission of the Peace Conference—not the conference itself—should receive the Bolsheviki and others at Prinkipo. We accepted this middle course."

The above talk may be taken as a fair representation of the French attitude of skepticism in the entire matter. The same thing is expressed with much more bitterness and sarcasm in many Paris papers. The Socialist paper, L'Humanité, is the only organ which approves the action of the conference. The other papers make a point of ignoring Lloyd George's advocacy of receiving the Bolsheviki, and directly or indirectly hold President Wilson responsible for the whole matter.

In L'Echo de Paris, which also carries its usual daily cable from Washington attacking the Administration, Pertinax, its chief political writer, says:

"Ideology, ignorance and electioneering politics have become the bad tenants of the Quai D'Orsai."

Generals Wilson, Belling, Bliss, and Robilant.

The military branch of the Council adjourned at noon until tomorrow morning.

Decisions Told by Communique.

The communiqué regarding proceedings of the morning session reads:

The Supreme War Council met this morning from 10:30 A. M. to 12:30 P. M., and was attended by the President of the United States of America, the Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Britisr Empire, France and Italy, as well as the Secretary of State of the United States of America, the British Secretary of State for War and the French Minister of Munitions; the representatives of the Japanese Government; Marshal Foch, accompanied by General Weygand; Field Marshal Haig, General Pershing, General Diaz, General Wilson, General MacDonough and the military representatives of the United States of America, France, Great Britain and Italy at Versailles.

The Council conferred with Marshal Foch and the other military experts as to the strength of the forces to be to all the forces of the allied and associated Powers on the western front during the period of the armistice.

It was decided to set up a special committee composed of Mr. Churchill, Mr. Loucheur, Marshal Foch, General Bliss and General Diaz to examine the question.

The Supreme War Council also agreed to recommend for the approval of the governments concerned the issue of an identic medal and ribbon to all the forces of the Allied and associated Powers who have taken part in the war.

Warning to Factions Using Force.

After the Supplementary Council, the President of the United States of America and the Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers of the Allied and associated Governments, with the representatives of Japan, held a short meeting and agreed to the publication and transmission by wireless telegraphy to all parts of the world of the following communication:

"The governments now associated in conference to effect a lasting peace among the nations are deeply disturbed by the news which comes to them of the many instances in which armed force is being made use of in many parts of Europe and the East to gain possession of territory, the rightful claim to which the Peace Conference is to be asked to determine.

"They deem it their duty to utter a solemn warning that possession gained by force will seriously prejudice the claims of those who use this means. It will create the presumption that those who employ force doubt the justice and validity of their claims, and purpose to substitute possession for proof of right, and set up sovereignty by coercion rather than by racial or national preference and natural historical association. They thus put a cloud upon every evidence of title they may afterward allege, and indicate their distrust of the conference itself.

"Nothing but the most unfortunate results can ensue. If they expect justice they must refrain from force and place their claims in unclouded good faith in the hands of the conference of peace."

The session will be resumed at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

According to Le Temps the part of the communiqué warning those who are refusing to await the Peace Conference's decision on territorial questions was written by President Wilson.

German Colonies Are Taken Up.

A communication issued this evening, dealing with the afternoon session of the Supreme Council, reads:

The President of the United States of America, the premiers and foreign secretaries of the United States, of the British Empire, and France and Italy, and the representatives of Japan met at the Quai D'Orsay this afternoon from 3 o'clock until 5:15 o'clock.

The mission of the Allies and associated great powers to Poland was frist discussed, and it was agreed that M. Pichon should prepare draft instructions to the mission for the approval of the representatives of the powers.

It was agreed that one press representative for each of the five great powers should be permitted to accompany the mission.

The question of territory readjustments in connection with the conquest of the German colonies was then taken up. Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister of Canada; Mr. Hughes, Prime Minister of Australia; General Smuts, representative of General Botha, the Prime Minister of South Africa, and Mr. Massey, Prime Minister of New Zealand, were present and explained the particular interest of the respective Dominions in regard to this question.

The next meeting of the allied ministers will take place on Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

To Hasten League Plan.

Responsive to demands in the United States and Great Britain, which are echoed in Germany, for an immediate conclusion of the peace treaty, efforts are being made to hasten the adoption of a plan for a League of Nations. It is declared to be the conviction of the delegates that no permanent peace can be made until certain principles to govern the relations between the States have been accepted by the Peace Conference.

Such questions as the rearrangement of boundaries, the assumption of indemnities and reparations and the creation of constituted authorities are regarded as the very basis of the treaty of peace, and not only the American deelgates, but also the British and French delegates are understood to be of the opinion that these things cannot be safely composed in special peace treaties, but must be founded upon the general principles forming the basis of a League of Nations.

Another consideration is the likelihood that if the treaty of peace is signed first, there will be little disposition among the delegates to linger in Paris to complete a League of Nations.

LABOR IS ONE TOPIC TODAY.

Ideas Crystallizing for International Protection of the Worker.

PARIS, Jan. 24, (Associated Press.)—One of the subjects on the order of business of the plenary session of the Peace Congress tomorrow will be international legislation on labor. Under instructions given at the first session, various delegations have been preparing written statements of their views on the subject, and it is understood that, under a special order, these will be received by the congress and referred to a committee, which will give careful study to the reports and endeavor to amalgamate them into a general project to be recommended to the congress for approval.

America's view has been crystallized and is believed to harmonize in many respects with those held by the British delegates. There is reason to believe that the principles enunciated will be found acceptable in general to most of the Entente Powers. While it has been deemed proper up to this time to adhere to the practice of withholding such reports from publication until formally presented before the congress, it is believed that the propositions of the United States are based upon full recognition of the principles of international protection of labor by Governmental agencies, thus offsetting what is regarded as a dangerous tendency toward class control of Governments.

Data are being prepared to demonstrate a simultaneous movement in this direction by labor organizations in the United States, England, and France, culminating in the adoption by the French Chamber of Deputies of the report of the Berne Conference, held before the war, as amplified by the conference held at Leeds, England, in 1916. These, in general, look to relieving labor from international capitalistic control, allowing freedom to choose employment and place of labor, guarantees of employment, social insurance, the right of organization, and the enforcement of hygienic conditions at places of employment.

Of interest to the Southwestern section of the United States, as well as Mexico, is the demand for freedom to work in any country on terms of equality with native labor.

Other provisions are said to relate to child and female labor, prohibition of night work for minors, a basic eight-hour day and prohibition of international trade in products made by minors.

It is expected that the American delegates will present data to show the necessity for international standardization of sailors' wages, as already required by American law, if unfair and injurious Competition for the world's freight business is to be avoided. It is understood, and a spirit of mutual co-operation is to govern, as the best guarantee of avoiding wars resulting from such competition.

FOCH SWUNG FRENCH TO WILSON'S VIEW

Willing to Have President's Russian Policy Tried to Prove Its Futility.

SOME BRITISH OPPOSITION

By ERNEST MARSHALL.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—There is far from unanimity of opinion in British circles as to the wisdom of yesterday's sensational developments in the attitude of the conference toward the Russian situation. President Wilson's policy, which the conference decided to accept, is the sequence of Lloyd George's proposals, rejected by Pichon. Upon Wilson and Lloyd George personally rests the responsibility.

Both of them, of course, have the backing of their respective delegations, for it is almost as true of Lloyd George as it is of President Wilson that they are the delegations, the other delegates of their two countries being more or less in their pockets. French acceptance of President Wilson's proposals is understood to have been largely influenced by the advice of Marshal Foch, who insisted that the present popular reluctance to embark upon military measures in Russia could not be disregarded, but that in the event of a failure of the Princes' Islands meeting, the opinion of the world would veer round in favor of forcible intervention, not necessarily for the purpose of settling the domestic affairs of Russia, but with the object of raising a barrier against the spread of Bolshevism.

There are two possibilities of the future of the Princes' Islands scheme. One is that a majority of the various existing Russian Governments will refuse the invitation. The other is that the Bolsheviki will hold firm to their attitude of war against existing institutions. In either case, Clemenceau's hand will be considerably strengthened, and as a measure of self-protection the outside world will have to adopt forcible methods.

In some British quarters the present proposals are regarded as an interesting experiment, which may have no worse result than loss of time. In others, they are held to be a dangerous compromise with anarchy, semi-recognition of Bolshevism, and an ill-considered venture out of the realm of practical politics into the unknown land of an idealism which is susceptible of subversive as well as of uplifting interpretation.

Lloyd George, however, had his way when the question of making the British proposals of December last was discussed in London, and now President Wilson has obtained the decision of the conference in support of the plan, which at least has this much in its favor—that it is a first class innovation, that its execution will clear the air, and that in the event of its success, distinct progress will have been made toward a solution of what is perhaps the world's greatest problem; and that in the event of its failure there is likely to be a great change in public opinion in both America and England as to the necessity of intervention.

MEDAL IN HONOR OF WILSON.

French Department of the Seine to Issue It.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The General Council of the Department of the Seine has decided to have a medal struck in honor of President Wilson's visit to France. On one side will be a profile portrait of Mr. Wilson, and the other side will bear the inscription:

"The Department of the Seine to President Wilson, Benefactor of Humanity."

A popular edition of this medal will be struck for general distribution.

AGREEMENT ON INDEMNITIES?

Wilson Said to Have Accepted the Principle.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—During consideration of the question of reparation at the meeting of the Supreme War Council yesterday, says the Paris edition of The London Daily Mail, President Wilson agreed to the principle that Germany must be made to pay indemnities in addition to the full cost of reparation.

At the instance of the British representatives, the paper adds, discussion was also begun on the questions of the addition of conscription and general disarmament.

In the future, The Daily Mail says, there will be one full meeting of the Peace Congress each week.

LITHUANIANS TAKE 6,500 BOLSHEVIKI

eral Filimonoff, Hetman of the Kuban Cossacks.

Admiral Kanine, it is announced, has been appointed commander of the Russian Black Sea Fleet. He is subordinate to General Denikine, who now holds sway over Odessa, the Crimea, and Sebastopol.

It is announced in Government circles that the controversy with General Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevist leader in the region of Chita, is in a fair way to a settlement. Semenoff, it is said, has accepted the appointment of a commission to try charges against him and has signified his readiness to join General Dutoff in fighting the Bolsheviki. The commisson to try General Semenoff will meet in a week or so at Chita. It is understood that General Semenoff has informed Admiral Kolchak that he was the victim of a misunderstanding. The charges against Semenoff include that of interfering with the telegraph and railway lines, the seizing of money in banks, and the intimidation of railway employes. Allied officers in Omsk continue their good offices in the interest of a settlement.

M. Savinkoff and Vladimir Bourtzeff, well-known revolutionist now in Paris, have telegraphed offers of their support to Admiral Kolchak. The adherence of Savinkoff is regarded as adding important strength to the Omsk Government. Admiral Kolchak has telegraphed his thinks to Savinkoff, declaring:

"I consider your acceptance a sign of a distinct movement which is uniting all forces to save Russia in this critical hour."

It probably would be premature and over optimistic to declare that the Omsk Government has inaugurated a settled régime and that insurrections and civil conflicts in non-Bolshevist Russia are at an end. The country is too vast, and unknown political currents have not yet found complete expression.

In Omsk Russia is compared to an agitated river which will continue to be troubled until it finds a normal and peaceful level, but Russians seeking the highest interests of the country as well as foreigners who are studying the situation on the ground appear to be united in considering the Kolchak Government as a sincere and vigorous movement to rehabilitate the nation.

There is a unanimous feeling that a powerful personality like Admiral Kolchak is necessary to carry the Government over the present crisis. If he succeeds in holding and strengthening his position in the next six months, these observers believe he will have formed the nucleus of an orderly and permanent régime, whatever political form it may eventually assume.

The observers do not believe that Kolchak is conspiring to restore the monarchy, as some of his opponents charge. They look upon the Kolchak Government as the only group offering hope of a solution.

The correspondent visited the churches in Omsk during the services Saturday night and found them all crowded. The Cathedral was overflowing. Most of the worshipers were men, and all were standing quietly in prayer.

Just as along the four thousand miles of the Trans-Siberian Railway, so at Omsk the masses of the Russian people apparently crave only peace and order, opportunity to obtain the necessities of life and a fair measure of comfort and happiness. They say they are surfeited with suffering, war and sorrow. It is hard to reconcile the gentle, sympathetic, and hospitable Russians encountered everywhere in this region with the tales of ferocity coming across the Urals.

At this critical hour of reconstruction the people are turning trustingly to America and the Allies for help. Their leaders emphasize that help, to be effective, must be immediate.

SEIZE KRYLENKO AS SPY.

Ex-Commander in Chief of Reds Sought to Enter Cossack Army.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 24.—Ensign Krylenko, former commander of the Russian Bolshevist Army, has been arrested, according to reports received through Finland.

He was caught when he attempted to enter the anti-Bolshevist Army of General Krasnoff, (Hetman of the Don Cossacks) for espionage purposes.

Ensign S. Krylenko was placed in command of the Bolshevist Army by Premier Lenine on Nov. 21, 1917, a fortnight after the coup d'état of the Bolsheviki, and retained that command until after the first taking of Kiev in February, 1918.

He succeeded General Dukhonin, who was degraded because he refused to offer an armistice to the Germans and Austrians until they had evacuated Russian territory.

On Nov. 30 Lenine sent out his famous wireless dispatch to Vienna, announcing that the new Government was ready to open negotiations for an armistice and peace, and henceforth, until the treaty of Brest-Litovsk was actually signed on March 3, 1918, Krylenko journeying from one sector to another, offered not only one, but a series of armistices to the commander of every enemy force with which he came in contact.

After one or two experiments the Germans would have none of him, for with the fraternization of troops came loads of Bolshevist propaganda literature. With his failure to seduce the enemy Krylenko gradually lost caste among his "comrades," and had been little heard of since last Spring.

ASSERT TROTZKY WAS TAKEN.

BASLE, Jan. 24.—Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Minister of War and Marine, did not escape from Narva after the defeat of the Bolshevists by the Esthonians, but was taken prisoner, according to dispatches received here from Libau.

Advices from the same source state that, owing to the intervention of Finnish troops in northern Esthonia and Livonia, the country has been completely cleared of Bolshevist forces.

An Esthonian official report on the capture of Narva by Esthonian and Finnish troops, received on Tuesday, announced that Leon Trotzky, who had been present at Narva during the fighting, had escaped from the city after the Bolshevist defeat. Dispatches of Jan. 23 from Copenhagen appeared to confirm this, announcing that Trotzky was transferring his headquarters as Minister of War to Nijni-Novgorod.

Communications between Libau and Narva do not appear to be particularly good at present. The places are nearly 300 miles apart, and Bolshevist forces have recently been reported in the territory between them.

FOUGHT WAY THROUGH REDS.

COBLENZ, Jan. 24, (Associated Press.)—After being three weeks on a train fighting their way through bands of Bolsheviki in Russia, several German soldiers arrived here yesterday from the Ukraine. Four hundred Germans of the Bavarian heavy cavalry left Kharkov on Dec. 26, after manning and arming a special train with one-pounders, machine guns, and rifles.

A non-commissioned officer of the German First Corps, with headquarters at Kharkov, was among the arrivals at Coblenz. He estimates that there are 80,000 German soldiers remaining in the Ukraine. Between Kharkov and Kiev the German train had frequent encounters with bands of Bolsheviki, numbering from 200 to 2,000. In one of these encounters the Germans suffered sixty casualties.

The officer said the train was frequently stopped by Bolsheviki and it was necessary for the Germans to fight their way day after day. Sometimes the Germans bribed the Bolsheviki to allow them to pass, but in most cases they fought their way through, using machine guns from the train windows. The itinerary of the Germans included Poltava and Krementchug, the train making several detours because of destroyed bridges.

The Bolsheviki had officers, but they maintained little order and fought as disorganized units. A large proportion of them appeared to be former Russian prisoners. Many wore Russian uniforms, while some had uniforms stolen from German soldiers.

BOLSHEVISTS ON THE RAND.

Find Little Sympathy in South African Gold Fields.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Plans for the establishment of a Bolshevist movement on the Rand, the rich gold mining region of the Union of South Africa, have been unearthed, according to a dispatch to Reuter's, Limited, today from Johannesburg.

The principals in the plan style themselves International Socialists, and the movement was launched at the time of the armistice celebrations in South Africa, one of the measures being the issuance of a circular announcing that arrangements for practical co-operation with "brothers in Russia" had been completed.

"Investigations show," adds the dispatch, "that the natives will have nothing to do with this Bolshevism, the native strike fiasco last June having caused the natives to lose confidence in the International Socialists. While free speech is not interfered with, steps are being taken to insure adequate protection to the public."

THREATEN SWISS AGAIN.

The Government guarantees its safe journey. Vorovski confirms the report that he will leave in the next few days.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 24.—The Swedish Government has sent an ultimatum to the Bolshevist Legation here, demanding its departure from Sweden by Jan. 25 at the latest, according to the Politiken.

BOLSHEVIST RUSSIA LIKE A WASP'S NEST

All Would Combine in Defense if Attacked, Says Lithuanian Foreign Secretary.

TROTZKY A RUTHLESS CHIEF

"Haves" Robbed by "Have Nots," Who Will Resist Any Return to Former Conditions.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—Interesting details about the character of the Bolshevist rule in Russia were given to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent by the Lithuanian Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Rosenbaum, who arrived in Paris last week. He said:

"It is a mistake to suppose that the Bolsheviki have a regular organization covering all the Russian territory which has accepted their principles. On the contrary, it is a cardinal feature of the new régime that each locality, each community, however small, should have full independence and liberty of action. For it must be remembered that, despite statements in the allied press to the effect that the Bolsheviki hold sway entirely by terrorism, this is only true in a limited sense. Their real force lies in the acceptance of their theories by a majority. Ignorant and misled as the latter may be, it is nevertheless a fact that they have for the most part rallied to the program of communistic socialism which forms the basis of Lenine's doctrine.

"Where terrorism comes in is in the methods used almost everywhere by these majorities to crush or convert their opponents and to dispossess them in favor of the proletariat community of what, in common with the proprietor classes in other countries, they naturally regard as their own property. What I mean is that the 'Haves' are robbed and terrorized by the 'Have Nots,' and since in Russia, as all the world over, there are more numerically of the latter class than the former, it is perfectly correct to say that once the 'Have Nots' are given a free hand, as they have been in Russia, they will resist a return to former conditions.

"Herein lies the real strength of the Bolshevist leaders, for although, as I said, there is no system of centralized authority by which they can exercise sway over all Russia, they yet are certain that any attempt to interfere with majority or mob rule in any district would immediately be resented and opposed by the local Soviet or majority representatives.

"At the same time the Bolshevist leaders have another source of strength—the Red Guard Army. Really it is less of a national army than Trotzky's personal instrument, just as the Praetorian Guard used to be an instrument of the Roman Emperor.

"Trotzky is an exceptionally strong and determined man. Like Bismarck, he is a thorough realist—he knows what he wants and goes after it with utter and whole-hearted indifference to moral or any other considerations save expediency. Having once established the new communism in Russia—which only became wholly possible by the signature of peace on any terms with Germany—Trotzky set himself to beat down the elements of opposition and possible reaction.

"Once that was done, he went further and took advantage of the weakening German military power to increase the area over which the Bolshevist theories were accepted. For this he needed a force, and he found it in the use of the Red Guard, which, as the world knows, is not only fighting the anti-Bolshevist elements in Russia, but is pressing westward toward Poland and threatening my own country, Lithuania, where, owing to the German refusal to permit us to raise an armed force, we are virtually at the Bolsheviki's mercy.

"To get a clear idea of the situation in Russia at present, you might compare the country to a wasp's nest wherein the greater part of its inhabitants do pretty much what they please, provided they are left alone and do not interfere or take part in activities of the 'soldier wasps'—that is, the Red Guard—but who would all combine in common defense the moment the nest is attacked by an outside enemy."

7,000 OFFICERS MASSACRED.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—I talked yesterday with a man who is well known to many people in Chicago and who would be identified by many others if I were permitted to give his name. He has just returned from a trip of many months covering little known parts of Russia and Asia. He traveled in a semi-official capacity and had the best facilities for observation and for collecting information.

He brought back with him sensational stories of operations of the Bolsheviki in Russia which I have never seen in print. Here is a sample describing the capture of the City of Kazan, which is sixty miles to the east of Moscow:

"The Republicans, anti-Bolsheviki, were in control of Kazan, one of the considerable but not well-known cities of Russia. Kazan is so close to Moscow that the Bolsheviki hated to see it in the hands of their enemies. They were reinforced by a large band of mutinous sailors from the Russian fleet. These men brought with them a number of machine guns and quantities of ammunition. Meanwhile the Moscow Bolsheviki sent emissaries into Kazan to spread their doctrine. They told the ignorant workmen of the city that once the Bolsheviki got into power no workmen would have to labor more than four or five hours a day, while wages would be at least ten times what they were then getting.

"Finally the Moscow Bolsheviki organized the rabble into an army several hundred strong. This band was led out of the city in the direction of Kazan. At every village they reached all the male inhabitants were forced to join the marching columns. Immediately behind the so-called army came the sailors armed with their machine guns, as whenever the army showed weariness or signs of discontent the machine guns were used to force them to advance.

"When word came of the Bolshevist advance the republicans in Kazan got ready to meet it. They got together a considerable force, largely made up of former officers in the Russian Army, and marched out of Kazan to face the coming enemy. At the same time the Bolsheviki in Kazan redoubled their efforts. They used large bribes, promises, and threats to induce the workmen to join them in organizing a detachment to attack the republicans in their rear.

"When the Bolsheviki from Moscow attacked in front, the newly gathered mob from Kazan unexpectedly closed in from the other direction and the republicans were surrounded and forced to surrender. More than 7,000 former officers of the Russian Army were captured. Of these no fewer than 3,000 were taken, at one time, into an open field and sailors turned machine guns on them. All but two were killed. I talked at length with one of the two who escaped. Later the other 4,000 were also massacred.

"That, I think, is a fair sample of the way in which the Bolsheviki operate."

BERLIN TIEUP RESENTED

Socialist Leaders Disturbed by the Serious Consequences of Electrical Workers' Action.

ROTTERDAM, Jan. 23.—Strikes of miners on a great scale have broken out in Germany, extending to nearly every colliery district. The movement, which originated as a protest against the killing of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, is of a political character, directed against the Ebert-Scheidemann Government.

In Upper Silesia, where last week an economic settlement was arrived at between the employers and workers, a fresh strike has begun, and, according to today's news, of the 150,000 miners in that area, 70,000 are idle. In the Essen region trouble is brewing, and large numbers of pits are closed.

The employers of the famous Deutsche Kaiser mine have issued a declaration that their action is a demonstration against the Government.

At Hamm, near Dusseldorff, the workers have proclaimed the Socialization of the mines. At Remscheid there is a general strike as a protest against the killing of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg. All industries there are stopped, and traffic is at a standstill.

The Berliner Tageblatt states that at Oppel, near Breslau, notwithstanding the decision of their leaders that work must be continued, the employes of no fewer than forty-four mines went on strike and the leaders have no longer any authority over the men.

Strike Nearly Paralyzed Berlin.

BERLIN, Jan. 22, (via Copenhagen.)—During the period of the strike of electrical workers in Berlin [since ended] perhaps a majority of the houses here were without any light. The few candles in the stores were sold and there was not a quart of kerosene, the only other possible illuminant at any public store.

The effect of the strike was almost a catastrophe at the hospitals, which were overcrowded. In some cases the lives of patients on operating tables were endangered because the lights went out suddenly and without warning. Patients might have bled to death, but for the extraordinary dexterity of German surgeons, which has been increased manyfold by the exigencies during the four years of war.

Happily the subway has its own electrical works, but one might well imagine the panic that was caused in the tunnels by the sudden extinguishing of the lights. The private power today in the subways afforded the only means of communication. The Stadtbahn has not been operating for weeks, lacking locomotives which had to be delivered to France, according to the terms of the armistice. So great was the pressure in the subway cars that many windows and even some doors were bursted by closely packed masses of humanity, the nearest station being reached safely only by all passengers clinging stoutly together.

The streets were full of abandoned cars, there not being horses enough to bring them to the nearest stations.

Telephone service was only partly interrupted.

A few large restaurants, feeding from accumulations of stores, managed to keep open until 8 or 9 o'clock at night, when their lights, too, went out suddenly. Many of them were crowded to the utmost, and there was a panic among the waiters when many guests rushed to the streets instead of waiting in the darkness until their bills could be collected.

Of about thirty theatres, only ten gave performances last night.

The population was against the strikers in the aggregate, and the municipal authorities were criticised sharply because, it was argued, they should have tried to save the trade of the city from this calamity, whatever the cost.

The strikers got 2 marks per hour, and they wanted 3 marks. On Saturday they were quite willing to submit to a court of arbitration, but yesterday they absolutely refused arbitration. It was rumored that the Spartacide element among them got the upperhand.

Berlin theatrical enterprises are gravely endangered by the latest measures to save coal. Beginning next Monday they will be accorded only 50 per cent. of the electric power they used in December, 1918, and that was only 60 per cent. of what had been permitted in December, 1916. Consequently, they will be restricted to three, or at the utmost, four nights weekly.

Even now Berlin theatres are so dark that one must light matches to read the programs. Lighting effects on the stages have become impossible and the artists' dressing rooms are so dark that they have the utmost difficulties in painting their faces.

Despite all these drawbacks, however, the theatres have been crowded night after night, even during the "housetop war" and the recent street car strikes, which may be accounted for by the fact that going to theatres is the only pleasure which moderate purses now permit. Still the managers complain, though many have grown very rich during the war, and they threaten to charge twice the usual price in the future.

Socialist Leaders Disquieted.

BERLIN, Jan. 23, (Associated Press.)—The strike epidemic in Berlin, and particularly the strikes of the electric, gas, and other municipal workers, whose position enables them to extort compliance with their demands from public or private employers, are beginning to disquiet even the Socialist leaders.

In common with the bourgeois press the Socialist Vorwärts dwells on the "disloyal" nature of the strike of the electric workers, by which hundreds of thousands suffered great hardships.

The Aldermen of Charlottenburg, a working-class district of Berlin, at a Common Council meeting today criticized the attitude of the workers. The criticism came from members of all parties.

The employes of the city gas works, who received an eight-hour day only recently, have now, under a threat to paralyse the gas supply, compelled the granting of a six-hour day and an increase in wages amounting to 12,500,000 marks annually.

Herr Richter, the Police President of Berlin, who is a Socialist, said today that the obvious tendency of the workers was to convert the revolution into a wage movement which would endanger all of Germany.

Herr Katzenstein, a Socialist Alderman, said that the recent strikes indicated that "we have progressed from exploitation by the capitalists to exploitation by the proletariat, with the distinction that the capitalists were accustomed to reckon more than six weeks ahead." He added that the workingmen were exhibiting utterly unsocialistic selfishness and that a great part of them had demonstrated that they were not yet ripe for Socialism.

The Vessische Zeitung refers to the strikes as "the sabotage of Socialism," and calls on the Government to counteract this terrorization of the municipality by furnishing men to take the place of the strikers if necessary. This action, the paper adds, could not, in the circumstances, be regarded as strikebreaking. The paper concludes:

"If this economic terror is permitted to rage further it will undermine our vital forces, weaken the labor movement, and strengthen the counterrevolutionary forces."

Bremen Doctors Threaten Strike.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 24.—All doctors and chemists in Bremen have decided to go on strike, according to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, as soon as the political strikes endanger the traffic of supplying the people with food, gas, and electricity, or if citizens of Bremen are arrested for political reasons.

Matters have reached such a pitch in Berlin owing to the strikes of coal miners that households in the German capital may hereafter have no gas to use between 8:30 o'clock at night and 11 o'clock in the morning, and between 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon, according to a Berlin dispatch to the Handelsblat.

Street lighting in Berlin will be reduced 20 per cent., and restaurants have been ordered to close at 10 o'clock at night.

The Vorwärts, the dispatch adds, says that the coal shortage is so great that the central electric stations and all trades requiring coal will soon be forced to close down.

PARIS CAR AND BUS STRIKE.

All Lines Are Tied Up by Workers' Action.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—A general transportation strike was declared in Paris this morning. Subway lines, surface cars and automobile buses were affected. The strike was apparently well organized.

The population took the matter calmly, even good-naturedly, and proceeded to walk to work. The streets presented an unusually busy appearance for the early hours of the day and the boulevards looked as if a holiday was in progress. In the meantime the taxicabs reaped a harvest and exacted exorbitant rates.

The strike of automobile bus drivers was decided upon at a meeting yesterday under the presidency of Marcel Cachin, a Socialist Deputy. Surface car employes deliberated until 1:30 o'clock this morning when they finally decided to go out.

LABOR PARLEY IN PARIS.

Americans, French, British, and Belgians to Meet Next Week.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and other members of the American Labor delegation now in Paris had a conference last night with Gustav Francq and P. M. Draper, Canadian labor leaders, and Leon Jouhaux and other leaders of the French General Labor Federation. Mr. Gompers wanted to have the labor leaders agree to the holding of an inter-allied labor conference in Paris before the Socialist and Labor Conference at Berne, but M. Jouhaux, while not opposed to a preliminary exchange of views, said it was impossible to hold a meeting in Paris. He said that many allied delegates would be unable to come to Paris before going to Berne.

It was agreed finally that there should be an exchange of views next week between the representatives of the American, Canadian, French, Belgian, and British labor federations. Mr. Gompers and his colleagues later had dinner with George Nicoll Barnes, the British labor leader, and talked over the British labor plan which Mr. Barnes will present to the Peace Conference, to which he is one of the British delegates.

BERLIN, Jan. 23, (via Copenhagen.)—The Lokal-Anzeiger learns from Munich that Duke Ludwig of Bavaria, 88 years old, the senior member of the House of Wittelsbach, who is being operated on in a Red Cross hospital, has been denied the daily extra ration of meat on which he had subsisted. This was done by special order of Premier Eisner.

The Lokal-Anzeiger adds that Eisner's position has become so precarious that a rumor that he is preparing to send his family to England and later follow himself is generally credited.

DUTCH SONGS FOR EX-KAISER

Concert Planned for Tonight Continues to be Deprecated.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 23.—The ex-Kaiser has developed an interest in the national songs of his country of adoption. On Saturday night he is to be entertained by Amerongen's Christian Choral Union, and the program, at the request of the ex-Kaiser, is to consist principally of Dutch folk songs.

The function is to be a full household gathering, consisting of the ex-Kaiser, the ex-Kaiserin, their suite, and the family of Count von Bentinck.

The incident is harmless enough in itself, but is causing a considerable amount of discussion in Holland, where it is feared that the entertainment of the ex-Kaiser by public bodies in Holland is likely to prejudice the country's position. Political circles are against the function, which they foresee will cause unfavorable comment abroad, as did the recent story of the dinner given to the ex-Kaiser by officers in the mess of the Dutch Flying Corps.

The matter is also being taken up by the press, which laughs at international susceptibilities being ruffled by such a harmless proceeding, but points out what will be the effect and advises beneath its laughter that the concert should not take place.

BRITISH TASKS IN THE NEAR EAST

German and Austrian Troops, as Well as Bolsheviki, Cause Trouble Beyond the Caspian.

TURKS HARRY ARMENIANS

Natives in Mesopotamia Are Kept Quiet Only by the Presence of Troops.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The vastness of the task before the League of Nations in restoring order in Eastern Europe and Asia is illustrated by the amount of work which, THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent learned today from well-informed sources, the British Army still has to perform.

More than two months after the armistice there are in the region beyond the Caspian inhabitants who do not know yet that the war is over, and have recently been informed that German submarines have sunk 30,000 British troops in the Caspian. As a large number of German and Austrian troops are there as well as a force of Bolsheviki, the British have their hands full in protecting the peaceful tribesmen.

To maintain communication with this force and also to see that the armistice terms are carried out it is necessary to keep other British garrisons in the region north of the Caucasus, while in Cilicia there is still another force. They are needed there especially on account of the Armenians.

The Turks are showing the old truculent spirit toward that unfortunate race. They do not seem to realize that they have been defeated and it is only the convincing presence of the khaki detachments that prevents them from continuing the old system of oppression and extermination.

Further to the southeast in Mesopotamia a considerable part of the expeditionary force remains and will have to remain. Here, after the lapse of centuries, good Government has been introduced as the result of war, and it is absolutely necessary, if order is to be maintained, that some civilized nation should hold the reins of power.

The natives are split into many mutually hostile tribes, and even such restraining influence as the Turks used to exercise has been withdrawn. Moreover, the British have in the last three years made great improvements. Basra has been made into a port with every modern facility. Navigation of the rivers has been improved. Hundreds of miles of railway have been constructed. Bagdad has been transformed into a prosperous city, and improvements in irrigation, in addition to the increase in security, have enormously increased agricultural production. If the British were to withdraw all these developments would fall into ruin.

Meanwhile in Eastern Europe the British forces are engaged in international police work and are occupying a number of points, the ultimate ownership of which will be decided by the Peace Conference, but will certainly not be awarded to England. A division of the Saloniki force is thus stationed near Constantinople, and another is garrisoning Dobrudja, in the zone between the Bulgarians and Rumanians. A battalion of the Essex Regiment has taken temporary charge of Soutari, in Northern Albania. A battalion of the Yorkshire and Lancashire Regiment is looking after Fiume, and another of the Honorable Artillery Company is in Northern Tyrol. In addition there are 20,000 British troops in Northern Russia.

British commitments in lesser theatres of the war are, therefore, by no means liquidated. The Government is anxious to reduce them, but it cannot do so until the Peace Conference has decided what is to be done with all these lands, where British detachments alone maintain order.

CHARGES CRUISER FAILED.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 25.—The Providence Journal prints this morning a story in which it charges on the authority of naval officers who are not named that the steamship Ticonderoga was deserted in a helpless condition by the United States cruiser Galveston before she was finally attacked and sunk by a U-boat with the loss of 113 American soldiers and sailors.

The Journal asserts that the transport convoy, of which the Galveston was a member, changed its course when word of a naval action ahead of it was received, and continues:

"For some reason the Ticonderoga did not follow the rest of the convoy, and the sound of heavy firing early in the morning revealed that she was being attacked. The cruiser Galveston went back to within two miles of the Ticonderoga, fired several shots at the submarine without effect and then left the Ticonderoga to her fate.

"It develops now, from the story of the naval officer, that the Captain of the Galveston is to be brought before a court-martial to explain the occurrence.

"The officer's defense is, first, that the specific general orders were to stay with his convoys at all times; second, that half his crew were helpless with influenza at the time. The Galveston had seventy men in the sick bay, and while she was passing the wreck of the Ticonderoga the executive officer died of influenza."

The Journal says that it learns from a naval informant that the submarine disappeared, after the cruiser had opened fire, but returned some time after the cruiser had gone on her way, reopened the attack and sunk the ship. The submarine later submerged suddenly, while one of the rafts bearing survivors was tied to its superstructure, any only the breaking of the rope saved the raft from being dragged under water with those on board.

Says Wilson Will Head Peace League

By the Commission of the League of Nations is probably meant the permanent executive body for the conduct of the league's affairs.

Workers' Impatience Inspires Petty Demands—Older Leaders Now Gripping Situation.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—While the Yorkshire miners' strike is settled, and the prospect of great idleness there is banished, there are still gloomy happenings and tokens of labor unrest. Twenty thousand North Nottinghamshire miners and twenty pits are idle, and 14,000 Rhonda men have stopped as a protest against the dismissals of miners engaged during the war. South Wales ship repairing yards are standing idle, and the bakers are threatening a national strike.

The extraordinary frivolity of grievances advanced as excuses for several of the present epidemics of strikes and threatened strikes is arousing great uneasiness. Any one of these strikes would cause great loss and inconvenience to thousands unconnected with the trades concerned. Yet the men do not hesitate to take the strongest action at short notice on what is generally regarded as unreasonable grounds.

Another disturbing factor is the lack of discipline shown by the younger men. Just as the older and abler leaders have won the national confidence by their steadiness and loyalty in the war, they are being betrayed by their own followers.

G. H. Thomas, M. P., a veteran leador of the railwaymen, showed his vexation at the way in which the trainmen in Wales flouted his authority by an unauthorized strike, by resigning his position; and other labor leaders are now having similar experiences.

No one believes that these strikes will go very far. But it is not denied in well-informed quarters that they have been actively fomented by Bolshevist influences. There is naturally a desire on the part of men, now that the war is over, to have better conditions of living, and the feeling is expressed widely in the press that these should be granted them. But their demands are taking impossible forms.

There are, however, elements that are fighting against the extreme views. Demobilization is proceeding steadily, and is adding thousands of men daily to the labor market. The old and respected leaders of the men have not lost their heads. William Brace, M. P., President of the South Wales Miners' Federation, in an interview, has recognized the impossibility of pressing the men's demands to the point where they would make industry unprofitable.

BRESHKOVSKAYA IN CHICAGO

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Mme. Catharine Breshkovskaya, the so-called "Grandmother of the Russian Revolution," despite her seventy-three years, twenty-two of which were spent in Russian and Siberian prisons because of her revolutionary opinions, today breathed defiance of the Lenine-Trotzky Government and said that in Chicago, New York, Washington, Boston, and elsewhere she intended to make a series of speeches which would bring home to the American people the real significance of recent events in her native country.

As she alighted from the Olympian Limited after her transcontinental journey from Seattle, where she landed a few days ago, she was bombarded with American Beauty roses thrown by admirers to the number of 1,000 or more, who had gathered at the Union Station to pay her homage. In a sort of triumphal procession she was taken by Miss Jane Addams and a number of other prominent Chicago women to Hull House, where she will remain until Monday, when she will start for New York.

Mme. Breshkovskaya declined to go into the details of her escape from Russia. She denounced the Bolsheviki in round terms. She said that there was much misery and actual starvation in Russia and that she saw little hope of ameliorating conditions until Lenine and Trotzky were permanently removed from authority.

"Their rule is slowly but surely coming to an end," she said. "The decline of their power is now rapid. It must terminate soon. With Lenine and Trotzky out of the way there will be a chance for the Social Democrats of Russia to get together and restore order out of chaos."

Mme. Breshkovskaya is in the United States for the purpose of raising funds to educate and ameliorate the condition of 4,000,000 Russian war orphans. "If we pass them by, allow them to run wild and grow up without a sense of responsibility," she said, "anarchy will spread not alone through Russia, but in communities not remote from the United States."

POLITICAL AGITATION REVIVES IN IRELAND

Parties Other Than Sinn Fein Take a Hand—New Home Rule Plan Proposed.

DUBLIN, Jan. 24, (Associated Press.)—The political agitation in Ireland, outside the sphere of Sinn Fein activities, is undergoing a revival. A meeting of Moderate Home Rulers, headed by Stephen Gwynn, yesterday launched a movement for home rule with a separate Parliament for each of the four provinces, or three Parliaments, with Leinster and Connaught joined, which they call Dominion Home Rule.

Today the council of the Irish Unionist Alliance met in Dublin and adopted a resolution presented by Lord Farnham reaffirming "unalterable opposition to home rule for the whole or any part of Ireland," and declaring "the real object of all home rule movements is total separation," which would result in handing over Ireland "to those who during the war have actively sought to procure the defeat of our arms and the disruption of the Empire."

On the other hand, home rule gained a recruit in Major Gen. Sir Hubert Gough, former commander of the British Fifth Army, who was a leader in what was termed the Curragh revolt, at which time he resigned from the army when Lieut. Gen. Sir Arthur Paget, then Commander of the Forces in Ireland, gave the officers at Curragh their choice between resigning and agreeing to march against Ulster in case of civil war.

General Gough has written a letter to Mr. Gwynn in which he says he feels that "the policy of drift is leading the country to moral, if not material, ruin." In his letter Sir Hubert expressed agreement with Mr. Gwynn's Home Rule plan and declared: "The main object we require to arrive at among Irishmen is a feeling of brotherhood, comradeship, and respect for each other. Many of us have learned that comradeship can exist and what real brotherhood meant in this war."

The letter concludes with the statement that the difficulty confronting self-government lies in Ireland, not at Westminster.

MOVING TO ALLY GERMAN PARTIES

INDEPENDENTS NOT WANTED

Vorwaerts Suggests Working Union with Liberals to Assure Basis of Constitution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 23, (via Copenhagen.)—The election returns, which are now complete, show 166 mandates for the Majority Socialists, 93 for the Centrists or Christian People's Party, 75 for the Democrats, 37 for the National People's Party, 23 for the People's Party, 22 for the Independent Socialists, and 5 for the so-called "wild ones," totaling 421 mandates distributed over thirty-seven election districts, Alsace-Lorraine forming the thirty-eighth.

This result is anything but satisfactory to the three People's Parties, which made such gigantic efforts and spent so much money during the last week of the campaign, but it is no surprise to impartial observers, nor to any one belonging to other than those three parties. Certain newspapers and politicians guessed a result, almost exactly as recorded today, days before the election.

The Lokal-Anzeiger divides the mandates into three distinct groups—the Socialists, 188; the People's Parties, 153, and the Democrats, 75—expressing the hope that the five "Wild Ones" will join the People's Parties on all serious questions. In South Germany the home of the "Wild Ones," they did not do so. They rather seem to be inclined to follow the Socialist lead.

Though it is well known that the Democratic leaders intend an alliance with the Majority Socialists, which would give them a working majority of 241 out of 421, the Lokal-Anzeiger believes that many persons who voted the Democratic ticket have no sympathy with a Socialist alliance. The paper remarks, however, that the voters will find that the persons elected by them will not permit sentiment to stand between them and the prospect of power.

Vorwärts admits that the Majority Socialists will have to seek an alliance, even if the Independents should not prove to be obstinate.

"The Democrats," says Vorwärts, "must give proof of a really democratic spirit and sympathy for social ideals if they or part of them wish effective co-operation from us."

The Tageblatt, the principal Democratic organ, declares unreservedly for an alliance with the Majority Socialists, in which case the attitude of the Independents could not count.

Socialists Polled 10,000,000 Votes.

BERLIN, Jan. 24, (Associated Press.)—The German Social democracy polled more than 10,000,000 votes in the elections of last Sunday, according to the Freiheit, as against 4,250,000 in the last Reichstag elections. The Majority Socialists are conceded to have received 8,000,000 votes and the Independents a trifle under 2,000,000.

The strength of the radicals' total vote, says the newspaper, is not indicated by the number of mandates they captured, as both wings of the party suffered by the election tactics of the Conservatives, Clericals, and National Liberals, who by combining their tickets secured mandates which would not have been obtainable had they run independently.

The Scheidemann and Haase parties worked independently and undoubtedly forfeited isolated mandates which they might have gained had they pooled their tickets.

Vorwärts, the organ of the Majority Socialists, makes the significant suggestion of the possibility of effecting an active working union with the bourgeois democracy for the purpose of fortifying the constitutional foundations of the republic.

Hope of a Strong Government.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Basing its comment upon the final unofficial figures of the results of the German elections for the National Assembly, The Times today expresses the opinion that there is every probability of a strong combination between the Majority Socialists and the Democrats, (the former Radicals, reinforced by some National Liberals,) together with whatever recruits they may attract from the other groups.

"Such an arrangement of parties," says The Times, "would produce the one result which concerns the Allies and the United States. It would give Germany a strong Government with the indisputable moral right to bind the German State and people. * * * The Allies and America should hasten to recognize the state of things which the election has created.

"Hitherto we had no direct representatives of the German people to deal with. These elections furnish such representatives. Let us recognize their title and lose no time about it."

It may be pointed out that the original plan for the National Assembly called for 433 members of that body, but owing to the fact that Alsace-Lorraine did not vote the total is reduced by 12 and hence will be 421.

FIRM WITH HAMBURG REBELS.

Machine Guns Check an Attack on the City Hall.

HAMBURG, Jan. 23, (Associated Press.)—The Government troops are making short work of putting down the Spartacide outbreak here.

When the revolt began the Spartacides occupied the railway stations and other Government buildings, but since that time they have been driven out. They attempted to attack the City Hall yesterday, but met with a heavy machine-gun fire and retreated. They have also been driven from several police stations which they had occupied.

Ordinary traffic and business was resumed today. The troops continue to clear up Spartacide nests throughout the city.

Government reinforcements are on the way to Hamburg, and it is believed that a repetition here of Berlin's Spartacide week has been forestalled.

ARMY CONTROL TIGHTENED.

Power of German Soldiers' Councils Is Now Greatly Limited.

BERNE, Jan. 24.—Under the new regulations which have been issued relative to the control of the Germany Army the power of the Soldiers' Councils is greatly diminished.

The Prussian Minister of War, through the army officers, will be charged with responsibility for the employment and leadership of his men. He will be supreme chief of the army, and he alone will have power to promote officers and soldiers.

Soldiers' Councils will be formed by all garrisons, regiments, or battalions to watch over the activities of officers, and see that military authority is not used against the Government. They must be consulted as to permanent regulations relative to feeding the troops, the granting of leave, and discipline, but beyond that they are under strict limitations.

News of Its Discovery in Canal Kept Secret in Berlin.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 24.—The body of Rosa Luxemburg, the Spartacide leader who was killed by a mob recently, was found yesterday in the Landwehr Canal, according to a report from Berlin. The body was terribly mutilated.

The news, it is said, is being kept secret for fear of anarchistic reprisals.

AMERICANS BUY GERMAN SHIPYARDS?

Report in Berlin of the Sale of Schichau Works for About $40,000,000.

BERLIN, Jan. 24, (via Copenhagen.)—It is rumored in shipping circles that the Schichau Works at Danzig, Elbing, and Pillau have been sold to an American firm for 160,000,000 marks. What American firm it is cannot be ascertained so far because Herr Carlson, the present owner, keeps closely to his house and will not talk. Carlson is a son-in-law of Ziese, who was the son-in-law of Schichau, the founder of the firm. Carlson never got along with his workmen, who during the war numbered over 10,000, which circumstance, combined with the fear of socializing experiments, induced him to part with one of the most valuable shipbuilding yards in Germany.

The Schichau yards in Danzig, Elbing, and Pillau cover more than one million square metres in space, containing thirty slips and four swimming docks.

One of Schichau's specialties were torpedo boats which were built not only for Germany but for Russia, Argentina, China, Turkey, and other foreign countries. Dreadnaughts, cruisers, and other warships were built in their yards as well as the largest passenger steamers. Among the latter being the Columbus, of 50,000 tons.

AMERICANS TO INSIST ON FREE WATERWAYS

PARIS, Jan. 24.—The question of the internationalization of ports and waterways and, in certain cases, railways, which is to come before the Peace Conference session on Saturday, has received careful study by American specialists on the subject. It is believed that they will present some advanced views on the question.

It is felt tha to carry out this proposal, which is the third of President Wilson's fourteen points, will remove many causes of friction which have existed because of unjust control of international means of communication. That some of the new States expected to grow out of the war may be wholly inland, it is said, emphasizes the necessity for the removal of barriers to access to the sea, which the American delegates are expected to favor.

The question of the Scheldt, the Dardanelles, and certain other waterways, it is expected, will be decided by a commission, although it probably will approach with caution the subject of canals, in which America is particularly interested because of the Panama Canal.

International control of railways in certain circumstances, it is said, will be favored by the American delegates. Such railways are the line from Danzig to Poland and the Bagdad Railway, which are regarded as substitutes for natural waterways.

The question of whether the Panama Canal should be internationalized would depend entirely upon the attitude of the United States Government, according to the belief expressed tonight by Lord Robert Cecil, who has submitted to the Peace Congress a draft of the British view of the structure of the League of Nations. At a conference of journalists, and in answer to a query, he said he had not heard any formal or specific discussion of the Panama Canal among delegates, it being mentioned only incidentally in connection with other waterways. He held that the Panama Canal was not on the same basis as some other waterways, since it is property of the United States, and it must be for that country to say how it shall be controlled.

In speaking of the admission of neutrals into the league on the same basis as other nations, Lord Robert said that it was his conception that there should be no classification, but that all sovereign independent states should have equal rights. In the general discussion which followed this remark, he said it would be a disaster if no South American nations were included in the organization.

The question was raised as to whether, if a big indemnity was assessed against Germany, she should be kept out of the league until payment was completed. Lord Robert replied that Germany should not be barred merely because of her inability to pay, in case the indemnities should run over a long period.

He said that no definite proposals had been made regarding limitation of armaments, which is presenting an extremely difficult problem. In his opinion, there must be limitation, but there cannot be total disarmament, since every country must maintain certain defensive forces.

In discussing means for enforcing the rulings of the league, Lord Robert said:

"If you are going to try to force peace by the mechanical perfection of your machinery, the attempt will be a failure. You must have behind you public opinion. Machinery is important, but without a favorable atmosphere against war it will fail."

He believed that a free press was highly important, since through the press this favorable atmosphere could be created.

REPORT ROYALIST TRIUMPH IN LISBON

Spain Hears the Monarchy Has Been Proclaimed in the Portuguese Capital.

MANUEL STILL IN ENGLAND

South Portugal and the Navy Said to be Loyal to Republican Government.

MADRID, Jan. 24.—The monarchy has been proclaimed in Lisbon, the Portuguese capital, a telegram received here from Valenca, on the Portuguese border, says.

Former Queen Marie Amelie of Portugal, mother of former King Manuel, has arrived here, according to the newspapers. She traveled to Spain incognito.

VIGO, Spain, Jan. 24.—The greater part of the Lisbon garrison has gone over to the Monarchists, it is affirmed in reports on the progress of the Portuguese revolution received here from Coimbra, in northern Portugal and other localities. The wireless station near Lisbon is said to be in Royalist hands.

Troops under Colonel Silveramos, which the Lisbon Government had sent to aid in suppressing the Monarchist rebellion, are reported to have joined the Royalists at Santarem, forty-five miles northeast of the capital.

RADAJOS, Spain, Jan. 24.—The Monarchist movement is apparently making no headway in south Portugal, contrary to the expectations of the Royalists.

In northern Portugal, owing to the failure of the troops to suppress the movement, police forces are to be used against the Monarchists. These forces have been started toward the disturbed districts from southern Portugal.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—According to dispatches from Lisbon the situation is developing adversely for the Government. The Monarchist cause is gaining many adherents in Lisbon and is rapidly extending the field of operations to the north.

The monarchy having been proclaimed at Louza, Sao Thiago, Villa do Conde and Barcellos, it is feared that nothing can now avert civil war.

The widely-circulated rumor that former king Manuel of Portugal was about to land on Portuguese territory is at least premature. Ex-King Manuel was still in London today.

PARIS, Jan. 24, (Havas.)—The Portuguese navy has remained loyal to the Government, according to all accounts received in Madrid. The Madrid newspapers, however, have advices reporting that the army is on the side of the revolutionists.

FOR FRANK DISCUSSION OF ITALY'S CLAIMS

Serb Minister to The Hague Says It Would Have Advantageous Results.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 24.—Speaking to the Serbian Minister, THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today asked how the relations between Italy and Serbia were at the present moment and what settlement was hoped from the Peace Conference.

"The relations between Serbia and Italy have always been excellent, but at the present moment we are confronted by serious difficulties concerning the demarcation of our frontiers, which we firmly believe can be settled but which depend entirely on Italy," he said. "Italy entered the war in order to complete her national union; but we now see her coming out of her frame and attempting to appropriate countries inhabited by Serbo-Croats and Slovenes.

"The example of Dalmatia clearly proves that Italy has not yet adopted President Wilson's ideas. It is a country where the national idea of the Serbo-Croats is absolutely crystalized. Commencing west of Fiume and extending along the Adriatic coast to Montenegro, it is a Serbo-Croat country. Italy even has pretentions to Fiume, based on the fact that there is a majority of a few thousand Italians in the town. Fiume, however, is only a port, behind the walls of which there is not a single Italian to the south. To deprive the Serbo-Croats of this port would be to strangle their commerce.

"To quote an instance: there are more Italians in New York than in Rome or Naples, but Italy would never dream of appropriating New York. As for Istria, Trieste, and the regions of Gorizia and Gradiska, I consider that according to the ideas of President Wilson the situation should be well investigated and studied in the country itself, when it would soon be appreciated that the Serbo-Croat and Slovene claims are based on the conviction that a limitation of frontiers should be formed on the principle of nationalities.

"It would be unfortunate if Italy could not discard old ideas reminiscent of the times when nations were disposed of like a flock of sheep. It would be still more unfortunate because America, England, and France have frankly accepted the principles of self-determination."

"Do you consider that open and free discussion of Italian-South Slavonic relations would bring good results?" the Minister was asked.

"Decidedly," he answered. "We are only too glad to apply Mr. Wilson's principles here, too, and to confront the question openly and frankly. We are convinced that this free discussion would achieve advantageous results for both nations concerned and for the Allies. There are many reasons which impel the Italians, Serbo-Croats and Slovenes to cultivate the best relations. In this way, both nations assure themselves of peace and economic prosperity, and at the same time prepare themselves against the danger of Germanic invasion, which will always remain a danger for the two peoples."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Jan. 23, (via Geneva, Jan. 24.)—Serious dissensions are reported among the Jugoslavs. Croatians and Slovenes are incensed against the Karageorgievic dynasty and the central Government at Belgrade owing to their weak attitude against the Italian encroachments. The Serbians are charged with not seriously demanding Trieste and Istria for the Jugoslavs because they themselves want for Belgrade merely the Dalmatian harbors.

Slovenian and Croatian bad feeling against the Serbian dynasty is partially based upon religious grounds, the Croatians and Slovens being strict Roman Catholics, fear orthodox propaganda under Serbian auspices.

PLOTTED CAPTIVES' ESCAPE.

British Prisoners' Committees Vetoed Vain Projects.

LONDON, Jan. 24. (British Wireless Service.)—The establishment of "Escape Committees" among the British prisoners in German camps and the ingenious schemes devised by captives to get away, are described in an article in The Evening News, by an officer who has just returned after twenty-two months of captivity.

"If you wanted to escape," says the officer, "you had to state your case before the committee, giving the full details of your scheme. If your plan interfered with the chances of another, the committee would sit on it.

"For instance, suppose I told the committee that at a certain hour each day a certain sentry was in the habit of neglecting his duty in some way and that I meant to slip by him. The committee had the power to say: 'That is a way out for six others, you must all make the attempt in three days,' and their word was law.

"In this way obviously impossible schemes were brought to light and vetoed, both in the interest of the officer contemplating flight and his comrades remaining in prison.

"One officer told the committee that he had constructed an improvised parachute out of a big umbrella and he wanted to jump with it off the roof of the prison, which was close to a highway, and float down into the road. The committee said 'No.'

"One of the best escape inventions brought before the committee was a chute made of a long dinner table with a slippery polished top. This was slid down from a window of the prison and on it officers were able to slide down and drop into the road outside."

COPELAND DEFENDS HIS BOARD CHANGES

Health Commissioner and Rabbi Goldstein in Controversy at Hearing.

DR. HARRIS QUESTIONED

Representatives of labor and civic organizations met in the Department of Health Building yesterday on the invitation of Health Commissioner Copeland to present to him their objections to and discuss the advisability of his action in removing the Division of Industrial Hygiene from the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, of which Dr. Louis I. Harris is Director, and placing it nunder the direct care of the Health Commissioner, thereby removing it from Dr. Harris's supervision.

From start to finish the discussion was lively. With considerable heat Dr. Copeland read a statement attributed to one representative that Deputy Health Commissioner Dr. Frank Monaghan, the Mayor's physician, was the real head of the Health Department. This he said was false. At another time, replying to a question, he said the Mayor was not running the Health Department, that the Mayor had given him a free hand and he was not taking orders from any one, but was trying to give a conscientious, honest administration of the health affairs of this city.

Next came the controversy between Dr. Copeland and Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein of the Free Synagogue. Dr. Goldstein had charged that the public has lost confidence in Dr. Copeland's administration of the department.

"If I have to submit my problems to commissions named by you or your committee, I will quit right now." Commissioner Copeland then asked Dr. Goldstein whether he had not been associated with Dr. S. S. Goldwater at Mt. Sinai Hospital. Dr. Goldwater was the expert suggested by Dr. Goldstein for a member of the proposed committee to pass on the Health Department program, and it was Dr. Goldwater with whom Dr. Copeland differed as to methods of handling the influenza epidemic.

In the exchange that followed Dr. Goldstein said he was biased in favor of the workers of the city, and Commissioner Copeland replied that he as Health Officer was in a position to help labor while the rabbi was not. Waving a newspaper clipping Dr. Copeland said: "If you are showing labor the way to heaven by such misstatements, then I want to follow another leader."

In the course of his remarks, Dr. Goldstein gave Dr. Copeland the impression that he was claiming to represent the different delegates present. He jumped to his feet. "Are these various groups led by Dr. Goldstein?" he asked. There were shouts of "No," and a man who said he represented 50,000 longshoremen assured the Commissioner that he never saw Dr. Goldstein before.

There was a difference of opinion as to whether Dr. Harris should be present. Some contended that it would be embarrassing for him to appear. While the discussion was in progress Dr. Harris came in. Dr. Copeland told him to answer with frankness the questions that those present might ask. He did so. These related to the work of the Division of Industrial Hygiene.

Many of those present pointed out that it was Dr. Harris who had shown labor the necessity for industrial hygiene, and that he had accomplished something notwithstanding handicaps that included a lack of inspectors for the work. For this reason they wanted him retained as head of the bureau. One labor union man summed up their position when he said: "Labor will stick to Dr. Harris to the end."

Among those who attended the meeting were Edward C. Rybicl, Central Federated Union; Mrs. Frederick Nathan, Consumers' League; Dr. George M. Price, Joint Board of Sanitary Control; Edward Bliven and Ann Hogan, Labor Sanitary Conference; Leon H. Rouse, Typographical Union No. 6; Frank M. Gaa, Painters' and Decorators' Union; Rose Scheiderman, Woman's Trades Union League; Mrs. Elmer Blair, Woman's City Club; Miss Lillian D. Wald, Henry Street Settlement; Dr. Ira S. Wile, editor of American Medicine; Miss Sarah Mulhall, Women's Organization of Sanitary Control; Dr. Mason Pittman, Riverdale Asylum; Mrs. Ellen O'Gorman Stanton, and Superintendent Simmons of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum.

ACCUSES INSURANCE MEN.

Federal Grand Jury Indicts Two, Who Deny Charges.

Edward Meinel and William Y. Wemple of the firm of Meinel & Wemple, Inc., insurance brokers, who were arrested on Dec. 26, were indicted yesterday by the Federal Grand Jury for alleged violation of the Trading with the Enemy Act and were held in $10,000 bail each. The defendants succeeded to the business of H. Mutzenbacher, Jr., a German concern, in October, 1917, as the American agents of the Salamanda Insurance Company and the Second Russian Insurance Company, Russian corporations.

The fifteen specific charges in the indictment are to the effect that the defendants have done business with one Paul Clausen of Copenhagen in the placing of reinsurance or property in this city for the account of Mutzenbacher, and have conducted business without having obtained a license, which was only possible with the consent of the President; and that they had sent abroad by mail corrections of real estate maps in this city showing how the insurance was placed.

In a statement the defendants said that the indictment was predicated upon communications between them and Russian and French reinsurance companies in October, 1917, and within a few days after the passage of the act they are accused of violating. They say that they still represent the Russian concerns and also the Paternelle Insurance Company of Paris. They denied that they had ever traded with the enemy or that any of the concerns represented by them had any enemy connections.

Arthur Weiner, who was born in Berlin in 1884, was arrested yesterday by agents of the Department of Justice on suspicion of being an enemy alien, and was sent to Ellis Island to await further investigation. It was said that Weiner had escaped military service in Germany because of his physical condition, that he learned the trade of a printer in his uncle's shop in Berlin, and that he came here in 1908 with the intention of learning the newspaper business.

Other information gathered concerning him by the authorities is to the effect that he returned to Germany in 1910, and after his uncle's death in 1911 returned here. It is alleged that when the war began he reported to the German Consul, and early in 1915 became interested in Jeremiah O'Leary and the latter's American Truth Society.

Federal Judge A. N. Hand issued an order yesterday directing that all of the papers taken from the law office of Jeremiah A. O'Leary, when he fled from this city in May last, be returned to him with a few exceptions. The court said that the theory that O'Leary lost any right to his flight from justice would not bear analysis, and that flight could not transfer title to property, but any papers used in the trial of O'Leary without protest could be retained.

INQUEST IN SETON TRAGEDY.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A Coroner's jury today brought in a verdict of willful murder against Lieut. Col. Norman Cecil Rutherford of the Medical Corps of the British Army in connection with the death of Major Miles Charles Seton of Melbourne.

Major Seton was shot at the home of his cousin in London on Jan. 13. A detective testified that after the arrest of Colonel Rutherford, Rutherford wrote a note to his wife saying:

"I am sorry. The worst possible has happened. Seton is dead."

Mrs. Rutherford's maid testified that in the absence of Colonel Rutherford in France, Major Seton several times visited the Rutherford house and remained there for week-ends. On the day of the shooting, the maid declared, there was some trouble between Colonel Rutherford and his wife, after which Rutherford left the house, telling the maid not to place his revolver in his travelling bag.

The Coroner read extracts from letters written by Mrs. Rutherford to her husband stating that she wanted him to gain his freedom and would not place any obstacle in the way of a divorce.

ROW IN THE POLICE BAND.

Trial at Headquarters Reveals Discord Among Musicians.

There is discord in the Police Department Band, it became nown yesterday, when Patrolman Albin Johnson, French horn player, was put on trial before Deputy Commissioner John W. Goff, Jr., charged with having been disrespectful to Edward F. Goldman, conductor of the Band. The alleged offense occurred at a rehearsal in the Seventh Regiment Armory on Oct. 28 last, and was incidental to a protest by one faction of the band against the conductor. It was said that twenty-five bandsmen sided with the conductor and seventy-five were against him.

Conductor Goldman testified that Johnson had threatened to throw him out of the hall and had grabbed up the conductor's music stand. When this occurred, he said, the unfriendly faction had surrounded him and some one had pulled the baton from his hand.

Johnson in his defense said that as Chairman of the musical committee, it was his duty to distribute the music. The rehearsal was to have started at 10 o'clock but Goldman insisted in starting ten minutes earlier and had distributed the music. His protest consisted, he said, in saying: "You've an awful nerve to do that." Then he took the stand away.

One witness testified to hearing someone shout: "Don't lay your hands on Goldman as it constitutes an assault." The rehearsal ended in a great commotion. Decision was reserved.

LEVIATHAN SAILS IN A GALE.

After being delayed twenty-four hours by fog the American transport Leviathan left Pier 5, Hoboken, at 11:30 yesterday morning for Brest with nearly 1,000 passengers. The northwest gale was blowing eighty miles an hour and came with terrific force against the side of the Leviathan, which stands ninety-five feet out of water. Captain W. W. Phelps realized that force was needed to cope with the wintry blast and ordered the tugs to push against her port bow and straighten her out so he could use her four propellers to advantage without making trouble for other shipping. It took nearly an hour, but the transport got away at 12:25 and headed out of the harbor. She was reported to have touched a sandbar near the Narrows, but it was denied by the Navy Department afterward.

Among the passengers was William G. Sharp, the United States Ambassador to France, and his son, five Commissioners from the United States Shipping Board, headed by E. E. Palen, who are going over to investigate freight and passenger traffic from Brest to Bombay, and Brig. Gen. Hines, who will consult the British Government as to what sum is to be paid finally for the transport of American troops to France and back to New York. So far a tentative sum of $35 a head has been paid.

"This is a widow's pittance," said the letter, "for a man so brave." The letter was from Mrs. Mary Pherinto of Fennington, Va. William Loeb, Jr., former secretary to Colonel Roosevelt when he was President, was elected President of the memorial committee at a meeting of the local committee here tonight. John P. Birmingham was elected First Vice President, and Colgate Hoyt, Second Vice President. Mortimer L. Schiff will be Treasurer.

Announcement was made yesterday that the National Association of Audubon Societies and affiliated organizations would begin work at once for the erection in New York or Washington of a Roosevelt memorial bird fountain. Eminent American sculptors will be asked to present plans, it was said, and a national committee of nature lovers and sportsmen would soon be formed to advance the project.

CROMWELL TWINS END LIVES AT SEA

received a telegram from his sisters last Tuesday which read:

"Missed steamer; sailing Espagne."

He knew that they were about to leave France, where for over a year they had been acting as canteen workers for the Red Cross. Up to last night he had received no word from his bankers in Paris, whom he cabled in an effort to determine whether his sisters actually sailed on La Lorraine. He was inclined to disbelieve it himself, and discredited the report that they had purposely ended their lives. He said that the last letters which had been received from them were most cheerful.

The Misses Cromwell lived together in a fashionable apartment building at 555 Park Avenue. Before sailing for Europe last year they sublet their apartment, but recently notified their brother that they intended to return. The maid who had previously been in their employ was re-engaged, and for the past week was getting their home in readiness.

The sisters were both members of the Colony Club and traced their descent to the stock from which Oliver Cromwell sprang. Their father, Frederick Cromwell, who died in 1914, left a large fortune to his children. Mary, who has been residing at 46 Rue Spontoni, Paris; Dorothea, and Gladys, and one son, Seymour. Frederick Cromwell for many years was Trustee of the Mutual Life Insurance Company and Director in many large corporations.

After the outbreak of the war the Misses Cromwell abandoned their social activities to take up war work. They had long wished to go to France and help in whatever way they could, and being inseparable all their lives were happy when the opportunity came for them to go over together for the Red Cross. They had been under fire several times on the battle front.

A cheery letter was received by their housekeeper on Christmas day in which they said that they doubted very much their ability to come home because they were still needed in France. All the letters they wrote home, particularly those of recent date, were written in a cheery tone, and their friends here could not conceive of any reason for suicide.

The Cromwells have a large country estate at Bernardsville, N. J. The sisters were wealthy and gave much out of their fortune to the Red Cross.

LISTS AMERICANS KNOWN AS PACIFISTS

you discovered that in many universities there were professors who subscribed to these dangerous and anarchistic sentiments?"

"A very large number," Mr. Stevenson answered.

"And participated in this class of revolutionary and Bolshevist meetings and organizations?"

"Quite a large number of them, mostly among professors of sociology, economics, and history."

"It seems to me," said Senator King, "that this is a good time for the States and those who control the universities to look into this matter."

"I should like to get a list of these professors," added Senator Nelson.

"I have a 'Who's Who' here that I have prepared, giving a brief biographic sketch of each," replied Mr. Stevenson.

The list was submitted for the pruning process and some sixty or seventy names were eliminated. Those eliminated, it was stated, were persons who had ceased activities of a pacifist and anti-war nature after this country declared war.

HOW TO GAUGE MEN
Before Science took hold of the matter, men would judge their fellows by what they called "first impressions" or "intuitions." Now-a-days, it is said, there is a sound scientific basis for judging character by physical signs. Here are five books which explain different phases of the subject:

GARRISON SEES GOOD FUTURE FOR B. R. T.

ASKS THE PUBLIC TO HELP

Lindley M. Garrison, receiver of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, spoke yesterday at a luncheon given by the Bond Club at the Bankers' Club. He called attention to the fact that the B. R. T. system is the largest organization of its kind in the world. It was made up, he said, of fourteen constituent companies, operated 520 miles of street surface railroad and some 200 miles of elevated and subway lines. Last year, he said, it carried something like 771,000,000 passengers, and the gross income was not far from $30,000,000.

"In so far as the present situation of the company is concerned," continued Mr. Garrison, "it is attributed to a policy which has been pursued for many years, by which the parent company, out of income that it received from operating revenue, has spent that money for betterments and improvements, capital expenditures for the subsidiaries, taking therefor their certificates of indebtedness, and not floating in turn from their own resources, bonds or stock or other means of raising capital to replace that money. It has on hand today some $37,000,000 of these certificates of indebtedness, and when it was faced with the necessity of making capital expenditures, almost wholly capital expenditures, amounting to $16,000,000, which we have got to have to complete the obligations of the company in respect of the subway contract, and to complete its own roads on account of the arrangement with the Public Service Commission and the city, they were in no position to market their securities—the market was in no position to absorb any security that they might put out—and they were face to face with a stone wall, and had to seek the protection of the court.

Outlines His Policy.

"Now, as to the policy to be pursued by the court and the receiver, of course I can speak only in generalities. We have, as you know, of course, but one single policy in all that we do. We realize that this is a public service corporation, a quasi-public institution, and that its primary duty is to the citizens, to the public, and, of course, we intend, to the fullest measure that the facilities admit of, to devote them to the best possible service that can be given to the public. We realize that in doing that we are serving our trust, because the other obligation of the trust is to the people who have put their money into this property, who have financed it, and who are entitled to proper treatment of their investment.

"In doing this, as you can well realize, we have a many-sided proposition. We are dependent absolutely upon harmony and helpfulness from all those whose duty or whose personal relations bring them in contact with us. We have to work through and with and under the city authorities, both the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate, and, of course, our purpose is to work in absolute harmony with them. We do not purpose to start out with good intentions and then run amuck, by which I mean to put into effect any half-baked theories, or half-thought-out remedies. One may as easily kill a patient from good designs badly carried out, as from evil designs, and many good properties are ruined by people with the best intentions who put into effect over night a plan which is not well thought out and which does not produce a solution of the problems involved.

"We hope, therefore, that those who are interested, and that practically includes everybody, will endeavor in every way that is in their power to sympathize with our difficulties, and to hearten and cheer us on our way of progress when we are headed in the right direction, and I, for one, have very little, if any, fear that eventually the dark clouds that now overshadow the situation will turn out their silver linings, and the situation will turn into one of great promise for the future."

Sees Hard Road for Garrison.

Jacob H. Schiff, another speaker, said: "I am sure that Colonel Williams had tremendous difficulties to overcome, and these finally became greater than any human being could surmount. In consequence, Judge Garrison had to take his place. I do not think the way for Mr. Garrison is an easy one. He has a very great property that does not need, as I understand it, very much money in order to get it into good shape; something like $16,000,000 to $20,000,000, I believe. When you consider the amount of money that has gone into that property, there ought not to be, there cannot be, any difficulty in raising $16,000,000. Nor is there any danger to the security holders in this. When I speak of security holders, I mean the creditors, I do not mean the stockholders.

"While I think the stockholders eventually will get a good property back, a property that, with fair treatment by the public, can earn sufficient to pay an equitable return even on the stock, the stockholders should understand that it is necessary, in order to get the property in good condition, to put their hands in their pockets to eventually clear the property from any temporary debt that may have to be created to complete it. But the property, as everybody agrees, is a good one. If my judgment is worth anything, there is very little danger to its securities—I mean to its bonds—and no one will lose any money in it if Mr. Garrison, as we all hope, is kept in charge."

Travis H. Whitney, acting Chairman of the Public Service Commission, was another speaker at the luncheon. He said he was not so much interested in what fare should be charged on the traction lines as he was to have some scheme worked out to increase the revenue in order to remove the fixed charges on the city's investment from the tax budget.

Receiver Garrison called on the Mayor at the City Hall yesterday, presumably to give in person his answer to the Mayor's letter of a few days ago, in which he said that the wooden cars operated on the Chambers Street line were a "grave menace to human life." Neither the Mayor nor Mr. Garrison had anything to say about the meeting when it was over.

Mr. Garrison said yesterday that he contemplated offering the job of President of the road from which Colonel Timothy S. Williams has resigned to a practical railroad man of international reputation. Colonel Williams's resignation is to take effect on Jan. 31. His salary has been $50,000 a year. Mr. Garrison said the name of his successor would be made known very soon and that his relations to the receiver would be similar to that of Chief of Staff of the army to the Secretary of War.

HUBBARD OUT OF CITY JOB.

Street Cleaning Deputy Resigned, It Is Said, at Hylan's Request.

It become known yesterday that H. Warren Hubbard had resigned several days ago as First Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner. Mr. Hubbard was appointed on April 4 last at a salary of $5,000 a year. He lives at 105 East 116th Street and he is one of the Tammany leaders in the Eighteenth Assembly District. Mr. Hubbard resigned, it was said, at the request of the Mayor, who said that he did not want politicians in the department. Commissioner McStay was asked yesterday what the Mayor had in mind.

"I don't know. He did not tell me," replied the Commissioner.

Alfred A. Taylor, General Superintendent of the department, has been assigned as Acting First Deputy until an appointment is made.

COMPLAIN TO SMITH OF ESTIMATE BOARD

Service Commission Tells Governor Attitude Endangers Whole Transit Program.

POINTS TO FUNDS HELD UP

Criticises Contract Settlements Made by Controller—Calls Situation Serious.

The Public Service Commission delivered a letter to Governor Smith yesterday, complaining of the antagonistic attitude of the Board of Estimate, which it was alleged, threatens not only to delay the completion of the dual system of rapid transit but to subject the people to large additional expenditures. Many of the accusations levelled at the board are serious, such as encouraging claims against the city by contractors, danger to life and limb through the enforced dismissal of engineers and inspectors by curtailment of appropriations, and failure to recognise any of the factors controlling the rapid transit situation under the law.

Travis H. Whitney, acting Chairman of the commission, who signed the letter, has spent much of his time recently in Albany and it was conjectured that the letter was framed at the suggestion of some important State official for the purpose of having the situation, as it is viewed by the commission, in concrete form. The letter goes much into detail and sets forth the duties of the commission in the making of plans and records and of supervision of all branches of the rapid transit work and points out that so important has the engineering staff been considered that it has never been touched through all of the many other changes which have taken place in the personnel of the commission. To show how important the financial end of the work is to the people the letter says that the commission has completed and is now operating municipal lines which have cost $123,000,000 to construct, that there are now outstanding contracts aggregating $80,000,000, and "that about one-fourth of the entire work remains to be done.

After describing its efforts to hurry forward the work in the face of manifold difficulties caused by the war the commission says it has been further delayed and harassed by the Board of Estimate's "failure and neglect of duty to recognize the good faith, credit and obligations controlling the entire situation," and that the matter has grown till it requires the Governor's attention.

Then the requisition of the commission for an appropriation of $1,999,966 to carry on the work is described. This requisition was made on Dec. 3, and, the commission says, after many delays on the pretext of desiring further detailed information, all of which was at the disposal and within easy reach of the board, the appropriation was so reduced on Dec. 30 that it was necessary to dismiss immediately 377 employes, nearly all of them engineers. The result of this curtailment was summed up by the commission, which said that work on final estimates was stopped, necessary inspection of work and material made impossible, and the demoralization of the entire force threatened at a most critical time, because of the unfair treatment of many faithful and efficient employes.

In addition to these things, the letter says, there is also the great evil resulting from the inability of the commission to restore former employes who have been fighting at the front, and the impossibility of enlarging the field of employment at a time when it is most desirable.

Both were shopping but with such different methods.

Mrs. Necessary being a Modernist takes advantage of every convenience for conserving time and energy.

Mrs. Unnecessary—well she realizes the difference herself, for she exclaimed to Mrs. Necessary, "I look like a human express van and you go around with nothing but your husband on your arm and a bank book in your hand."

Mrs. Necessary explained that it wasn't a bank book but a Blue Card, the key to modern shopping problems.

It eliminates waiting for parcels or change. You go your way from department to department without the inconvenience of carrying small bundles, at the risk of occasionally dropping one.

Just ask any salesclerk for a Blue Card, take it with you to various sections where you purchase. WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—By a vote of 53 to 18, the Senate today passed the bill appropriating $100,000,000 as called for by President Wilson for food for famine relief in Europe. The House passed the bill a short time ago by a vote of 272 to 43.

Voting for the Bill—53.

Voting Against the Bill—18.

DEMOCRATS—Gore, Hardwick, and Myers.

REPUBLICANS—Borah, Calder, Fernald, France, Harding, Johnson of California, Kenyon, La Follette, Moses, McNary, Penrose, Poindexter, Sherman, Townsend, and Watson.

The bill had met with severe criticism, some Senators alleging that it was "only a scheme to help along the great packers," by forcing the packers' products to Europe.

The Senate included in the bill the stipulation that the fund should be used for the relief of the people of Europe outside the Central Empires, whereas the House bill provided only that the relief should be afforded outside of Germany. The Senate also specified that some of the relief should be given to Armenian, Syrian, and other Christian and Jewish populations of Asia Minor, now subjects of Turkey.

There were several speeches made today against the bill. Senator La Follette, in particular, exhibiting decided antagonism. He said it was impossible to support the measure as a war proposition, as the country was not now at war, and he added, in allusion to the American occupation of Russian territory, that this was a "violation of the Constitution." Breed lines before August 1 were predicted by Senator La Follette.

"Sending food abroad will make the high cost of living go still higher," he said.

Another opponent was Senator Borah of Idaho, who characterized the bill as creating "the most remarkable situation" since he entered the Senate. He declared that not more than 5 per cent. of the Senators favored the bill, yet the majority would vote for it. He said that the Senate was in "mortal dread," and would vote for a bill it knew nothing of. Senator Borah also charged that secrecy surrounded the Peace Conference, and the only news given out about it was that it met at noon and adjourned for the afternoon. This sort of procedure, he declared, was against the solemn promise of the President that all negotiations should be conducted in the open.

"In all my legislative experience," said Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, "I have never been quite so perplexed or found it quite so difficult to make up my mind as to what my duty in the circumstances was. The manner in which this proposition has been presented to Congress has been so inadequate, so vague, and so difficult of clarification that it is hard to feel willing to support it.

"Still greater would be my unwillingness to fail to vote for a measure, especially a measure for joint action by the allied Governments, agreed upon by the Interallied Council that, properly clarified and properly carried out, should subserve their common aims in the war. I have, therefore, concluded to cast my vote in favor of the appropriation."

RIDDER DEFENDS EDITORIAL

Says It Was Based on Cable Messages to New York English Papers.

Bernard H. Ridder, editor and publisher of the New York Staats-Zeitung, commenting yesterday on the testimony read into the record of the Senate Committee on Propaganda, at its hearing in Washington on Thursday, in which an editorial in the newspaper was cited as German propaganda, said the editorial, which appeared on Dec. 8, was written by his express order.

"The editorial in question," Mr. Ridder said, "was based entirely upon cables sent to New York newspapers by their special correspondents in Coblenz or Cologne, telling of the kindly manner in which the American troops had treated the German people in the Rhine section, and of the way in which this attitude by our soldiers had been reciprocated by the German population."

Mr. Ridder denied that the Staats-Zeitung had ever received money from the German Government, and said he was indignant over the mass of "insinuations" made by Archibald E. Stevenson of the Military Intelligence Service.

READY FOR GARMENT STRIKE

Schlesinger Says Trouble Was Anticipated Last July.

Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 35,000 of whose members are striking against the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, announced yesterday that the union's Settlement Committee had received about 400 applications for settlement from independent manufacturers, and that the work preliminary to ending the strike in their shops would begin on Monday.

John Mitchell, Chairman of the State Industrial Commission, held several conferences with dress contractors and jobbers yesterday, and today will meet union leaders.

Replying to a statement issued by the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, which asserted that the union had anticipated the strike as early as last September, and had collected a strike assessment of a day's wages from the workers at that time, Mr. Schlesinger said yesterday:

"We began to anticipate this strike in the waist and dress industry as far back as July 29, or rather, from that first time that Mr. Gordon [Harry A. Gordon, counsel for the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association] appeared before the Board of Arbitration held on that date, as attorney for the Manufacturers' Association. His conduct at that meeting was of such a nature, as pages 23 and 28 of the official minutes of the meeting show, that he was severely rebuked by the Chairman of the Board, Judge Julian W. Mack, for his savage attacks upon the Board. Mr. Gordon's attitude at that meeting convinced our committee that trouble in the waist and dress industry was coming, and we are now glad that we had sufficient foresight to tax our members with a day's wages so that the Association might not find us in a defenseless position."

Morris Weiss, President of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association, charged yesterday that there was documentary evidence to show that the union had fomented the strike and therefore that the full responsibility for the strike fell upon the union.

"The collective agreement which was made expired on Dec. 31" said Mr. Weiss, "and it was confidently expected by the association that prior to that time arrangements would be made for its renewal. The union had no thought of renewing the agreement. It had determined upon a strike at the very time it stipulated in writing that the increases which were granted it in August should continue in effect during the period of renewed agreement. It proceeded forthwith to levy and collect a fund for the strike which it determined to call shortly after the expiration of the agreement. The Union has fully carried out this plan."

Attached to the statement was a copy of one of the receipts which the union issues to its workers in the factory of L. Heller & Co., 116 West Thirty-second Street, indicating that the union collected $101.80 for the strike fund in that shop. "This is not the largest amount we collected in one shop," said Mr. Schlesinger. "In several shops the amounts ran as high as $700 and $800, collected for the reason I explained."

CHANGE TIME OF MURDER.

Detective Believes Discovery Bears Out O'Donnell's Confession.

When Patrick O'Donnell, self-confessed murderer of Miss Marie Riddell of Glen Morris, is arraigned in the Jamaica Police Court today, Detective Charles Krummel will offer some newly-discovered evidence which, he believes, tends to corroborate O'Donnell's confession, notwithstanding efforts to prove that O'Donnell was at work in Manhattan when the crime was committed.

Krummel believes that the murder was committed at 6 P. M. on Jan. 15—not 7 P. M., as had been thought from the time the body was discovered. Since it was learned that O'Donnell probably was in a saloon near his home on Lexington Avenue, Manhattan, between 7:15 and 7:30 on the night of the murder, Detective Krummel has been checking up Miss Riddell's movements. He found by questioning Miss Anna Ahlers and Miss Anna Carroll, who accompanied her from Manhattan to Glen Morris, that Miss Riddell boarded a train in Manhattan at 5:10 P. M. The train reached the end of the line, where she alighted, at 6 P. M., instead of 7, and the murder occurred within ten minutes after that.

By making good train connections, O'Donnell could have left the scene and reached the Manhattan saloon by 7:15 o'clock, Krummel says. When he entered the saloon he was trembling and highly excited, the detective has learned, and explained his condition by saying he had just had another epileptic seizure. Krummel believes he may then have returned to the factory where he was employed and duly punched his time card when leaving at 8:53 P. M.

Notwithstanding the new evidence discovered by the police, it was said last night that O'Donnell probably would be released following his arraignment today. District Attorney O'Leary said last night that he did not have evidence to warrant him in asking the Magistrate to keep O'Donnell in custody, and unless the evidence is materially strengthened he is expected to recommend his discharge.

FOOD PRICES DECLINE AS STOCKS INCREASE

MILD WINTER ONE FACTOR

New York Authority Says Relaxation of Regulations Has Restored Law of Supply and Demand.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Big reductions in prices of eggs, butter, and, in some instances, of meats brought joy to the Chicago housewife today. The decline in prices which has been in progress for a week is heralded as the preliminary step in a general lowering of household commodities.

Butter today took another slump of 3 cents a pound, making a decline of 19 cents wholesale since Jan. 13. Egg prices followed in the smash at the high cost of living and were quoted from 2½ to 3 cents a dozen lower, a drop of from 13 to 15 cents within a few days.

Retailers, however, were charging from 67 to 80 cents a dozen for eggs and their butter prices were only 5 or 6 cents under the top prices charged a week ago.

Meat prices have also tumbled. Pork, which was selling at 30 cents a pound, dropped to 22 cents. Veal and lamb are from 3 to 4 cents a pound lower.

Various reasons are assigned for the slump, but the one that makes the housewife most cheerful is that the goods were not moving, which meant that prices must fall, which goes to prove that when prices get to a point where the public cannot purchase the dealer must let go and stand a loss if necessary.

"The public could not buy butter and eggs at the prices asked," said one wholesaler today. "What with paying for Liberty bonds, the general high cost of all foods, and men and women losing their war-time wages, they could not pay the prices and the stuff was not moving. The butter and egg market is paralyzed, and will drop still lower."

Following a sharp slump in wholesale prices of meats, eggs, and butter, and some other commodities, due to the mild Winter and the increased supply, there has been a gradual decrease in the retail prices in many stores in New York, and the prediction was made last night by persons posted on the food situation that there would be further "breaks" in retail prices. Meats are expected to take another tumble today.

"The reason the consumer has not felt the reduction before now that has prevailed in wholesale prices for some days was explained yesterday to be because in many shops and markets purchases were made by the retailer before the decline, and he felt that he ought to keep up prices until his present supply was exhausted. Persons in touch with the situation said that a sharp decline in prices to the consumer was bound to come within a few days. There has already been a marked decrease in the price of butter, many stores offering first-grade creamery at 61 cents a pound. In its weekly review of the wholesale situation this morning, the New York Daily Market Report, edited by P. Q. Foy, says:

"The sharp decline in all kinds of food products this week is the result of the relaxation of the Food Administration rules, which has permitted the law of supply and demand to prevail. The heavy quantity of frozen foods in the warehouses in connection with the increasing number of unemployed artisans and other workers which has impaired the purchasing power of consumers and resulted in a lower range of values. It is impossible to quote prices that would enable shippers to check up their account of sales accurately, as considerable stock of all kinds was carried over unsold from last week and worked out from day to day this week at rapidly declining prices."

The New York Federal Food Board has ceased to function so far as fixing prices is concerned. For some time the board issued what was known as a "Fair Price List," which all dealers were required to post conspicuously in their shops. The last list was issued on Jan. 14, and there has been a decided break in wholesale prices since that time. It was explained yesterday that a great many of the dealers are continuing to charge the same margin of profit they were allowed by the Federal Food Board, and are not taking into consideration the fact that the Food Board allowed an abnormal margin of profit in view of curtailment of sales due to the war conservation program.

Best creamery butter was selling retail yesterday at from 61 to 65 cents, creamery extra 58 to 60 cents, good table butter 56 to 58 cents, cooking butter 50 to 54 cents, extra unsalted 65 to 70 cents. Select candled eggs are now 68 to 70 cents, white hennery eggs 70 to 80 cents, and brown hennery eggs 70 to 75 cents.

Onions, which are plentiful, show only a slight decline. Red fancy are selling at 3 to 4 cents a pound, while white onions bring 8 to 10 cents. Florida new cabbage brings 5 and 6 cents, old White Danish 4 to 5 cents, and old domestic 3 to 4 cents.

URGES PROLONGING HOOVER'S CONTROL

Swift Advocates Regulation of Live Stock Prices Until the Times Are Normal.

SEES DISASTER OTHERWISE

Packer Denies Licensing Has Been of Great Benefit—Tells About Propaganda.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Regulation of livestock prices so as to assure a stable market, either through continuing the Food Administration or by establishing some similar system of control, was discussed today before the House Interstate Commerce Committee by Louis F. Swift, President of Swift & Co., who said a stable price over the periods of production was desirable, and declared that if Food Administration restrictions were removed now disaster would result.

Members of the committee evinced considerable interest in the statements of the packer, and Representative Stephens of Nebraska announced that he thought there should be some Government agency to control prices irrespective of war conditions.

Violent fluctuations of prices were predicted by Mr. Swift if food administration control should be removed. He seemed to doubt that Government control over the sale of livestock at agreed prices would be practicable in normal times, pointing out that the success of the food administration's guarantee of a minimum price for meat animals had been due to the fact that the administration dominated the market through control of purchases for the Allied armies.

"Anything that will make for a steady average price is better than the same price reached through sharp declines and increases," Mr. Swift said. He added that "constructive co-operation" would accomplish more than anything else, but that this was in violation of the Sherman law.

Effect of Licensing Feature.

Chairman Sims asked Mr. Swift if the licensing feature of Food Administration Control had not been of great benefit, but the witness did not agree, declaring the success achieved had been due to co-operation among producers, packers, and the Government representatives.

A bill to regulate the meat packing industry is pending before the committee, containing a license clause which the packers have opposed vigorously as threatening the extinction of the business.

"Wouldn't it be advisable to extend in some form for this year or until normal conditions are restored the licensing or food control now exercised, without passing any other part of this bill or by amending the food control law?" asked Mr. Sims.

"I think it would be advisable to extend the Food Administration's control until after peace," Mr. Swift said. "It has cut down our profits, but we are satisfied."

Mr. Swift took occasion to say that passage of the $100,000,000 famine relief appropriation would not benefit the packers, because they expect sufficient demand to take all their products, despite the enormous supplies accumulated at war prices. Representative Hamilton had asked about reports that the English people refused to eat great quantities of preserved pork since the war crisis had passed, and that the appropriation was to enable the sending of it to Southwestern Europe.

"We find the English people are buying their normal amounts of bacon, ham, &c.," Mr. Swift said.

"I didn't anticipate you were going to send 70 cents a pound bacon to those other people," said Mr. Hamilton.

Expenditure of $400,000 last year to counteract Federal Trade Commission "propaganda," and the employment of Thomas F. Logan of Washington, a former newspaperman, to advise Swift & Co. regarding publicity, attracted considerable interest from members of the committee. Henry Veeder, counsel for Swift & Co., insisted that the expenses came out of stockholders' profits and not out of consumers.

"Any expense so unessential is a public injury in a business so vital to the country, because otherwise you could reduce your prices that much," declared Chairman Sims. "It is such things that have put a bad taste in the public's mouth as to the packing industry."

Mr. Swift said advertisements were placed without any thought of influencing the policies of papers.

At the close of the hearing Mr. Sims thanked Mr. Swift for being frank and not quibbling, and said he thought the witness had had a "fair, square" opportunity of representing his side. Mr. Swift said he was positive he had.

ARMOUR FACES HENEY IN CROSS-EXAMINATION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Francis J. Heney, who conducted the investigation of the packing industry for the Federal Trade Commission, began cross-examination of J. Ogden Armour today before the Senate Agricultural Committee which is considering meat control bills. It was at the instance of Senator Norris of Nebraska that Mr. Heney took up the examination.

"If this is to be a prosecution I should object very much," said Senator Page of Vermont, when Senator Norris made his motion. Levy Mayer of Chicago, attorney for Mr. Armour, assented to the cross-examination upon condition that he should have the privilege of asking witnesses questions. Before Senator Page made his remark, Mr. Mayer said:

"It is very important that we know in advance whether this is to be an investigation or a prosecution."

"There's no suggestion of a prosecution; we merely want the facts," said Senator Gore of Oklahoma, the committee Chairman.

Nothing of sensational interest developed at the hearing today. Mr. Heney appeared to be laying a thorough foundation for further cross-examination. He went into the early history of the Armour firm, dating back to the time when Mr. Armour became associated with it at the age of 19, in 1882. In 1911 he became President upon the death of his father.

"Mere volume of business does not mean success," said Mr. Armour. "Volume without intelligent direction is no good. Volume alone will not make money, nor pay bills."

"Do you think it is to the advantage of the consumer to have the packing business concentrated in a few plants?" asked Mr. Heney.

Mr. Armour replied that the consumer now paid but a small profit to the packer.

"The only reason we can do business on such a small percentage is the size of our concern," he said in explanation.

Mr. Heney commented that the Armour advertisements stated that the company made but $1 a head on cattle, as compared with the shippers' profit of $50.

"You make your $1 in two weeks; it may take the shipper three years to make his $50," said the attorney.

"It depends on whether he buys the beef or raises it," replied Mr. Armour.

"But, we have no quarrel with the shipper. He can make as much money as he pleases."

The packer said he had no conversation with Mr. Hoover, nor did he know, as Senator Gore asked, that the Food Administrator went to Paris to "try to arrange a larger market for packing-house goods."

HINES ASKS FUND TO FINANCE ROADS

month's operating expenses and approximately this amount is necessary to enable the Railroad Administration and the various railroads under its control to meet without delay their payrolls, vouchers, and other cash requirements.

2.—The Railroad Administration had on hand as of Dec. 31, 1918, approximately the following additional current assets:

Agents' and conductors' balances	$154,000,000
Advances temporarily made to railroad corporations on open account, for which in effect materials and supplies are held collateral	100,000,000
Total	$254,000,000
Less outstanding current liabilities	162,047,865
Balance	$91,952,135
Forward	339,952,135

This net balance of these current assets will become again available in cash at the end of Federal control, but pending Federal control is inevitably tied up as a part of the working cash capital of the Railroad Administration.

Covers Loan to the New Haven.

This amount will be eventually paid with interest, but the greater part of it, and perhaps all of it, will not be paid until after the end of the calendar year 1919.

4.—Invested in necessary additions and betterments actually made during the year 1918 over and above the amount which the companies can immediately repay out of their rental and out of the balances due them on open account for the calendar year 1918 $200,918,283

This amount will eventually be paid with interest to the Railroad Administration. The rapidity with which it can be paid is dependent upon financial conditions and the ability of the railroad corporations to borrow this money in the open market without undue disturbance of financial conditions and without undue interference with the financing of the Government.

It will be observed that while all this amount of cash is temporarily tied up in the Government's conduct of the railroad business, it is expected that the entire amount will be eventually repaid, but temporarily it cannot be repaid, as above indicated, and therefore provision has to be made for carrying it.

5. In addition, the Railroad Administration will have paid the operating loss for 1918, i. e., the difference between the standard return due the railroads and the net operating income derived by the Government from railroad operations, this difference amounting to $196,000,000.

This loss was due largely to the fact that increased rates were effective for only six months approximately, while increased expenses were effective to a large extent for the entire twelve months, due partly to the unprecedented weather last Winter (the railroads having shown an operating loss of over $100,000,000 for the first four months of 1918 as compared with 1917, although no increased wages were included in these months, and while the corporations themselves were still operating the railroads as agents of the Director General) and partly to conducting business at whatever cost was necessary to meet the needs of war.

This represents the only item in the entire expenditure for the calendar year 1918 (except a portion of the next succeeding item) which is a loss to the Government, and ought frankly to be charged as part of the cost of the war and should be regarded as an exceedingly low cost for the result accomplished.

Work on Inland Waterways.

6. In addition, the Railroad Administration has expended during the year 1918 in connection with inland waterways $4,361,486.

Of this amount $500,000 represents operating deficit during the year 1918. It must be remembered that this operating deficit was incurred in the early and formative stages of Government operation upon the inland waterways, and cannot be regarded as indicating in any way that similar losses are to be expected when the operation shall be fully developed.

The balance, or $3,861,486, represents boats and other property acquired by the Government for operation of inland waterways, and which, of course, can and will continue to be so employed.

Grand total	$681,806,904
Amount of revolving fund	500,000,000
Amount to be provided to settle all accounts for 1918	$81,806,904

In order, therefore, to settle in full accounts of the Railroad Administration for the calendar year 1918 it will be necessary to provide the additional sum of $381,806,904, which, together with the revolving fund of $500,000,000 appropriated in the act of March 21, 1918, will meet the transactions of the Railroad Administration for the year 1918, all or which have been outlined above.

It must, of course, be understood that the figures used are necessarily only approximate at this time, because the accounts for the year 1918 have not been completely stated and cannot be prior to March 1 at the earliest.

1. To financing expenditures contemplated on inland waterways	$12,840,000
2. To financing Boston & Maine reorganization	20,000,000
3 To financing equipment ordered in 1918 and to be delivered in 1919	286,000,000
4. To financing other necessary capital expenditures for additions and betterments, including equipment	491,000,000
Total	$809,840,000
Less portion of companies' rental, which can be devoted to capital expenditures	150,000,000
Balance to be provided	$659,840,000

The item of $491,000,000 represents a forecast of capital expenditures which will need to be made during the calendar year 1919, including those which were authorized and not entered upon or not completed during the calendar year 1918. Under existing conditions it is the purpose, generally speaking, to avoid the making of new capital expenditures without the assent of the corporations, but with such a vast transportation system it is believed that the expenditure of $491,000,000 will be required during the year and will be substantially assented to by the corporations themselves.

A very large part of these expenditures must be provided for in the first few months of 1919, and we are compelled to allow for the situation that during the period prior to the next Liberty Loan campaign and during that campaign it would not be desirable or practicable for railroad corporations to do a large part of their own financing.

Says $750,000,000 Is Minimum.

Under these circumstances I am of the opinion that $750,000,000 is the minimum appropriation which will enable the Railroad Administration to carry as above explained the money that is necessarily tied up in the Government's conduct of the railroad business and to provide for financing by the Railroad Administration of the portion of the necessary capital expenditures which it must be assumed it will be necessary for the Government to carry temporarily for the protection of the general financial situation as well as for the protection of its own financing.

Such appropriation will meet the requirement of $381,806,904 to settle the accounts for 1918 and in addition will provide $368,193,096 toward meeting the above mentioned capital expenditures for 1919.

This matter has been very carefully considered with my associates in the Railroad Administration, and we are satisfied that at least this much provision ought to be made for temporary assistance for these important purposes. It must be emphasized again that the money so provided will eventually be returned to the Government with interest.

It is highly important that adequate funds for these purposes should be provided so as to give the Railroad Administration a reasonable margin for encouraging the making of such railroad improvements as may seem justifiable from the railroad standpoint, especially since such improvements will aid in stabilizing the general industrial situation.

Whether Government control shall continue until the end of the twenty-one months period or shall be terminated in the next few months, it is equally necessary that the appropriation above recommended be made. If the control continues to the end of the twenty-one months period, it is my belief and the belief of my associates in the Railroad Administration that we cannot count upon the railroad companies financing during the calendar year 1919 any greater portion of their capital expenditures than it is above assumed they will finance.

On the other hand, if control should be terminated in the next few months, it will still be true that a very large part of the capital expenditures for 1919 will have been made, and, besides, the possession of an adequate fund to facilitate the transfer back to private control and to give temporary aid in financing will be highly desirable. Of course, I must deal with the matter exclusively upon the basis of the law as it now stands and without reference to conditions which might be brought about in the event of a further extension of Federal control.

The reason for the submission of the supplementary estimate at this time is that the accounts of the Railroad Administration are kept up on the basis of the calendar year, and, therefore, it was not practicable to make any reasonable estimate until after the end of the calendar year.

Cordially yours,
WALKER D. HINES.

Committee Will Co-operate with Other Organizations to Prevent Duplication of Work.

At a meeting of the Plan and Scope Committee of the Independent Citizens' Committee of Welcome held last night at 415 Madison Avenue, a program for the organization, which was formed as a protest against William R. Hearst as a member of the Mayor's Committee to Welcome Homecoming Troops, was drawn up. J. Howes Burton was appointed Chairman of a sub-committee which will begin work at once to find employment for the returned soldiers and in other ways aid in solving the problem. Another thing that was taken up at the meeting was the question of how to obtain sufficient stands along the line of march for relatives of the men.

Cards bearing a suitable inscription will be distributed to the men when they land at the piers, the reverse side of the card giving instruction to the soldier or sailor on how to obtain employment through the Citizens' Independent Committee of Welcome. The question of entertainment was discussed at length and a committee was appointed to confer with the various organizations doing work of this character so that no duplication of effort would result. The work of the War Camp Community Service, Knights of Columbus, Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A. and other organizations looking after the returned soldier in this city was commenced.

It was announced that Joseph M. Price, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the City Club, had accepted the Chairmanship of the Plan and Scope Committee. Others on this committee are Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, Dr. Robert Abbe, Dr. Howard Duffield, Dr. William T. Manning, Robert Erskine Ely, George Ethridge, Mrs. William Jay, Mrs. Caspar Whitney, Taylor More, Edwin O. Holter, Dr. Jeremiah W. Jenks, Lieut. Col. Latham R. Reed, Mrs. E. G. Merrill, Miss Ruth Graff, and Charles Scribner.

Among those who yesterday signified their intention of co-operating with the Citizens' Independent Committee were William Hamlin Childs, 17 Battery Place, who wrote in part: "I shall be more than pleased to accept your invitation to add my name to the Citizens' Independent Committee of Welcome," and J. Wray Cleveland, Secretary of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, who said among other things: "I am heartily in sympathy with the effort to afford a proper tribute of respect and affection to our returning troops by an unquestioned 100 per cent. American committee." Acceptances were also received from the Good Membership League, the Sorosis Club, the New York Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Alfred P. W. Seaman of 60 Broadway.

The Young Men's Christian and Civic League of Elmhurst held a meeting last Monday night and unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the appointment of W. R. Hearst to the Mayor's Committee. A copy of the resolution was forwarded to Mayor Hylan yesterday by J. S. Vermilye, Secretary, and F. I. D. Gartner, President of the Young Men's organization.

The Manhattan Republican Club of the Twenty-first Assembly District announced yesterday that it had taken steps toward the establishment of a permanent memorial to Washington Heights boys who lost their lives in the war. An open-air memorial service will be held at a date to be announced later. It is likely that the memorial will be placed in the park at the junction of Broadway, Hamilton Place, and 137th Street.

The specific act for which General Johnston has been honored is described below. The names of the New Yorkers in the list and the acts of bravery follow:

Major K. P. Littauer, Air Service. For repeated acts of heroism in action near Conflans, on Sept. 14, and near Doulcon, on Oct. 30. He volunteered on a mission to protect a photographic plane for another squadron on Sept. 14 and continued toward the objective at Conflans after three other protecting planes had failed to start. In an encounter with five enemy pursuit planes, he completely protected the photographic plane by skillful manoeuvering, although his observer was wounded and his machine seriously damaged. On Oct. 30 Major Littauer, on duty as Chief of Air Service of the Third Army Corps, volunteered and made an important reconnoissance of enemy machine-gun emplacements at a low altitude near Doulcon. Home address, Alfred Littauer, father, 100th Street and Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Private Henry Miller, deceased, Co. H, 308th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Binarville, on Oct. 2. When his company had been cut off from communication and exposed to intense shell and machine gun fire, he observed and attacked an enemy sniper, silencing further fire from that source. While attempting to return he was killed by machine-gun fire. Next of kin, Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, wife, 312 West 111th Street, New York City.

Sergt. Jules Gingras, Co. F, 302d Engineers. For extraordinary heroism in action near Villessavoye, on Aug. 18. He voluntarily plunged into the Vesle River to rescue some soldiers who had fallen into the water with full packs while crossing a footbridge and were in danger of drowning. In order to see, he removed his gas mask and as a result was severely gassed. Home address, Grace C. Hammond, friend, 275 Church Street, Richmond Hill, N. Y.

First Lieut. James Finley Brown, deceased, 302d Engineers. For extraordinary heroism in action at Villers devant Mouzon, on Nov. 7. He displayed remarkable bravery in reconnoitering sites for footbridges across the Meuse River and later directing the construction of these bridges under heavy machine-gun fire. While so engaged, he was killed by a sniper. Next of kin, Mrs. Olivine K. Brown, wife, 27 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

35TH DIVISION'S DEAD TOTAL 827, SAYS BAKER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Losses of the 35th Division (Kansas and Missouri National Guard) in killed and died of wounds during its entire service in France up to Nov. 7, were 827 men, Secretary Baker told the House Rules Committee today, in connection with a resolution by Representative Campbell of Kansas, calling for Congressional investigation of reported excessive losses in this division.

The resolution, Representative Campbell said, was founded on reports current in Kansas and upon statements made by Governor Allen of that State on his return from service with the Y. M. C. A., attached to the 35th Division. It asked for investigation of reports that the division, in a seven-day fight in Argonne Forest, lacked horses, adequate artillery support, ammunition, food, airplane protection, and adequate care of wounded, 1,200 of whom were said to have been left on wet ground without shelter for thirty-six hours.

In the course of the hearing, General March, who accompanied Secretary Baker, said that roughly 300,000 American troops participated in the Argonne fight. They had behind them 4,000 guns, he said, and an official statement from the chief of staff of the artillery of the First Army, of which the 35th was a part, stated that the infantry never got beyond artillery support.

Secretary Baker said the War Department invited the fullest investigation of the conduct of the war by Congress, and called attention to the fact that after the Civil War a very extensive investigation of this character was made. He indicated that he would welcome a similar investigation after the return of the troops from France when full reports would be available.

The total replacements of the 35th for all causes, Secretary Baker said, were 10,605 men from its arrival in France up to Nov. 10. He thought it indicated an "over-estimate" in the report cited by Representative Campbell that 7,000 men of the 16,000 infantry of the division had been killed or wounded in the Argonne battle.

Secretary Baker said the Argonne battle was "the most difficult operation ever undertaken by American troops," and General March declared that no hint of complaint had come from abroad as to the handling of divisions in that action.

"It was a well planned battle," the Chief of Staff declared. "It would never have gotten through if it had not been."

This fight, General March added, was the first real action in which the 35th Division participated, and he declared emphatically that the division had done very well. The indicated casualties, he thought "were incredibly low," in view of the difficulties of the fight in the forest.

Representative Campbell asked General March repeatedly if the removal of Generals Martin and McClure just before the fight had not tended to derange battle plans.

General March thought not. "The day of personal leadership is gone," he said. "The machinery that runs the fight is the staff. I do not think the removal of any individual would impede it."

TOPEKA, Kansas, Jan. 24.—When Governor Henry J. Allen was informed of Secretary Baker's statement in Washington that the total killed and dead from wounds in the 35th Division up to Nov. 7 was 827 men, the Governor said:

"The estimate made by officers at the front, after the battle of the Argonne Forest, that the 35th suffered more than 7,000 casualties of course, included all casualties."

BAR BERGER, GILLETT URGES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Representative F. H. Gillett of Massachusetts, seeking the Speakership of the next House, said today that he believed the very first act of that body should be to refuse a seat to Victor Berger, who has been convicted under the Espionage act.

"Twenty years ago I voted to throw out Brigham Roberts," said Mr. Gillett, "because he was a Mormon living with plural wives, and he was rejected by a majority of more than five to one.

"I think there is much more reason to reject Berger, who was under indictment for disloyal acts at the time of his election, while the war was still raging, and who has since been tried and found guilty on the indictment. The evidence convinced me of his disloyalty and I believe the country generally approved the verdict of the jury, and I think his guilt is sufficiently manifest to disqualify him from Congress.

"The House is given by the Constitution absolute and exclusive power to determine the qualifications of its members. If I am on the floor on the opening day of the session I intend to object to Berger's being sworn in, and to raise the question of permanently excluding him."

in silk or wool, and in a variety of charming colors.

Among them are the slip-on models in the rather intricate but extremely effective filet designs; and those in the coat style, developed in sheer alapaca wool.

A decided novelty, suggestive of the richly-woven matelasse effects, is shown in two silk models (regulation or slip-on) obtainable in the more fashionable shades.

U. S. G. A. APPROVES OF TITLE TOURNEYS

Three National Championships Will Be Resumed, the Dates to be Determined Later.

FOLLOW 1917 PROGRAM

Hearty approval of a resumption of all three national championships was voiced at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association, held at the Waldorf last night. Coincident with that was the decision to hold the events over the courses selected at the 1917 meeting—Oakmont Country Club, near Pittsburgh, for the amateur; Braeburn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., for the open, and the Shawnee, Country Club, Shawnee, Penn., for the women.

The dates will be determined at an early session of the Executive Committee, and it has always been the policy of the association to conform as far as possible to the wishes of the clubs chiefly concerned. Weeks ago word was received from Oakmont, Braeburn, and Shawnee that they were anxious to handle the events, which were to have been held on their courses in 1917.

At last night's meeting delegates of the favored clubs gave assurance of their fitness to handle the attractions. During the last two years Oakmont alone has spent something like $10,000 in stiffening its links and in various ways preparing for the "big show." Braeburn is pronounced by professionals to be one of the most testing eighteen-hole circuits in the East. Shawnee has also been made more attractive than ever.

In keeping with the occasion, the Secretary stated that some time ago he began a compilation of an honor roll of golf members of clubs belonging to the parent body who served in the army or navy of the United States during the war. He had for the information of the delegates 7,539 names, representing responses from 287 clubs.

In the period between Dec. 1, 1917, and Nov. 30, 1918, the report of the Executive Committee showed that fourteen clubs were elected to membership, seven being active, as follows: Oak Ridge Golf Club, Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Gulph Mills Golf Club, Gulph Mills, Penn.; West Okoboji Golf Club, Milford, Iowa; Quaker Ridge Golf Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; St. Albans Golf and Country Club, St. Albans, L. I.; Broadmoor Golf Club, Colorado Springs, Col., and Green Meadow Country Club, Harrison, N. Y.

Seven clubs were elected to allied membership, as follows: York Country Club, York, Penn.; Philadelphia Golf Club, Philadelphia, Penn.; St. Clair Country Club, Pittsburgh, Penn.; Shuttle Meadow Golf Club, Inc., New Britain, Conn.; Wolferts Roost, Albany, N. Y.; Mount Vernon Country Club, Mount Vernon, N. Y., and Essex Fells Country Club, Essex Fells, N. J.

The association now has a membership of 458 clubs, 145 active and 313 allied. During the year two allied organizations, the Castle Shannon Golf Club, Castle Shannon, Penn., and the Kenilworth Country Club, Newell, W. Va., disbanded, while the Harrisburg Golf Club, at Harrisburg, Penn., an active club, resigned.

With the decision for a resumption of championship tournaments next season, an eligibility list will be compiled as a matter of course, in the same manner as in 1916 and 1917; that is, the names are not sent in by the clubs, but are recommended by the larger sectional associations. No list was issued last year.

The Treasurer's report shows the association to be in excellent financial condition, the total assets on Nov. 30, 1918, showing $19,604.04. As the association has no liabilities the assets represent the surplus.

The association was praised for its war work in a letter from Boyd Comstock of the Athletic Division of the War Department. This letter was sent to Howard F. Whitney, the Secretary of the association. It referred to a list of the golf clubs which donated supplies and the amount of the material sent. To be exact, 381 sets; that is, collections of from six to ten clubs and a dozen balls were shipped to the different cantonments, while eight organizations sent miscellaneous collections.

In accordance with custom there was no opposition to the election of officers, which are the same as last year. The Secretary was therefore instructed to cast one ballot as follows:

President, Frederick S. Wheeler, Apawamis; Vice Presidents, Dr. Walter B. Harban of Columbia and Sterling E. Edmunds, St. Louis; Secretary, Howard F. Whitney, Nassau; Treasurer, Mortimer N. Buckner, Garden City. The Executive Committee includes the above, and Frank E. Miller, Chicago; J. F. Byers, Pittsburgh; Asa P. French, Boston, and W. P. Stewart, New Orleans, La.

THESE HENS COME HIGH.

A pen of barred Plymouth Rocks, valued by their owners at $10,000, won first prize among the exhibition pens of that variety at the Poultry Show at Madison Square Garden yesterday. The cock and four hens are own by E. B. Thompson, of Amenia, N. Y. The awards in the sixty classes of exhibition pens were the feature of the show yesterday. The Owens Farms of Vineyard Haven, Mass., won in three classes, white Plymouth Rocks, single comb Rhode Island Reds and single comb white Leghorns. M. F. Delano of Owens Farms sold the cock of this Leghorn pen to George B. Ferris of Detroit a few days ago for $500.

Three amateur fanciers won blue ribbons. These were Walter P. Bliss of Bernardsville, N. J., who took first prizes with three varieties of ducks; J. Robinson Beard of Lucknow Farm, South Norwalk, won in buff Orpingtons for the second year, an unusual achievement for a non-commercial exhibitor.

In speaking of Orpingtons, Mr. Beard said: "The buff Orpingtons get their color from the Cochins, their egg laying abilities from the Hamburgs, and their value for the table from the Dorkings. They weigh ten or twelve pounds, taste better than turkey and lay eggs straight along until wanted for the table." The third amateur to win was Andrew J. Albright, Jr., of Prospect Farms, whose black Minorcas carried off the honors. The show will close this evening.

SCHAEFER ADDS TO LEAD.

Plays Brilliantly in Afternoon Contest with Cochran.

Jake Schaefer increased his lead over Welker Cochran in yesterday's two blocks of their 3,600 points 18.2 balk line billiard match at Daly's Academy. Schaefer scored his greatest success of the match in the afternoon block, when he ran out his string of 300 points in four innings while Cochran was gathering 32. This block produced some excellent playing on the part of Schaefer. Cochran never approached his usual good form.

In the evening match Cochran took the block by a score of 388 to 300 in ten innings. He made runs of 199 and 108 in this session. Schaefer's high run was 137. The total score now favors Schaefer by 3,000 to 2,754.

The scores:

AFTERNOON GAME.

Cochran—19 3 10—32. Average, 10 2-3.

EVENING GAME.

Cochran—36 2 0 0 8 199 16 108 14 5—388. Average, 38 8-10. High runs, 199, 108.

Becker Defeats Van Tassel.

WILLARD ACCEPTS $100,000 FIGHT OFFER

Heavyweight Champion Signs with Rickard to Meet Dempsey or Carpentier in July.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—A purse of $100,000 drew Jess Willard, heavyweight boxing champion, out of retirement tonight. Tex Rickard, promoter of the Joe Gans-Battling Nelson fight and the heavyweight championship battle between Jeffries and Johnson, after two days of conference, obtained Willard's signature to a set of articles to fight any opponent selected for him. He agreed to box any number of rounds up to forty. The match will be decided next July, probably on the fourth. Willard will receive $100,000 win, lose, or draw.

Rickard said that either Georges Carpentier, the French heavyweight, or Jack Dempsey, who has been clamoring for a match with the champion, would be Willard's opponent. Rickard reserved the right to wait until March 25 before making the selection. The place for holding the battle will be named sixty days before the contest.

The contest will be the first that Willard has fought since he met Frank Moran of Pittsburgh in New York on March 25, 1916. Rickard was the promoter of that match.

Under the terms of the agreement, the champion agreed to deposit $10,000 with a Chicago bank at once, this sum to be forfeited to Rickard if Willard fails to carry out his promises. Rickard agreed to deposit $10,000 in Chicago tomorrow, $15,000 sixty days before the date of the contest, and $75,000 forty-eight hours before the day of the battle.

It is provided that if Rickard fails to make the second deposit of $15,000, he agrees to forfeit the first $10,000 to Willard, and if he fails to deposit the $75,000 Willard will receive $25,000.

The Kansas "cowboy" agreed not to make any other engagements or to appear in any exhibition contests, and also agreed to be at the place designated for the battle sixty days in advance to finish his training. It was decided that Rickard should name the referee, and that his selection should be final.

"I haven't any idea where the contest will be decided," said Rickard. "The laws of the State in which the battle will be staged will, of course, govern the situation. I hope to stage the contest in a State allowing bouts of twenty or thirty rounds.

"Wherever the battle is fought, it will not be in a baseball park. I plan to build an arena with a seating capacity of 50,000. This will cost close to $35,000. The prices of admission probably will be from $10 to $50, although these details have not been worked out."

Frank C. Flournoy of Memphis, Tenn., Rickard's business partner, will be associated with Rickard in promoting the battle.

KERR TAKES GOLF FINAL.

Greenwich Golfer Defeats Balch on Florida Links.

Special to The New York Times.

BELLEAIR HEIGHTS, Fla., Jan. 24.—Hamilton K. Kerr of Greenwich was the winner in the first annual tournament of the season here today when he defeated De Witt Balch of Cincinnati in the final round by one up.

The match was one of the best ever seen here and was followed by a large gallery. Balch was the favorite on account of his long driving, but Kerr's experience told in the end.

St. Ann's College Five Wins.

St. Ann's College basket ball team defeated the Victory five last night in a one-sided game on the college court by a score of 40 to 18. McCue for St. Ann's scored eight goals, Sweeney and White four each, while Gullfoy added three more. For the Victory five, Skinner and Wiles scored four and five, respectively.

PRINCETON FIVE WINS.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 24.—The Princeton basket ball team defeated Swarthmore in the Tigers' second game of the season here tonight, by the score of 24 to 18. The game was marred by much fumbling and poor basket shooting but was closely contested throughout, the count being tied at the halfway mark.

The Tiger five got the jump on the Pennsylvania boys at the opening of the game when Gray and Davis put the Orange and Black six points to the good. Swarthmore quickly rallied, however, and twice led the Princeton quintet in the scoring. But by the latter part of the game the Tigers had found their stride and rapidly pulled into the lead.

Opie, with three goals from the floor and four from free throws, was high score man for Princeton. Stow of the visitors and Capt. Gray of the home team divided second honors with eight points each.

The lineup:

Princeton.	Position.	Swarthmore.

The Jamaica team defeated New Utrecht in one of the games of a double-header by 5 goals to 1. In the other fracas Flushing High School's hockeyists vanquished the Poly Prep team by 5 goals to 0. Jamaica's victory placed the team in a tie for first place with Manual Training H. S. Both teams have won two games and lost none.

ROVERS WIN EASY VICTORY AT POLO

Dr. Blackwell Displays Rare Skill and Scores Eight Goals Against Squadron A Trio.

STANDING OF THE TEAMS.

White Owls	4	0	1000
Royal A. F.	4	1	.800
Meadowlarks	2	2	.500
Rovers	1	2	.333
Foxhunters	0	3	.000

Squadron A's polo trio was easily defeated by the Rovers yesterday in the Victory Cup tournament at Durland's Riding Academy. The score was 12 to 9. The victorious Rovers clearly outclassed and outplayed the rival aggregation, excelling in horsemanship and stick work. This victory gives the Rovers their first success in three games.

Dr. Blackwell, playing at No. 2, gave the successful team its chief impetus. He scored eight of the Rovers's goals. Five of these markers came in the opening period when Dr. Blackwell led his teammates in an attack which erased a handicap of four goals conceded the Squadron A poloists. B. Grannis, at back, scored four goals, and H. Levinski registered another, while the Squadron A contingent was held scoreless.

In the second period Cooke, the Squadron A back, got three goals, and Grimwood, at No. 2, scored twice. Dr. Blackwell, however, accounted for three tallies, which enabled the Rovers to hold the advantage.

The lineup:

ROVERS. (12.)	SQUADRON A. (9.)

Vibbard's high run was 15, while Bache's best effort was 12. At English billiards William Stiles defeated W. Porter by the count of 125 to 121. Charles Bigelow went down in defeat before Nelson Mayo at straight rail billiards by the score of 150 to 114.

COLUMBIA TO OPEN SEASON.

The lid will be pried off tonight in the Intercollegiate Basket Ball League, when the University of Pennsylvania five faces off against Columbia in the gymnasium on Morningside Heights, although no championship trophy will be awarded because there is promise of an exciting race for a leading position at the end of the season.

Pennsylvania has a team which is made up of three veterans of the 1918 championship five, reinforced by two recruits, one of whom is Dan McNichol, the youngest of the long line of McNichols who have made basket ball history at Pennsylvania. Coach Dawson will line up the Columbia team with Johnson at centre, Tynon and Farrell in the forward position, and Weinstein and Klendl guards.

TODAY everyone is asking "What is a League of Nations?" In this new book Francis Bowes Sayre gives the answer. For months he searched untiringly into the records of the past, among archives of other countries, and he is the one man in America who can tell the world of the Leagues of Nations and experiments in International Administration in the past. He does not state the pros and cons, but gives fascinating facts hitherto unprinted in English. The book is invaluable to all those who wish to have a better understanding of this world-discussed topic.

WORLD'S BIGGEST HOTEL OPENS TODAY

COMMODORE OPEN TUESDAY

McAlpin Will Add 300 Rooms the Same Day—New York Gains 4,500 Hotel Rooms Within a Week.

The incandescent sky line over the heart of New York received a big addition to its candlepower last night when on the gloomiest offshoot of Times Square hundreds of windows were illuminated in the largest tavern in the world, the Hotel Pennsylvania, which has its public opening today.

Seventh Avenue, which had been practically in the hands of the receiver during years of subway building, began to look again as if it belonged on Manhattan Island. The second-hand men and curb brokers in clothing, who have long predominated between Times Square and the Pennsylvania Station, stood on the sidewalks and in their shop doors last night looking at the outlines of the great structure with apprehension writ on their faces, expressive of the fear that the autonomous development of their lowly traffic in the heart of New York was seriously threatened.

The Hotel Pennsylvania, which has 2,200 rooms and 2,200 baths, is the largest hotel in the world by 200 rooms and 200 baths. Second to it in size will be the Hotel Commodore, which will open in Forty-second Street next to the Grand Central terminal on Tuesday. The Hotel Commodore has a round 2,000 rooms and an equally imposing number of baths. The Hotel McAlpin on next Tuesday will open its add[illegible]n of 300 rooms, giving it a total of [illegible] rooms. Thus in one week there will be added to New York's hard-pressed hotel resources a total of 4,500 rooms and as many baths.

The Hotel Pennsylvania will give New York its first experience of Statler hotel management and service. E. M. Statler, who directs the chain of Hotels Statler at Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, and St. Louis, will be in charge of the Hotel Pennsylvania and will run it in accordance with his own ideas. The three hotel openings which take place within a few days will be under the management of the three greatest hotel organizations in the country. The Commodore will be under the management of the company headed by John McE. Bowman, which conducts the Biltmore, Manhattan, Belmont, and Murray Hill Hotels. The McAlpin addition will belong to the system of hotel properties controlled by T. Coleman du Pont, under the management of Lucius M. Boomer.

The Hotel Pennsylvania faces the Pennsylvania station in Seventh Avenue and extends from Thirty-second to Thirty-third Street. There are twenty-seven floor levels from the lowest subbasement to the top floor. The hotel is set back several feet from the property line, increasing the width of Seventh Avenue until in this block it is slightly wider than Fifth Avenue. This valuable real estate was sacrificed to give a larger setting of open space for the hotel and the station for the sake of the architectural effect. The first four floors of the hotel are built in a style to harmonize with the massiveness and dignity of the great railroad building. On these floors are the offices, lobbies, dining rooms, cafés, galleries, and most of the public rooms. Above these floors the structure is cut into by four deep courts, which give light and air to all the rooms.

Any one under the impression that because he has heard of the Statler management as an introducer of many novelties, the Pennsylvania is to be a sort of "trick" hotel, will be disappointed. It was stated last night by a representative of the company that the art of managing hotels had been carried to such a point of perfection that any radical variations were likely to be unsuccessful.

One feature which will have its first metropolitan trial in the Hotel Pennsylvania is the "servidor." This is a small wardrobe which is built into the bedroom doors. The guest may open it from the inside and put his shoes or clothes into it. They will be noiselessly extracted by an attendant from the outside and returned pressed and shined. If a guest orders a bottle of seltzer, or any other small object, it will be left by a hotel employe in the servidor. A signal on the doors shows instantly when anything is put into the servidor. The purpose of this device is to make frequent or unseasonable visitations of bellboys unnecessary.

Ice water will circulate in every room. A newspaper will be delivered silently by the "servidor" every morning. Clerks and other employes, it is asserted, will be stocked with information about New York streets and transportation systems, the merits of different shows, and other topics of interest to visitors, so that most of the questions which will form themselves in the minds of the usual guests may be answered promptly.

The main lobby is said to be the largest in any hotel in the world, and is magnificently furnished, as the building is from top to bottom. There are numerous cafés, dining rooms, and ballrooms, public and private. One of the features will be a downstairs lunch counter, where food will be served with great speed and at moderate prices. Plans for the general dining room and café service have been worked out, it was said, so that much of the usual delay will be eliminated. The main café, which is put forward as a gem of decoration and architectural design, has stained glass windows, vaulted ceilings, Gothic woodwork, suggesting the interior of a venerable chapel and probably making easy its transition to some other use after next June.

The completion and opening of the Hotel Commodore will easily make the vicinity of the Grand Central Terminal the greatest hotel centre in the world. A private view of the big house will be given on Jan. 27, and it will open its doors to the public formally on Jan. 28. It is asserted that in furnishings and devices for the comfort and convenience of guests this hotel will set a new mark. Electricity has been used in the building, it is said, more thoroughly than in any other building in the world.

Governor William C. Sproul of Pennsylvania, President Samuel Rea and other officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and 400 others were guests last night at the Hotel Pennsylvania. The only speech at the dinner was made by Mr. Statler, who declared that he was the first man in the world to build a hotel designed from the viewpoint of the guest, and that he intended to operate this one not from the hotel man's point of view but that of its customers. After the dinner the visitors were taken through the chief parts of the building for a private view.

OPERA

By James Gibbons Huneker

"LA REINE FIAMMETTE."

"La Reine Fiammette," an opera in four acts and two scenes, music by Xavier Leroux, the book after a well-known play by the late Catulle Mendès, was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House last night with the following cast:

Orlanda	Geraldine Farrar
Danielo	Hipolito Lazaro
Giorgio d'Ast	Adamo Didur
Cardinal Sforza	Leon Rothier
Pantasilie	Flora Perini
Mother Agramente	Kathleen Howard
Violine	Kittie Beale
Violette	Lenore Sparkes
Viola	Mary Ellis
Pomone	Marie Tiffany
Michela	Lenore Sparkes
Angioletta	Mary Ellis
Chiarina	Marie Mattfeld
Boy	Mary Mellish
Boy	Cecil Arden
Lucagnolo	Mario Laurenti
Castiglione	Angelo Bada
Cortez	Albert Reiss
Cesano	Giordano Paltrinieri
Vasari	Pietro Audisio
Prosecutor	Paolo Ananian
A Novice	Phillis White
A Novice	Veni Warwick

Let us begin with the book and its author, for both are of more importance than the mediocre music of Leroux. Catulle Mendès wrote "La Reine Fiammette" in 1898, calling it "Conte dramatique en six actes, en vers." Like his novels and poetry, it is exquisitely written. In 1903 it appeared as "drame lyrique." The play, altered by Paul Kester to suit the exigencies of the American stage, was first offered at Boston by Manager Charles Dillingham in 1902, with Julia Marlowe, but even the beautiful voice and diction of that thrice-charming actress could not save the piece from dissolution. We fear the first gravedigger in the present operatic obsequies is the composer, an accomplished musician, a Rome prize winner, a pupil of Massenet and Dubois, clever, facile, mediocre, Xavier Henri Napoleon Leroux.

Mendès was one of the most gifted poets of the Parnassian group. In 1860 he was associated with such shining celebrities as Théophile Gautier—le bon Théo was temporarily his father-in-law—De Banville, Baudelaire, Vacquerie, Sully-Prudhomme, Houssaye, Villiers de L'Isle Adam, Daudet, and others. They wrote "La Revue Fantaisiste." The brilliant young poet was of Jewish origin and nicknamed because of his personal beauty "the Portuguese Christ," as Daudet (David) was known as the "Christ of the Midi." The first story of Mendès, "Le Roman d-Une Nuit" (1863) brought him to the bar of justice. It was quickly suppressed. Yet it was a fairy tale for childhood when compared with his novel, "Mephistophéla" (1890.)

His fecundity and versatility were enormous and while much of his work may be classed with the scatalogical outpourings of Armande Sylvestre, he was the greater of the pair. Puissant imagery, charm—a corrupt charm as George Moore tells us in his "Confessions of a Young Man"—impeccable art and tender lyricism, abound in his writings. He married Judith Gautier, a writer almost of his artistic calibre. She divorced him. The French-Irish composer, Augusta Holmès, had intervened. Later the friendship of the two women became legendary in Paris. Judith remarried and with Pierre Loti. Mendès married again. Jane Catule Mendès is a poet, as her "Les Charmes" testifies. For two such poets their union was happy. Mendès fell from a railway carriage and was killed in 1910. He was born at Bordeaux in 1842.

Composers of Leroux's capacity are not rare, a good opera libretto is. Here we have the discomfiting fact of a splendid play, vivid in dramatic action, charged with poetry, full of color, which goes for naught because of the weak music. The book fairly cries for musical characterization, for dramatic climaxes, for some tunes with "go" in them. Instead, we are offered futile phrase-spinning, deft enough in construction; a plentiful lack of melody, few moments of compulsive situations, and colorless characterization. Cardinal Sporza is the one virile figure. He does something, aided thereby with ecclesiastical harmonies. The device was already stale when Meyerbeer utilized it in "Le Prophète." Orlanda, the naughty Queen, has some pretty songs; her scene when she parts with her jewels and her queenship is effective, also the scene with that wretched travesty of a monk, Danielo in the last act. The duo is dramatic. But there is a sad waste of material in the early acts. Leroux is a skillful manipulator of voice and orchestra. He has all the tricks of instrumentation at his finger-tips. His memory is retentive. He avoids quotation marks.

There is an excerpt from the "Damnation of Faust." Two, indeed; one from the "Queen Mab" scherzo, the other sung by Orlanda. Carmen bobs up for some bars, the third act, and the Seguidilla. Gounod, Puccini, Dvorak—the motto from the New World Symphony—Massenet, above all, poor, old Wagner, are levied upon with the insouciance that finally becomes delightful. A stately Pavano, the Peacock's dance, was welcome. There are bits of concerted singing and the usual churchly chanting of nuns. Not an original bar. In an unpublished and presumably great play by Robert W. Chambers a character exclaims: "What! No mask, cried Camilla?" Mr. Leroux doesn't pretend to wear a musical mask of his own. He is nothing if not eclectic. He never thrills, seldom interests, and his score does not contain a passage that would bring the blush of sex-consciousness to the pudic cheek of a Chautauqua assemblage.

But the story would. The man who wrote "La Première Maîtresse" could not resist the temptation of picturing a convent where the nuns read Boccaccio on the sly, where a madcap Queen holds rendezvous with a half-crazed monk. Such a silly perversion of truth is on a par with Vibert's amusing caricatures of lecherous gourmands disguised as ecclesiastics. Mother Church in Renaissance times was often in the powerful grip of titled scoundrels, malefactors of great eminence, as Theodore Roosevelt happily phrased it, but common sense protests against scabrous anecdotes like these of Catulle Mendès. A nice set of nuns and a nicer Prioress who would permit such behavior, even if a Queen did shatter the conventual discipline of the Poor Clares. It is all as real as "Le Coq d'Or," without a tithe of its charm. Rimsky-Korsakoff was original, besides.

The scenery is more attractive than the music. It was painted by Boris Anisfeld, the Russian artist, at present a resident of this city. There are at least five of his startling compositions with the heavily silhouetted masses beloved of Paul Cézanne; the cone, the sphere, and the pyramid. That they are in the key of the Italian Renaissance would be maintaining a paradox, though Mantegna has been cited as an ancient instance. There is a resemblance in the architecture of the forms. Anisfeld has modeled after the Primitives. But the coloring, the unmodulated primary tones stem from the Kremlin, not Mantua, from Moscow not Vicenza. But effective. There are clashing color dissonances which positively thrill the optic nerve. That malachite interior is as subtly strange as a depraved sonnet by Baudelaire. The towering castle on the heights in Act I might have been designed by Middleton Manigault, so strenuous are the geometrical patterns. The royal garden is alive with flowers of evil, and the gloomy hall in the last act, with its ikon, its crucified Christ—a truly Russian Christ—is of a sombre magnificence.

These stage settings supply the atmosphere missing in the scores of Leroux. That they are bound to give offense to purists and sticklers for historical precision is a matter of course. Boris Anisfeld always offends some one. There is only one more "offense" we crave, and that is for other music. Let us suggest Serge Prokofieff as a running-mate to Anisfeld's brush. Such a conjunction would make vital the romantic tale of a volatile queen, an erotic lunatic, and a swashbuckler Prince consort. It may interest admirers of the Anisfeld art, also the skeptics and the merely curious, to learn that the original sketches for this scenery may be viewed at the Kingore Galleries. They are in tempera and water-color, and are suggestive in a way the completed designs are not.

At the full-dress rehearsal the performance was spiritless. Ergo, the première, was bound to be superb. But the old superstition was not realized. It was just about fair to middling, this performance. There was too much shrieking, and far too much faulty tone production. The cast was generally competent. Rothier was imposing. Didur, with a hopelessly negative part, made it stand out; Lazaro sang very well when he didn't force his voice, but he usually forced his voice, alas! for he has fine natural material and when he sings mezzo, as he did in his entrance music, Act II., his voice was agreeable. Legato, altogether different from the Lazaro, who hurls vocal bombs at the top tier. He was hardly heroic in appearance. Mary Bliss desires a word of praise for her excellent diction and mimique in two small parts.

Geraldine Farrar as Orlanda, ("Hist! cried Kate the queen,") was a lovely creature, sumptuously garbed, and her farewell was most touching. The character was not a difficult one to compass for an actress of her attainments. She sang with dramatic intensity. It was a picturesque touch that scarlet plume of her's in the alcove scene. It was another "value," as the painters say, in the sanguinary symphony of Anisfeld. This scene was a riot of reds; the alcove, the lamp, the wings—on one was a panel in the "near" Tiepolo Key—and the lighting. Any color so it's crimson! We bathed our eyes in blood-red hues. Richard Ondynski directed the stage and covered himself with glory. Mr. Monteux, who has been ill, conducted authoritatively. There were many recalls for Miss Farrar and Mr. Lazaro. But the stage pictures evoked equal enthusiasm. As some one said "La Reina Fiammette" is an opera surrounded by scenery. "Czar Boris" had his innings.

Gabrilowitsch Plays Chopin.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the distinguished Russian piano virtuoso and conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, played an all-Chopin program at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon. Mr. Gabrilowitsch is a Chopinist of the first rank and his interpretation of the Sonata in B minor, the Nocturnes, Mazurka, the Ballade, a dozen Preludes, a Valse, and a Rondo were masterly and pleased his large audience. There was much enthusiasm, followed by the inevitable encores.

Last Art Museum Concert Tonight.

Tonight will be the fourth and last of the big free symphony orchestra concerts conducted by David Mannes at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. At the last concert there was an attendance of 5,617. The concert tonight will open with Meyerbeer's "Dance of the Torches," Weber's "Overture to Oberon," and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 5 in C minor" will be given. Berlioz and Gounod are represented, there will be two Norwegian melodies by Grieg; the Strauss "Waltz: Artist's Life," and the "Introduction and Finale to Tristan and Isolde" will close the program.

"BUT NOW BRING ME A MINSTREL"

WHEN things piled up on him; when he was overworked and worried, and there seemed to be too few hours in the day, the prophet Elisha had one sovereign remedy.

"But now bring me a minstrel," he would exclaim. And in the relaxation of the minstrel's music he would find peace.

The theatre is the modern equivalent of the minstrel. There's healing for tired nerves in it; and wholesome happiness for families whose members see too little of each other. The important thing, of course, is to find the play that fits the mood. And that's where we come in. We are physicians of moods; curers of tired spirits; we prescribe and fill our own prescriptions. Come now, and let us prescribe the evening entertainment which is designed particularly for you tonight.

YAMADA CONDUCTS WAGNER

Kosçak Yamada, conductor of the Tokio Philharmonic, which has lighted for Asia a flower-strewn way to Western music, led his second program under the auspices of the Japan Society last evening in Carnegie Hall, and concluded it with his first interpretations of Wagner, which aroused sincere applause both from the distinguished audience present and from the ninety orchestra men who assisted him. To published criticisms of his choice of Wagner, the patriotic Japanese had prepared an answer from half a world away.

The Imperial Academy of Tokio in 1916, he said, gave a concert attended by the Empress and many Ambassadors of the allied nations in the Far East, and on that occasion, owing to the state of war existing, all Teutonic works were omitted. At the close, the Empress sent for the Director, to say that she did not consider that the Japanese Government was waging a war against German music, and that "it was her express desire to have compositions of all German composers represented on all future programs."

This was Mr. Yamada's answer as to conducting Wagner last night in New York, and he reinforced it by conducting his Wagner uncommonly well. The selections he chose were the farewell scene from "The Valkyrie," sung in English by Clarence Whitehill, and the "Mastersingers" prelude, conducted with fine appreciation and spirited tempo. A public that has high traditions of Wagner applauded Mr. Yamada's reading. Earlier he gave his own symphony "in classical form," new here; a student work, of melodious grace, with a slow movement of exotic harmony, martial as befitted its title, "Triumph and Peace," though written before the war. Mr. Whitehill repeated four of Yamada's songs in Japanese, and the composer again led his "Marie Magdalene."

The annual performance here in aid of the Actors' Fund of America, the thirty-eighth of its kind since the formation of the organization, took place at the Century Theatre yesterday afternoon. Daniel Frohman, President of the Fund, estimated the receipts from all sources at about $15,000. Boxes were purchased for $100 each by the Friars and the Lambs, and many individual seats were sold at $5. The major share of the revenue was derived from the program.

Augustus Thomas made an address in which he spoke in general terms of the assistance which the stage has given to many charity funds, particularly since the beginning of the war. The features of the program proper were a revival of the "Florodora" double sextet, with a dozen stars as its members, and the appearance of eleven well-known composers at as many pianos. Players in the "Florodora" number were Julia Sanderson, Hazel Dawn, Peggy Wood, Jeanne Eagels, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Violet Heming, H. B. Warner, Donald Brian, Joseph Cawthorn, Bruce McRae, Emmet Corrigan, and Hassard Short. The composers who appeared were Reginald De Koven, who played his new wedding march; Victor Herbert, Jerome Kern, Rudolph Friml, Gustave Kerker, A. Baldwin Sloane, Louis A. Hirsch, Harry Carroll, Raymond Hubbell, Lieutenant B. C. Hilliam, and Silvio Hein.

Marvin Maazel in Piano Recital.

Marvin Maazel, a young pianist of musical heritage and much promise, who has been heard with orchestra at the Metropolitan, gave his first piano recital last evening in Aeolian Hall. He revived with eager zest some of Schumann's fantasies, a Mozart sonata, three of Mendelssohn's songs without words, like pages from an album of youth. There were pieces by Godowsky, Brahms, the Russians, and by a New York writer, Mana Zucca, who was present in the audience.

KITCHIN OR CLARK.

In most that has been said about the organization of the next Congress, there has been a note of alarm lest the Republican Party should waste its opportunities by choosing so unrepresentative an American as JAMES R. MANN for the Speakership. The opportunities which the Democratic Party may waste have not been so much dwelt upon. Yet the Democratic Party has fully as good a chance to lower itself in the public estimation as has its successful rival. It can put the stamp of its approval on the kind of leadership which the country has disapproved at the polls, and thereby create in the public mind a wild longing to punish it still further; or it can retire that kind of leadership and unite on another.

According to The Sun's Washington correspondent, "Democrats in the House," which may mean all or some or a majority of them, are preparing to drop CLAUDE KITCHIN from the minority leadership and restore CHAMP CLARK to his old post there. Mr. KITCHIN, according to his lights, has served well his Scotland Neck constituency, but in so doing he has created among people who do not live in Scotland Neck a feeling that can hardly be described. Very inadequately it might be described as an intense longing to see the nation's affairs intrusted to some one less interested in the taxpayers and non-taxpayers of Scotland Neck. This longing took the form, last November, of a Republican victory at the polls. The fact that the war was still going on was probably all that prevented it from being a landslide. The war will not be going on in November, 1920, and there will then be nothing to distract the public mind from Mr. KITCHIN, if he should still be the Democratic leader.

If the Democratic Party decides not to go on throwing away its opportunities, its choice of leaders will be somewhat restricted. It seems inevitable that in such a case it will choose Mr. CLARK. He was its leader until promoted to the Speakership. The Speakership was only a more exalted form of leadership. It may be said that he has never ceased to be its leader, and that Mr. KITCHIN has only been keeping his place warm for him. His popularity as a man would make it nearly impossible for any other Democrat to run against him. It is true that he shares responsibility for many of Mr. KITCHIN's worst acts, but in the concentration of public indignation upon Mr. KITCHIN this fact has not received much attention, and he has not come in for the same obloquy. For that reason he would be a safer choice for the party to make.

THE LABOR INTERNATIONALE.

Perhaps some may have remarked that the unions in the American Federation are "internationals" without paying particular attention beyond thinking it queer. Perhaps some may have wondered what the word meant in connection with American unions. There is information for both in the appearance of Mr. GOMPERS at Versailles. There is reassurance in his abstention from the Socialist Congress at Lausanne, but there is unsettlement in his statement that the workers of the world hope to influence the framing of the conditions of the peace treaty so that they will raise the standard of life for the workers of the whole world. Nowhere is there any opposition to that proposal standing alone. All would rejoice at the result, but there are some disposed to examine closely the means by which it is attained.

After all, the "workers" of the world are not the whole world. Mr. GOMPERS has a mandate from less than one-tenth of the workers of this country, but it is not to be denied that he exerts a greater influence than his constituency entitles him to. Nor is organized labor free from the faults of others seeking class privilege or advantage without scruple about the means to the end, even while using the loftiest language and pretension of benevolence. No country can submit to rule by a class, either of labor or capital, and the labor internationale seeks just that thing. Mr. GOMPERS has said that the American workers are neither Bolsheviki nor Socialists, and he is entitled to praise for the influence he has exerted in keeping them from being either. But his program differs from that proposed for the League of Nations, although he seeks to have the league adopt his policy.

The internationale of labor, for example, proposes excellent things, but it will not accept such deference to common law as the league seeks to impose upon nations. Compulsory arbitration is never acceptable to labor. It passes its own statutes, which it enforces as ruthlessly as autocracy. There are attractions about the establishment of an international court for settlement of labor troubles. But would labor bow to its decisions? And labor troubles are of just that sort which it is most difficult to settle internationally with the consent of the governed. When standards of living are so different, how can there be an international standard of wages or hours? And how can there be any fair adjustment of the difference of conditions of employment which shall have any better fate than the "reasonable" rate on which the railways fight and starve while the community suffers from the quarrel?

In labor's policy a fair wage must be an average wage, and there can be no such thing as a fair international wage. Even a fair average national wage is attained only by sacrifice by the community of the full product of the labor of the stronger workers, which cannot be recouped by greater effort by the weaker. It is humane to temper the pace of life to the ability of the weak, and nobody would drive them beyond their strength, but that does not compensate for underworking the strong. Mr. GOMPERS is associated with the British workers, who have a program verging upon socialism without showing social sentiment. Illustration of this is shown by the current strikes in England, which demand labor's rights but show no perception of labor's duties. Mr. MORRISON is a spokesman for the Federation as well entitled to be heard as Mr. GOMPERS, and he has said that American labor would not intrust its interests to international regulation. American workers would not consent to reduce their standards to foreign standards, nor to delay improving their standards until foreign standards had been raised to American, he said. Moreover, there is a breach in the American labor ranks, just as there is in the British, and just as there always is in any class movement. Always they split as the Socialists do, until there is no possibility of working with all the factions. If Mr. GOMPERS hopes to establish a world labor court he should begin by binding all labor to accept its awards.

SWITZERLAND.

Switzerland, whose President, Mr. ADOR, met President POINCARÉ, M. CLEMENCEAU, and Mr. WILSON yesterday, steered a difficult course of neutrality fairly in the war. Economically she was hard put to it on both sides, between the Entente and Germany. The latter, which had made and is yet making multifarious attempts to conquer and Germanize industry and business, played a mean game with Switzerland. Even the German-speaking cantons were disgusted with the German efforts to keep Switzerland from being what she wants to be, Swiss, not German, French, Italian. With the exception of an episode or two of jealous Swiss-German officials, civil and military, abetting Germany, the attitude of the Swiss Government has been correct.

The official statement which Mr. ADOR is to lay before the Peace Conference expresses the expectation of Switzerland to be admitted into the conference, her approval of a League of Nations, her determination to continue neutral, her obvious interest in the free passage of goods and commerce, vital on account of her geographical position, her wish for free access to the sea by means of the improved Rhine to the north, westward, and eastward by arrangement with France and Italy along the Rhone, Ticino, Po.

Switzerland has an admirable military system. She trains her young men to be healthy, strong, soldiers of self-defense. She has had a hard row to hoe for nearly five years. She deserves the better times that everybody wishes her.

THE MOTOR VEHICLE LAW.

Secretary of State HUGO, who has the power, conferred upon him by the motor vehicle law, to suspend and revoke the license of an "operator or chauffeur" for cause, is coming to this city about Feb. 1 to discuss with Magistrate HOUSE of the Traffic Court, County Judge GIBBS of the Bronx, and representatives of the automobile clubs, amendatory legislation to prevent the licensing of men with criminal records and the physically unfit as drivers of motor vehicles. In 1918 the number of persons who lost their lives in New York City "through automobile accidents" was 528, an increase of 111 as compared with the list of the previous year. In the State outside of this city 441 persons in 1918 were killed or mortally injured, 416 of them between April 1 and Dec. 31, when the roads were not snowbound, the total being a considerable increase over the figures of 1917. While the percentage of fatalities is heavily on the increase in the State of New York, it shows a marked decline in adjoining New Jersey, where a better automobile law is vigorously administered. In 1918 the number of persons killed in automobile accidents in New Jersey was 197, as compared with 245 in 1917.

Massachusetts and Connecticut, as well as New Jersey, have automobile laws that require both character and efficiency in chauffeurs and operators of motor vehicles and that facilitate suspensions and revocations for cause. The New York law in both these respects leaves much to be desired, and it needs drastic amendment. Any Magistrate of a traffic court will vouch for this statement from his experience in trying to enforce the law, and then there are these striking figures, a demonstration in themselves: Massachusetts revoked or suspended 2,300 licenses in 1918, Connecticut 1,100, New Jersey 480, and New York only 30. Obviously, the New York law is defective, or its enforcement is lax or difficult. Then it should be amended.

Secretary HUGO is coming here to confer with County Judge GIBBS and Magistrate HOUSE because they declare, and they have the evidence to support their statement, that there are drug addicts, drunkards, and criminals driving motor vehicles in this city, the number of them being alarmingly large. With the aid of the Magistrates and the advice of automobile club representatives, Mr. HUGO should overhaul New York's backward motor vehicle law and recommend necessary changes to the Legislature. Unless it is amended without fear or favor, the death list from accidents in the State will steadily mount. New York cannot afford to have an inadequate motor vehicle law: it should have at least as good a law as any State in the Union.

SONNINO.

Let us look at Baron SONNINO, twice Italian Premier, for more than four years Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, in his private hours. Even the most ardent Jugoslav, or the most ferocious anti-Sonninists of the Italian radical press or Chamber of Deputies, may see some redeeming traits in this extra-official SONNINO. Son of a Florentine Jew and an English mother, he has the calmness, the coldness, the phlegm, something of the morgue traditionally attributed on the Continent to Englishmen. He has perhaps the best private library in Rome, and he who has seen so much of men and affairs has read the books in it.

"Who can determine," asked a writer in New Europe, "the ancestry "of an intellect that examines with "equal eagerness and discusses with "equal competence the latest discoveries of BONI, the wizard of the "Forum and the Palatine, a difficult "canto of the 'Divina Commedia,' the "weak points of a budget, or a State "bank return, the internal problems, "doctrinal and administrative, of the "Roman Church, the inner tendencies "of socialism, and the logical flaws "of an astute Austro-Hungarian "diplomatic note?" SONNINO is not cold, those who know him best say, but afraid of being popular, shy, in the English way, hot inside.

Seven miles to the south of Leghorn, on a rocky headland, is his castle, named after the headland and appropriate to his habits, The Hermitage, an old Tuscan fort against the Barbary pirates. In a cave under its foundations is a sarcophagus of granite, inscribed, "SIDNEY SONNINO, 1847—." A strange man, a granite man, a man who likes to learn all things and fight difficulties.

THE EVER-HOPEFUL.

The war ended so suddenly that it is not surprising that advocates of certain lost causes whose perdition was not obvious a few months ago are still living in the land of dreams. Now comes Count KAROLYI, who was reported deposed by extreme Socialists some days ago, but was able to convince a Budapest correspondent so recently as Wednesday that he was still President of Hungary. His theme is the necessity of leaving Hungary territorially intact, that is, leaving a Slav and Latin majority under the rule, if a somewhat modified rule, of the Magyars. In view of the fact that the Slovaks, Rumanians, and Jugoslavs have already taken possession of the administration in those territories where they lived under the Magyar crown, his remarks are somewhat behind the times, but his Government is doing its best by very active propaganda in the allied countries to restore the pleasant illusions about Magyar beneficence which were current a year or so ago, and evidently hopes to save something.

"By cutting up Hungary," he says, "the Allies will not only wipe out a "people with a glorious past, who will "not forget, but will break down the "Hungarian economic system." The recent past of Magyarland is somewhat inglorious, and it might be well for Magyars to forget it as rapidly as possible. Tyranny and terrorism flourished in the land of KOSSUTH; an unwilling majority was sold into slavery to Pan-Germanism by the Magyar landed aristocracy. As to the economic system, that is a different thing. Hungary, reduced to its proper ethnographic limits, will be almost wholly agricultural; its mines and industries belong to other peoples, the peoples who inhabit territories from which the Magyars have now been driven out. What would be KAROLYI's remedy for the hatred which half a century of oppression aroused toward his people? "Autonomy which will "make these races ethnical entities "similar to the Swiss cantons," but still a part of Hungary.

The Peace Conference is certainly not going to hand back ten or twelve million people to slavery, even a mitigated slavery. And if Hungary tries by her own strength to reconquer them she will have on her hands a war with the Czechoslovaks, the Jugoslavs, and the Rumanians, who will outnumber the Magyars four to one. The great objection to autonomy, even if there were any arguments for it, is that the lately subject races do not want it and will not have it. They have won freedom and they intend to remain free.

Economic arrangements can be made which will prevent the Magyar people from suffering unduly, and a Danube confederation such as KAROLYI talks of, and such as KOSSUTH once talked of, is not an impossibility. But KAROLYI can no more bring about such a confederation by continuing Magyar oppression of Slavs and Rumanians than KOSSUTH could. His argument about economic necessity forcing the peoples of the old Hungarian Kingdom to remain together makes one wonder why the Magyars had to reinforce this self-evident economic compulsion with every brand of administrative and military terrorism.

Another wanderer in the Land of Nod is NICHOLAS of Montenegro, who, from his court in Paris, which somebody is still paying for, continues to assure the Allies that his faithful subjects are rising to his defense, and that it is really rather kind of him to beg them to remain tranquil until the Allies "afford a true opportunity "to the Montenegrin people to pro-"nounce freely on the political form "of their future Government." In view of the fact that a National Assembly, whose competence nobody but the King has questioned, some weeks ago met for the express purpose of deposing him and voting to join the United Jugoslav State, it is to be feared that NICHOLAS's solicitude is much belated.

TWO DEMOCRATS.

All persons of good-will look with a friendly eye upon the German Democratic Party, intelligent, well balanced, suggesting faintly our Whig Party brought up to date, respectable but progressive. Still, when that cynical aristocrat and letter writer, Prince MAX of Baden, sometime Chancellor, and the egregious Dr. SOLF, who bring to the new régime a more than doubtful allegiance, when this brace of Arcadians is registered in the German Democratic Party, that party needs to keep its eyes open. What are these retainers of the imperial machine doing in the new frame of Government?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A National Duty Undertaken. Too much importance could hardly be, and by many not enough importance is, ascribed to the prompt and competent performance of the tasks which are to be undertaken all over the country by the County and Community Councils of Defense. Their work is to be done under the direction or supervision of the United States National Council of Defense, and the object of it is the prompt return of demobilized soldiers and sailors to the normal activities of peace.

These millions of men are not children, of course, and a majority of them, perhaps, are quite able to take care of themselves. Even in their case, however, there are some difficulties to be overcome, for if they do not constitute a problem of unemployment, they create one by seeking and taking places that have been more or less satisfactorily filled while they were away. But in thousands and thousands of instances something more than self-help is required to effect the readjustment in industrial and commercial life of the returning soldiers and sailors. Even those of them who are in as good health as when they went away—or better—are not finding it as easy as they expected to get employment.

This is partly because, in several important trades, there is as yet little demand for workers, and partly because almost all of these men have come back with their ambitions as well as their abilities raised, and they want better jobs than they had before the war. This is an entirely commendable aspiration on their part, but as the higher positions are not as numerous as the lower, insistence on getting the former may lead to present idleness, with its attendant dangers.

Helped to Help Themselves Where the members of the County and Community Councils will have to show the most of tact and wisdom is in dealing with the many thousands of men who are returning with some degree of physical disability, due to wounds received. In very few of these cases, however, does the disability make self-support impossible if there be a judicious education and training in the use of the remaining powers. In savage life a close approach to physical perfection is necessary to existence, but civilization is kinder, both in the emphasis it places on mental abilities and in providing employments, often well paid, that are within the capacity of men who could not live for a week if out in the wilds and dependent on their own resources.

The peril for these men is that they may not realize their own possibilities as workers, and in discouragement fall into the mood of willingness to become permanent recipients of a charity which, while it will be gladly and abundantly given at first, when the memories of the war are fresh, in time will become scanty, cold, and grudging.

That is human nature, and that it should be so is not altogether regrettable, for it brings a needed pressure to bear on the men who otherwise would silence any compunctions they might feel about the acceptance of alms by telling themselves and others that their wounds entitled them to support for life. That is certainly true as regards men completely disabled, but all others, for their own sakes, should avoid, and be helped to avoid, descent into a condition from which they themselves will be the worst sufferers through moral degeneration. To save them from this is among the chief tasks confronting the councils, and that fact, fortunately, they thoroughly recognize.

Their Woes Were Self-Imposed. A Berlin statistician has figured out that 800,000 deaths resulted directly in Germany from the blockade by which the Allies prevented or restricted the importation of food into that country. The computation may be approximately correct—in the very nature of the case no more than that reasonably could be claimed for it—but if half or a quarter of the stories that have been told about the starvation of Germans were true, this estimate, indeed, surprises rather because it is so low than because it is so high.

Admitting its accuracy, what conclusion should be drawn? The Germans, of course, see in the half million victims of hunger clear proof that the Allies waged cruel and ruthless war against women and children as well as men. In its defense, naturally, the excuse of military necessity, so dear to German logicians, cannot be invoked, and perhaps it is unkind to remind those whom this record horrifies and enrages that it is a very small one compared with that of the civilian deaths caused by German aggression on other lands than their own. The temptation to do so, however, is irresistible, not because it is a sufficient exculpation of one deed to say that it is less bad than another, but merely to show that it is not for Germans to condemn a form of military coercion so much milder than those to which they themselves habitually resorted.

As an "atrocity," too, the blockade differed from—well, from others, in that international law fully justified it as a familiar expedient of war and one which no civilized nation has ever refrained from using when it could.

A Survival Strangely Demonstrated. A correspondent whose pleasure—and privilege—it is to turn his first name from "Patrick" into "Padraic" easily succeeded, in a letter printed on this page yesterday, in proving that the Gaelic language is not so "dead" that nobody uses it today as the habitual medium of daily communication. This is not a revelation that will be really or much startling to many, it being too well known by almost everybody to be, or to have been, denied with any chance of success.

Between dead and dying languages, however—that is, between those long since unspoken and those that precariously linger, awaiting their certain extinction—the difference, for practical purposes, is so small that its occasional ignoring is not without an explanation that goes far toward justification.

THE TIMES correspondent, curiously enough, attempted to emphasize this difference, and to enlarge it, by mentioning the fact that many children in many Irish schools devote daily a part of their study time to learning their country's ancient tongue. As proof that Gaelic is still a living language that does go a long way—in the opposite direction. So far as can be recalled, languages in regard to whose animation there is no question are not so taught, anywhere—never have been and never will be.

MR. HARDING MISQUOTED.

The Senator Said: "The War Will Be in Vain if We Do Go Back to Old Conditions."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reporting some remarks by me in the Senate in your issue of Jan. 22, you quote me as saying, "The war will be in vain if we do not go back to old conditions." This is the very opposite of what I said. Literally I said, "The war will be in vain if we do go back." See Record, also other newspaper reports. I assume it was a reportorial or typographical slip. I am sure THE TIMES would not intentionally make such an error.

The Kaiser 15 Years Ago.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I inclose herewith copy of an article which was received by a friend of mine from London and which appeared in The London Daily Dispatch, Aug. 19, 1914. My curiosity, however, is aroused by so true a prediction apparently having been published in some paper in this country fifteen years ago. It would, therefore, be considered an extreme courtesy to the writer if you could find it possible to trace the publication which this poem appeared in originally, and who the author is.

GERMAN EMPEROR.

Oh Me!
Oh My!!
And likewise I!!!
Sit still, my curls, while I orate,
Me, I, Myself, the Throne, the State,
I am the earth, the moon, the sun,
All rolled in one!

Both hemispheres am I,
Oh My!
If there were three, the Three
I'd be.

I am the Dipper, Night and Day,
The North and Southern Poles, the Milky Way.
I am they that walk or fly on wing,
Or swim or creep—I'm everything.

It makes me tremble like the aspen tree,
To think I'm Me!
And blink like stars up in the sky
To think I'm I—
And shrink in terror like a frightened elf
To realize that I'm Myself.

Ye blithering slaves beneath my iron heel,
What know ye of the things I feel?
Didst ever wake at dead of night,
And stand in awe of thine own might?

It took six days to make the land and sea,
But centuries were passed in making Me,
The Universe? an easy task! but I—
Oh My!!

All This Must Be Changed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The following is taken from Paragraph 31, United States Navy Deck and Boat Book. This article deals with articles to be assigned to each lifeboat on board a ship of the navy and gives among such things as quinine pills, bicarbonate of soda, &c., "one bottle of whisky." I might add that if any of our far-seeing "dry" men ever had to pass the night on the ocean in the Winter in an open boat, half full of water, perhaps his ideas concerning prohibition might change, temporarily at least.

THE NEXT LIBERTY BONDS.

Advantages to Government and Investors if Tax Free.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The prices realized for Liberty Loan bonds at the Stock Exchange yesterday were:

First 3½s	98.80 to 99.50
Second 4s	92.10 to 92.30
Third 4¼s	95.94 to 96.10
Fourth 4¼s	94.96 to 95.12

The stability of the 3½s is due to the income therefrom being nontaxable. The relatively low prices of the subsequent issues is due to the Government having reserved to itself the right to tax the income derived from those bonds without limit; that is, if Congress shall so decree, to the extent of the whole of such income.

Congress is considering a new Revenue bill, which will certainly not lessen the income tax to those who pay it, although it may add to the already numerous classes of exempts.

The Secretary of the Treasury last week told the New York bankers very plainly that the Fifth Liberty Loan is to be for $5,000,000,000 or $6,000,000,000, and may bear a higher rate of interest than 4¼ per cent.

Six billions of 4½ per cent. bonds will entail an annual interest charge of $270,000,000, which is $60,000,000 more than the $210,000,000 payable on a like amount of nontaxable 3½s. That difference in interest charge, $60,000,000, amounts to more than one-fifth (to be exact; 22.22 per cent.) of the $270,000,000. Can the Government under the present law, or any conceivable law, collect as income tax that much of the interest promised on the faith of the United States to be paid?

To take a particular instance, the holder of $5,000,000 of 4½s would receive an income of $225,000, and, having no other taxable income, would under the present graduated income tax pay in respect thereto $50,318.75. Without considering the cost of disbursement or of collection, this would barely repay to the Treasury the difference of $50,000 between 4½ per cent. and 3½ per cent. on $5,000,000.
